It has been found impossible to remove her. The old lady is of a truculent spirit, and is powerful as well as heavy. It required the efforts of six strong men to get her as far as the door, and then it was discovered that she could not go through. She was too large for that. The question of demolishing a house in order to make an arrest for selling liquor illegally was a delicate one, and could not be decided on the spot.

Betsy returned to her great wooden chair in triumph, having defied the authority of the United States, at which she jeered.

It is several years since Betsy grew too large to get through the door. She has lived hitherto contentedly in her little hut, with a big chair and a big jug, but recently a desire for social relaxation awoke in her. She said she would like to attend a large dance which was to be given at Sneedville, a village six miles from her mountain home. Obviously, it was no light matter to move Betsy Mullins. Her neighbors built a sort of railway to facilitate her progress down the mountain. The side of Betsy's house was taken out, she was hauled, with assistance, to the specially constructed car, in which she was loaded. Then with a very stout cable and a windlass, worked by strong hands, she was lowered down the mountain and on to the dance.—New York Journal.

METROPOLITAN STAGE JOKES.

Fan Tan—You would if I had it.

Jesso—Under what unlucky star were you born?

Fan Tan—Probably the lodestar.

"I have twin brothers; one is twenty and the other is twenty-two," says Smith to Campbell at Tony Pastor's.

"How can twins be different ages?"

"They're not different. One is twenty and the other is twenty, too."

Of the many new shows in town, "The Mandarin" has the merriest jests. I quote a few:

Wun Wing—We'll have one more drink and then go home.

Fan Tan—Thank you, but I couldn't do both.

Aubrey Boucicault, in his sketch at Keith's, has many jokes which are, however, allied to the comedy. Strange to say, the one "outsider" which raises the best has this familiar ring:

Helene Powell—Why don't you take something for your cough?

Boucicault—I took everything for it even a cable car. Now I have the grip.

Al. Wilson, the German comedian, has a hunting story of the Munchausen type.

"One cold day last Winter I went tiger hunting in New Jersey. After a long search I found one in a tree and was about to shoot when I found I had left my bullet pouch at home. The tiger was about to spring upon me and the helplessness of my situation started me perspiring profusely. The sweat on my forehead froze in lumps and I broke off two or three, rammed them in the gun and, aiming between the tiger's eyes, fired. The heat of the gun melted the ice bullets, but my aim was so true that the tiger was killed by water on the brain."

A Bargain on Won a Horse.

A tramp appeared at the house of J. H. Barton, three miles south of Columbia, Mo., the other day, and asked for cold victuals in Greek. He stated that he was a graduate of Princeton. Mr. Burton, himself a Greek scholar, was just about to start for Columbia, and his horse was hitched in front of the house.

Jestingly he offered to give the tramp the horse if he could recite the Greek alphabet without a mistake. The tramp looked at the horse and then at Mr. Barton, and then inquired if the bet included the saddle and bridle. Mr. Barton said that it did, and went into the house to get a Greek book.

Returning he found the tramp had mounted the horse. As Mr. Burton stepped from the porch the tramp rattled off the alphabet without a mistake, and turning the horse's head, disappeared in a cloud of dust. The animal on which the Princeton pilgrim rode away was one of the best saddle horses in Boone County, noted for its blooded stock.—Philadelphia Press.

He Was Very Observing.

At a lunatic asylum an inmate was found wheeling a barrow upside down between a new wing and a stack of bricks. A visitor took the barrow, and turning it right side up, said, "This is the proper way." Reply: "Ah, that's a' ye ken. When I try it that way they fill it fu' o' bricks."

The dairy industry of Iowa continues to grow. There are now 1,002 creameries in the state, against 954 in 1897 and 851 in 1896.

The quickest trip ever made from the Cape in South Africa to Southampton was by the Carisbrook Castle in 15 days and one hour.

As ministries go, the new French cabinet may be almost called a ministry of youth. M. de Freycinet is its only old—or elderly—member, his age being 70. Next in age come M. Lockroy, who is 56; M. Peytral, who is 55; M. Viger, 54; M. Guillain, 54; M. Delombre, 50; M. Dupuy, 47; M. Leygues, 46; M. Deleasse, 46; M. Lebret, 45, and M. Krantz, who is a mere youth of four.—London Chronicle.

Lieutenant-Colonel F. W. Kitchener, a brother of the Sirdar, who has been appointed governor of Khartoum, served in the Afghan war of 1878-80 as transport officer to the Cabul field force, and was present in the advance on Cabul under General Roberts. He also served with the Dongola expedition, under Sir Herbert Kitchener, in 1896, as director of transport, including the engagement at Firket and the operations at Hafir.

A London magician, who has given entertainments many years at Egyptian hall, kept up an offer of $2,500 reward for a duplicate of his box, which a man gets in and out of mysteriously. A clever mechanic solved the problem and demanded the money, but Maskelyne refused to pay, as he claimed that, though this box did the work of his the mechanism was different. He would not disclose his own in court, however, and the jury rendered a verdict against him.

The Neue Wiener Tagblatt states that the dungeon in which Luccheni, the assassin of the Empress Elizabeth, is now confined has no windows, its walls are of cold, generally damp, stone, its floors of stone, its ceiling of stone, and that Luccheni will probably pay for his crime by the loss of his eyesight and his reason. Only once in a fortnight is he permitted to walk in the prison court-yard for half an hour. He does not even see the attendants who bring him his daily rations at 6 o'clock every morning, and pass them through an opening over the iron door which closes the dungeon.

Our Constantinople correspondent writes, under date of November 12: "The Turkish newspaper Sahab was seized yesterday and its publication suspended because it contained the phrase 'that wicked Padishah.' The editor explains that his offence is wholly due to an untoward accident. The intention had been to say 'majestic Padishah,' but the compositor carelessly pushed the two preceding letters up to the final waw, thus transforming the word which means 'majestic' into 'that wicked.' It remains to be seen whether this explanation will be found acceptable to the eyes of the offended sovereign."—London Times.

QUEER ADVERTISEMENTS

An advertisement once appeared in a Washington paper for "a room for a young man 10 by 12.

"No person," wrote an imaginative undertaker, "ever having tried one of these air-tight coffins of ours will ever use any other," says an exchange.

This is an advertisement from the columns of an English court journal: "Blankets! Blankets! Blankets! For domestic and charitable purposes of every description, quality, size and weight."

The following advertisement is from an Australian paper: "Wanted, a young woman (the plainer the better), to help a small, genteel family in their domestic matters! one without ringlets preferred."

An American paper published in Paris recently contained the following unique advertisement: "A young man of agreeable presence, and desirous of getting married, would like to make the acquaintance of an aged and experienced gentleman who could dissuade him from taking the fatal step."

SOME BEAR STORIES.

"Ye didn't never see a b'ar hunt a bee tree did ye? Tha ain't no bee hunter ez ever burnt honey in the woods ez kin tetch one side of a b'ar ferretin' out a bee tree when he wunst gets the tree lined. When a b'ar gets on the track o' the bee the honey that's in its tree is jest ez sure his'n ez it is that the honey's in the tree, and he'll hev it if he has to foller the line fer half a day. Ez soon ez he comes to the tree he begins to shin up the trunk, lookin' fer the place where the honey is. Ev'ry few foot he'll stop an' whack the tree with one of his paws, 'cause he kin tell by the sound jist where that honey is stored. When he finds the spot ye jist orter see that b'ar! He scratches and he paws an' he gnashes at the tree ez if he had a gredge agin it that nothin' could ever let him git even with it fer, an' 'fore long he's got a hole big enough to cram one of his paws inter. An' then mebbe he ain't 'bout ez happy ez they make 'em'! He sops the honey out with his paw, an' licks it off an' smacks his lips ez proper ez a gal at a 'lasses candy pullin'. The bees buzz around, an' dip him with their stingers, but he jist shets his eyes and larfs. A bee sting on a b'ar is jist like a 'skeeter tryin' ter raise a lump on a rhinocerous. The b'ar never lets up on a tree till he's scraped it ez clean ez a hound pup kin lick a skillet.

"It'd make ye lay down an' roar if ye could see a passel o' b'ar goin' through a scrub oak patch wunst. When they go inter a patch so hev a squar' meal they git it ready by raisin' on their hind feet an' crashin' an' thrashin' the acorns offen the bushes with their forepaws. In less 'n no time they'll make a scrub oak patch look ez if a mowin' machine had been run through it. When the b'ar has thrashed down enough o' the scrub to give him what he thinks'll pan out enough acorns fer his dinner, he'll gobble 'em up like a young un will sugar plums. When we go out lookin' fer sign o' b'ar in the fall, we allus size up our chances fer the season by the way the scrub oaks is thrashed down.

"Another thing that's better to me than a nigger show fer makin' me howl an' hold my sides is to see some cunnin' ol' b'ar sparrin' with a lot o' yaller jackets. Ye know what them is, don't ye? They'm about the hottest-footed critters fer their size that is in the hull bee family. They ginerly hev their nests in the ground, an' a b'ar can't go by one of 'em unless he digs it up. Then he has the hell durn swarm of 'em tumblin' out an' pitchin' inter him in less 'n a pig's whisper. That seems to be his little game, fer he'll raise up on his ha'nches an' clip one here, an' another un there, and all the time his mouth is open, jest ez if he were laughin' at the way the yaller jackets ain't a-worryin' of him a bit, and knows blame well that he is everlastin'ly rilin' them. Sometimes he'll set still an' let the hull swarm settle on him till he looks ez yeller ez a dandyline patch, an' then all of a sudden he'll drop an' roll over an' over, ez if he were havin' more fun than a passel o' boys in swimmin'.

"But the boss fun a b'ar has is waller holes. B'ars lives a good part o' the time in the swamps, an' long in the summer time they come out an' dig holes in the muck along the edges o' the swamps. They bury themselfs in these holes all but their noses, but every little while they'll slosh around, an' the soft mud an' the black water'll hist up around 'em like a volcano, an' they'll snort an' kick an' tumble by the hour. More'n wunst I've gone out to watch a waller hole fer to put a ball inter one o' these carousin' b'ars, but arter watchin' him and larfin at his capers fer an' hour an' better I've jist got up an' dug fer home an' left him a circusin'."

He Played With the Leopard.

A young man who disregarded the rules of the menagerie in Central Park not to annoy or play with animals was badly scared the other day. He stood in front of the leopard cage in the animal house, and, taking off his golf cap, began to shake it in front of a young leopard.

The leopard reached out his paw and seized the cap and at the same time buried his claws in the young man's coat sleeve, tearing a piece out. The leopard carried the golf cap into his cage, where he tore it in pieces. One of the attendants in the animal house gave the young man an old hat, and he left without leaving his name.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

The woman who says she has the most confidence in her husband is generally the most anxious to know everything he does.

A man always gives himself away when he is on his wedding tour by trying to act as though it bored him to tuck in his wife's sleeves.—New York Press.

THE GREAT INDOOR GAME

WHAT IS GOING ON IN LOCAL BASKET BALL CIRCLES.

Happenings of Interest to Plainfield Enthusiasts—What the Local Teams are Doing—Gossip Among the Players.

The date for the game with the team from the School of Mines of Columbia College in the local gymnasium has been set for March 27th. The mining engineers play a good game and promise to make an interesting contest.

The victory of the Plainfield High School girls over the girls' team from the Montclair High School places the Plainfield team well up in the list. The Montclair girls defeated their rivals from Pratt Institute by a score of 19 to 2. It is too early to make any claims as yet, but if the local team follows in the path that it has already started, it will not be long before it will have a good right to aspire to the championship of the State.

The basket ball teams of the Plainfield and Summit Y. M. C. A.'s will meet Monday evening in the former's gymnasium for the second game of the season. The game is called for 8:15 o'clock. The first meeting resulted in an easy victory for Plainfield. That game was played at Summit. Summit promised to turn the tables when that team came here. As the seating capacity of the visitors' gallery is limited, those who wish a seat are advised to go early.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was—Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at L. W. THE AMUSEMENT WORLD

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The patrons of Music Hall have a genuine treat in store next Tuesday evening when Frank Sheridan and Arthur Larkin, with a company of popular comedians, will introduce "His Better Half," a brilliant farcical comedy somewhat after the style of "Charley's Aunt." Almost every line bristles and brims over with laughter. The situations and complications must be seen as no ordinary descriptive power can convey what a joyous entertainment this talented organization provides in "His Better Half." It is simply three acts of unadulterated and continuous laughter, and the spectator who sits through a performance of the comedy is assured of a new lease on a happier life.

"A Ragtime Reception" is the catchy title of a rollicking, jingling farce-comedy that will be seen at Music Hall next Thursday night. It is said to be a great merrymaker and a positive cure for dull care.

It is the Father Who is the Candidate.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Will you kindly publish in your columns the following: That the idea entertained by several persons that I am a candidate for councilmanic honors, may be corrected? I would say that the "Robert Clark Jr." who is one of the nominees of the Republican party, is my father, that the suffix "Jr." appended to his name is resorted to by him to distinguish him from his father, whose Christian name was "Robert" and whose demise is of recent date.

Yours very truly,
Robert M. Clark.

The greatest sale of spring and summer CLOTHING

IN PLAINFIELD'S HISTORY.

This advertisement tells of the greatest event ever known. We have purchased the entire stocks of Messrs. Woodhull, Goodale & Bull, of Syracuse, and Quiri & Wilkie, of Amsterdam, N. Y., at a spot cash price, so very much below the real value of the merchandise that a statement of the exact figures would seem marvelous. A great many retail dealers would gladly take this fine stock of clothing off our hands at a good round profit if we desired to sell that way. But having acquired this $15,000 stock at such a ridiculously low figure, we wish to use it to introduce ourselves with our first sale of the season. On account of the way which we have purchased this stock, we will tomorrow and throughout this great sale offer many goods at less than half and less than one-third their usual value.

Every suit made and every overcoat and every pair of trousers being ruthlessly cut regardless of the cost or the present regular value of the goods. We don't wish to impose upon your credulity; these are facts, and we want you to understand now and always that every word in our advertisements can be depended upon if we promise you one dollar's worth of clothing for thirty or forty cents you can be sure you can get it. On account of the way in which we have purchased the stock, we will make this one of the most sensational events ever witnessed.

There can be no competition. No sales of any character that may be introduced to offset this great sale should be considered. We nor any other clothing concern could make such low prices if goods had been purchased in the regular way. Our values will be positively unmatched.

The stock of clothing is of the very best and up-to-date in style. The firms have manufactured the finest clothing in the United States. Every garment is made for this season's trade, the fit is guaranteed. Below we will quote a few of the prices, and there will be thousands of more bargains just as cheap and just as good ready tomorrow morning. It is of a great interest to you to be there as early as you conveniently can. Sale begins Saturday, March 11, 1899, at 8 a. m. sharp. If you are not satisfied with your purchase, you can get your money back.

JEALOUSY AMONGST THE LOCAL JEHUS.

Many Trials in City Court are the Results.

HARD TO CONVICT ANYONE.

HACKMEN ARE THE USUAL COMPLAINTANTS AGAINST EACH OTHER.

Circumstances of the Latest Trouble Between Keely and Barry—Barry Claims Keeley Took Away a Passenger Intended for Barry's Hack—Keely's Defence—Barry Did Not Appeal for Trial.

There is a never ceasing jealousy among the hackmen who congregate about the North Avenue station that occasionally breaks forth into open warfare. The records of the police court show cases innumerable in which one hackman after another has been haled before the City Judge, usually on complaint of one of his own fraternity, to answer the charge of violating the hack ordinance of the city.

Saturday saw John Keely, one of the hackmen arraigned before City Judge Runyon, and but for the non-appearance of the complaintant, Charles Barry, a hackman, there would have been a repetition of former trials.

John Keely and his father, Patrick Keely, conduct a hack and livery business. They have a number of hacks and do a big business. As much of their trade is among their regular customers, young Keeley remains at the station most of time, calling up the hacks for the regular customers and looking generally after their welfare. Many of the other hackmen don't like it.

Now it is one of the provisions of the city hack ordinance that there shall be no soliciting of trade within a certain distance of the entrance to the station. Of course, Keely is way inside of that, but he claims he does not solicit trade there but merely looks after his regular customers. Some of his rivals dispute that statement.

The incident that led to Barry's complaint against Keely occurred a few days ago. The wife of a well-known Plainfielder came down the steps. Barry says that she called to him and that when he started to drive up Keely bundled her off into one of the latter's hacks.

Keely claims that the Plainfielder in question was one of his regular customers and had a receipted bill, just about to be sent, and a letter from the man to that effect, as proof. Owing to Barry's non-appearance the case case did not come to trial, however.

The police have considerable trouble in securing reliable evidence against any offenders, owing to the jealousy that exists, and is inclined to bias much of the testimony. There have been many of these "hackmen" trials, and there promises to be many more until something is done to stop the trouble.

NOT A DRY ADDRESS.

Bright, Interesting Sermon Delivered on Domestic Missions.

Rev. Dr. Poole, of Somerville, secretary of the Domestic Board of Missions, Reformed church of America, delivered a stirring address to a large congregation in Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning, by invitation of the pastor, Dr. Schenck, with a view of stimulating interest in the cause. Dr. Poole has many warm friends in Plainfield and his address was greatly enjoyed by all, because of the fact that it was not a dry talk on missions, as is often the case with speakers, but on the contrary was full of earnest convincing arguments for more interest and larger gifts for the cause of domestic missions.

Wouldn't Vote to Pay Hangman's Bill.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Jersey City, March 13.—At the meeting of the Hudson county Board of Freeholders on Thursday evening the auditing committee submitted a favorable report on a batch of claims, with a resolution that they be ordered paid. Among them was the bill of Hangman VanHise for $250 for the execution of Murderer William Reid. Freeholder William Kelly, of Bayonne, requested that VanHise's claim be separated from the others. He explained that he was opposed to capital punishment, and his conscience would not permit him to vote for the hangman's bill. The claims were not separated, and Mr. Kelly voted against their payment.

Forty Hours Devotion

Yesterday morning at the local Catholic churches the forty hours devotion commenced. It will continue until tomorrow morning, during which time special priests will be in attendance.

SWUNG CLUBS FOR PRIZE

There Were Only Three Who Took Part in the Contest—Edgar Sheppard Was Winner With 26 Points Out of 30.

There were only three contestants who showed up for the open Indian club swinging contest in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday evening. While most of the athletic members can swing the clubs after a fashion, there are only very few who have made any study of the moves with the clubs. Edgar Sheppard carried off the honors in the contest, showing the most originality in the moves and the best general skill in handling the clubs.

The visitors' gallery was filled with those who had come to witness the contest. They only found entertainment for half an hour as the contest was very short. It opened with a drill in which the three contestants and the other members of the evening class went through the regular class drill with the clubs.

Those who entered the contest were Edgar Sheppard, Eric Moralier and Herbert Brokaw. After the drill in which they all did equally well, they took turns in going through a combination of moves for periods of a minute each. There were two rounds. Sheppard had many original moves and made a good showing. The others, while they handled the clubs well, used the class moves to a large extent.

There was a possible 30 points to score. Sheppard was given first place, scoring 26, Moralier second with 23, and Brokaw third with 22 points. Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood acted as judge. The winner will receive a pair of fancy Indian clubs which will be presented at the end of the season.

GAVE BONDS TO KEEP THE PEACE.

New Market, March 13.—Mrs. Sofield, of South Plainfield, made two complaints against Sarah and Mabel Arrowsmith, neighbors of hers, before Justice Storms early this month, and Saturday afternoon they were given a trial. The complaint alleged that the two little girls, aged twelve and fourteen, had called her vile names and thrown a brick at her March 1st.

Mrs. Soper, also a neighbor, made a similar charge against the children, claiming that they had treated her the same way as they had treated Mrs. Sofield. Mrs. Arrowsmith made a countercharge against Mrs. Sofield, so it was quite a neighborly snarl that Justice Storms had to unravel.

But his decision was that the children were guilty of both charges, and so fined them $1 each and costs, and held them in $100 bail to keep the peace. The charge against Mrs. Sofield was dismissed. W. S. Angleman, of Plainfield, represented her.

RURAL SIMPLICITY.

Expiring Council Leaves Granting of a Franchise to Its Successor.

Roselle, March 11—The Borough Council of this place did not take any action on the application of the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company trolley franchise Thursday evening. The meeting was called especially for that purpose, but the Council preferred to lay the matter over until after election, at which time the new Board of Aldermen will settle the matter. Col. E W. Hine and Representative A. A. Gaddis were in town and attended the meeting.

The application will come up before the new Council, which will meet Friday evening next. Just as soon as the railway company can secure a franchise from Roselle, the line from Plainfield to Elizabeth will be complete.

In the Postal Service.

One week from tomorrow the annual school meeting will be held in the borough at which time five members of the Board of Education will be elected. There promises to be a lively time.

CONDUCTOR HUDNUT INSTANTLY KILLED.

Leaning Out of a Car and Struck by Bridge Support.

HEAD TERRIBLY CRUSHED.

BODY ALSO THROWN UNDER CARS AND BOTH LEGS CUT OFF.

The Conductor Was Watching a Hot Box on the Car When His Head Came in Contact With the Bridge Supports—One of the Most Popular Employes on the Road—Lived in Philadelphia

Bayonne, N. J., March 13.—A sad accident occurred on the Central Railroad of New Jersey this morning at 6:45 o'clock, just east of the West Eighth street station in which Samuel Hudnut, 40 years old, of Philadelphia, a conductor on the Pennsylvania & Reading, lost his life. He was standing on the steps of one of the cars of the emigrant train, with his body swinging out from the coach, looking at a hot box, when he was dashed against a huge iron girder which supports a bridge overhead, and instantly killed. His head was crushed, and both legs were cut off after being thrown from the platform and falling under the car wheels.

Hudnut was one of the most popular conductors on the road. He has run the 7:45 a. m. Philadelphia train from New York every day since November 20th, when it was put on. He left his home in Philadelphia this morning to go to Jersey City to take his run, and was almost there when the accident occurred. Just east of West Eighth Street is this broad bridge with pillars between each of the four tracks. It is just beyond a sharp curve, and is not readily seen until the train is right upon it.

Hudnut's remains were picked up and carried to Jersey City, and then sent home later in the day. He was married and leaves a wife and three children.

BOOKKEEPER WAS DISHONEST.

That Prevented R. H. McCullough From Swearing Positively.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, March 13—Justice Storms last Saturday gave judgment for $27.58 against Mrs. Fitzgerald, now of Perth Amboy, but formerly of South Plainfield, in a suit brought against her by R. H. McCullough, of North Plainfield. McCullough's claim was for $77.58. Mrs. Fitzgerald acknowledged an indebtedness of $27.58, but disputed the balance, claiming that she had paid $50 on account.

McCullough said on the stand that a former bookkeeper of his had proved dishonest, and, therefore, he could not swear to the correctness of his books. Judgment was, therefore, given only for the sum acknowledged. J. P. D. Kirch, of Plainfield, represented the plaintiff, and W. S. Angleman, also of that place, was Mrs. Fitzgerald's lawyer.

Not Clear Sailing After All

The Citizens' ticket nominated in North Plainfield township last Thursday night is not going to have clear sailing after all. Saturday afternoon an Independent ticket appeared in the field. The only difference in the two tickets is that A. C. Johnson is running for Assessor on the Independent ticket in place of W. H. Morris on the Citizens' ticket, and Goldstein Smalley is named for Commissioner of Appeal against Stephen Beeching on the Citizens' ticket.

Of a Musical Nature.

An entertainment will be given at the Park Avenue Baptist church on the evening of March 28th, at which time the Metronome Banjo and Mandolin Club, assisted by Miss Marion Show, of New York, will entertain. The club is holding frequent rehearsals for the event.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward, of Elizabeth, have leased the house on Fairview avenue, formerly occupied and owned by the late E. E. Marshall, and they will take possession April 1st. Mrs. Ward is the contralto soloist at the First Baptist church.

A Voice From the Far East.

Progressive Euchre the Attraction.

At the Park Club tomorrow night progressive euchre will be the attraction for the regular Tuesday evening club night.

THIEF WANTED TO BE DRESSED IN FASHION

So he Carried Off a Dress Suit and Fifty Neckties.

A DUNELLEN ROBBERY.

R. H. BATCHELOR OFFERS $25 REWARD FOR ARREST OF THIEF.

During the Absence of His Family From Home the Robbery Was Committed—Mr. Batchelor's Wardrobe Sadly Depleted by the Visit of the Intruder—Silverware Also Stolen.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, March 13—R. Horton Batchelor, of West Dunellen, has just made known the fact that some time during the family's absence from home last week his house was broken into and articles of clothing and silverware taken. Mr. Batchelor has offered a reward of $25 for the arrest and conviction of the burglars, and has posted notices to that effect in all the public places.

Mr. Batchelor is a New York business man, and goes to the city every day. Last week the entire family were away for several days, and during that time the burglary was committed. On their return the family found the house upside down, drawers open, closets disturbed, and the contents strewn all over the house. An inventory of the missing articles was hastily made, and Mr. Batchelor finds that the burglars took a dress suit, a Prince Albert coat, a cutaway coat, vests, odd trousers, shoes, linen, shirts a lady's black silk waist, silver knives, forks and spoons, 50 neckties of various kinds, four in hands, ascots, puff-ties, bows, etc., a bath robe, beside other little things.

Mr. Batchelor said that he has 100 neckties, but the burglars evidently overhauled the stock in hand and selected those that suited them best. It is thought that the guilty parties are tramps, a great many of whom frequent the vicinity of the tanks, where the house is located, but others think that it is not necessary to go far from Dunellen to find the burglars. What tramps would find to do with a full dress suit and a bath robe Mr. Batchelor finds it hard to say, and as for their changing their necktie every day so as to wear each of the fifty in turn, it is impossible to believe.

CRUEL PARENTS.

Deserted a Two Weeks' Old Child at the Approach of Winter.

Chief Grant went to Middleton Saturday and arrested Willard Bassie, colored, who is wanted for deserting a two weeks' old child last fall. Bassie's employer gave bonds for the man's appearance in the city court March 20th.

Bassie and his wife lived on Cottage place at the time the baby was born, in the house with Mrs. Coleman. One night Bassie disappeared, and was not seen again, and a few days afterwards the woman followed his example. The baby boy was left with Mrs. Coleman who has been taking care of it ever since.

A few days ago Chief Grant got track of Bassie, and a warrant was sworn out for his arrest. If convicted of deserting the child he will have to furnish bonds to pay so much a week or month for the little one's support.

Organists On Trial.

Yesterday morning and evening at the First Presbyterian church Mr. Zim, of New York, a graduate of the Conservatory of Music, Paris, officiated at the organ on trial. His playing was much enjoyed. Next Sunday Mr. Bender, of New York, a young man under twenty-one years of age, will play on trial. Mr. Bender is spoken of in the highest terms.

Bold Burglars.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, March 13—When Mrs Ann Miller, of Central avenue, returned to her home today after being absent on a visit for several days, she found that the house had been ransacked and depleated of a large number of valuables by burglars. The burglars had also been bold enough to sleep in the bed. The loss by the robbery amounts to $200.

Elston Leonard Critically Ill.

Officers to be Chosen

There will be a special meeting of the shareholders of the Home Building and Loan Association one week from tonight to nominate officers and directors and to give notice of any amendments to the constitution.

ROSELLE HAS WON JOURNAL TROPHY.

The Parks Finished Second in Bowling League.

ELIZABETH FINISHED THIRD.

CONTEST IN LEAGUE WAS UNUSUALLY CLOSE THIS SEASON.

Trophy Now Becomes Permanent Property of the Roselle Casino Team, They Having Won It Three Times—The Park Club will Receive a $20 Trophy or Banner—Parks won Second by Small Margin.

The contest in the Central Journal Bowling League has been completed and the team from the Roselle Casino has now become the permanent owner of the trophy offered by the Elizabeth Journal, winning this year for the third time. The Park Club made a plucky fight for first place until the last few weeks of the tournament and then lost several games by low scores, victories in which would have set the Plainfield bowlers at the front. The effort landed the Parks in second place, however.

The season, which is now at an end, has been a very successful one. Up to the very last, it was impossible to tell in what order the clubs would finish. The Roselle Casinos and the Parks fought hard for first place and were tied for a time. Elizabeth astonished everybody by a strong windup, threatening Roselle and the Parks for first and second place. There was just the difference of one game to put Elizabeth down to third.

Westfield made a good showing and then tumbled down. Westfield fell further than the Parks did and landed in fourth place, the Newark Bay Boat Club tieing the W. A. C. for the place. The New Jersey Athletic Club wasn't far behind while the poor Cranford Country Club team was hopelessly in the rear.

Roselle gets the Journal trophy while the Parks will receive the $20 trophy or banner, as they wish, for second place.

The final result of the league is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	Highest Score.
Roselle	25	11	904
Park	24	14	905
Elizabeth	21	15	911
Newark Bay C. C.	18	18	955
Westfield	18	18	915
N. J. A. C.	16	20	944
Cranford Casino	6	30	811

GOODS WEREN'T SHIPPED.

An Absconding Debtor's Goods Attached at Freight House.

Two writs of attachment have been issued from Justice Nash's court against Mrs. Nancy Purviance, of 132 Crescent avenue. The first one was issued Saturday night for R. O. Howell, the grocer, who has a claim of about $50 for groceries bought. This was served by Constable Amos Moffett, just before the goods were shipped away from the freight house. The second one was sworn out by Boice, Runyon & Co., and was served this morning by Constable Mattox Judgment Rendered.

Judgment was rendered this morning by Justice Mosher in the case of the Building and Loan Association, of Plainfield, against David Bowden, who owes $96 rent for the house he is living in on Grant avenue. Bowden was in court but made no defense, admitting the debt and promising to pay it as soon as possible.

Secured $50 More Than Needed.

Yesterday was debt raising day in the Park Avenue Baptist church, and at the morning service $750 was pledged to make up a deficiency of $700 which the treasurer estimated would be needed at the end of the fiscal year. The amount was pledged in sums of $50, $25, $5 and even less.

DOWN ON THE MAYOR

R. J. SWACKHAMER NOMINATED TO DEFEAT HIS RE-ELECTION.

Opposition Got Together in a Primary Held Saturday Night—Former Postmaster Staats Named for Freeholder.

Dunellen, March 13—After a continuous service of thirteen years as the Mayor of Dunellen, Dr. P. M Brakely, who is now candidate for re-election on the Citizens' ticket, is threatened with defeat by the action of a People's primary held Saturday evening, when R. J. Swackhamer, a Democrat, and one of the borough's prominent citizens, was nominated to oppose the election of Mr. Brakely.

The opposition to Mayor Brakely is due to the manner in which the borough officers have acted in the acquiring of several public improvements recently. There are a large number of residents of Dunellen who, recognizing that they are but a suburban part of Plainfield, claim that the public improvements of this city should be extended to their precincts whenever it is practicable and possible. But Mayor Brakely and his administration has dealt rather harshly with Plainfield enterprises in the past and as a result the town is claimed to have very poor electric light, trolley and water service. If elected, Mr. Swackhamer will stand for a more liberal treatment of companies that will give Dunellen a better service in commodities to be secured through public franchises.

For freeholder former Postmaster Peter Staats, another Democrat, was named to oppose Firman Glee. The rest of the nominations of the Citizens' primary were endorsed.

PLEASANT AFFAIR TO INTRODUCE A FIANCEE.

MISS HALL ACTED AS THE HOST.

Miss Thompson, Who is Engaged to Charles Prescott Hall, Was the Guest of Honor.

A pleasant but rather informal tea was given Saturday afternoon by Miss Coroline Minturn Hall, of Madison avenue, to introduce Miss Thompson, of Sing Sing, her brother's, Samuel Prescott Hall, fiancee. There were about fifty guests present, mostly of the younger set, who found Miss Thompson a charming young lady, who will be an agreeable addition to Plainfield society.

Miss Hall and Miss Thompson received and were assisted by the hostess' mother, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Miss Marjorie Swan, of Brooklyn, Miss Edith Negley, Miss Bessie Ginna, Miss Wickersham and Miss McCrady.

Mrs. John Doull Miller and Miss Elizabeth Stewart poured.

The decorations were of green, consisting of smilax and maiden hair ferns. After the tea the out-of-town guests were entertained at dinner.

Among the guests were Mrs. Eugene Hatch, Miss Talmage, Miss Daisy Sheppard, the Misses McAllister, of Elizabeth, Mrs B L. Dodd and daughter, of Newark, Mrs. Walter Longman, the Misses Tracy, Miss Erskine, Miss VanBoskerk, Miss Clapp, Miss Anna Miller, Miss Halloway, DeLaRoche Francis, of Philadelphia, Mr. Turrill, Samuel Prescott Hall and David Prescott Hall.

CHARITY SUBJECTS.

Important Public Meeting of Organized Aid Association Tonight

The Organized Aid Association will hold the last regular public meeting of the season tonight at 8 o'clock in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The programme includes excellent music, vocal and instrumental music; an address by W. I. Nicholl, of the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, on "The Practical Benefits of Organization Work as Tested by Experience;" and a brief paper on the Conference of Charities and Corrections held in New York in 1898 by the delegate of the association, Howard P. Reynolds, an occasion of remarkable interest and indicative of an active study of social problems throughout the world.

It is earnestly hoped that the meeting will be largely attended, as being, in a way a general report of the association to its constituency. No collection.

Y. M. C. A. Debating Society.

Several of the members of the Y. M. C. A. have been planning to organize a debating society among the association members this winter, but so far have done nothing about it. A meeting has been called for Thursday evening, March 23d, however, when a society will be organized. This year it will be nothing more than an old-fashioned debating society, but it may develop into something else by another year.

BATTLE FOR VOTES THE "HOTTEST EVER."

BETTING FAVORS WILSON.

MANY POLITICANS BACK OPINIONS WITH MONEY.

Candidate Smalley and His Friends Are Doing Their Utmost to Get Enough Votes to Bring Victory to the Republican Ticket—Democrats Stirred Up as They Never Were Before in Local Election.

Today practically ends the municipal campaign in the borough, and the voting tomorrow will be watched with more than usual interest by the supporters of both parties and candidates. It is without exception the warmest contest witnessed in that municipality in many a day, and it is very perplexing from the fact that both parties are split up.

That the Republicans have always held the control of power counts for much, but in this contest there is no denying the fact that a host of Republicans have signified their purpose of supporting the Democratic candidate for Mayor, John E. Wilson.

On the other hand there are a certain number of Democrats who claim that they will stand by the Republican candidate for Mayor, Newton B. Smalley. With this perplexing state of affairs it is rather difficult to say who will be the coming Mayor.

The strong supporters of Mayor Wilson say unhesitatingly that their candidate will receive from 150 to 200 majority over Mr. Smalley, while supporters of the latter say that their candidate will beat Mr. Wilson overwhelmingly.

In some respects the contest has been noted for the circulation of many false stories. It has been said that money has been put into the hands of unreliable men who have resorted to unprincipled means to further the interests of their candidates, but an investigation of facts fails to reveal that money to any large extent has figured in the battle. To be sure money has been and will be used for legitimate purposes, but to no greater extent than in hundreds of other places.

Former Mayor W. L. Saunders informed a Press reporter this morning that he is confident that Mayor Wilson will be elected by a handsome majority. He claims a majority of 250 for his candidate, and says that he will not lose fifty votes. He also says that no one can rightfully find fault with Mr. Wilson's administration of affairs, for it has been impartial.

A great deal of quiet work has been and is being done among the workers both day and night and every effort is being put forth by both parties. This morning one prominent resident wagered $100 on Mayor Wilson. In another instance a man wanted to bet $100 on Mr. Smalley, but when another man offered to put up $500 to his $100 he withdrew and had nothing more to say. In all manner of fairness it must be stated that in betting Mayor Wilson is receiving the biggest odds and it appears rather difficult to secure takers.

There will be plenty of police assistance on hand and if any attempt is made to buy votes arrests will be made promptly. The polls will be opened at 6 o'clock in the morning and they will close in the evening at 7 o'clock.

A wager of $100 each was made by Frank Mobus and William Pangborn this morning. Mobus staked his money on Smalley's election and Pangborn on Wilson's election.

W. L. SMALLEY CRITICALLY ILL.

William L. Smalley, of Craig place, one of the oldest and best citizens in the borough, was seized this morning with a severe attack of gastritis, and for a time it was thought that he would die. Dr. Carman was sent for, but in the meantime Dr. Pittis was called. The latter prescribed properly and relieved Mr. Smalley very much so that at present he is resting quietly. When Mr. Smalley was first taken ill the children were sent for as it was felt certain that he could not survive.

The Red Men's Fair.

The joint committee from Miantonomo Tribe and Iona Council which have the fair in charge, met Saturday night. It was decided to hold the fair in Washington Hall, beginning April 4th, and continuing for the balance of the week and perhaps a part of the week after. Various contests will be opened, and the fair will be made as successful as possible.

THE OLD WAY.

We say the old way, but really it is a very common one at present time and many dyspeptics and physicians as well, consider the first step to take in attempting to cure indigestion is to diet, either by selecting certain foods and rejecting others or to greatly diminish the quantity usually taken, in other words, the starvation plan is by many supposed to be the first essential.

The almost certain failure of the starvation cure for dyspepsia has been proven time and again, but still the moment dyspepsia makes its appearance a course of dieting is at once advised.

All this is radically wrong. It is foolish and unscientific to recommend dieting or starvation to a man suffering from dyspepsia, because indigestion itself starves every organ and every nerve and every fibre in the body.

What the dyspeptic wants is abundant nutrition, which means plenty of good, wholesome, well cooked food and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it. This is exactly the purpose for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted and this is the method by which they cure the worst cases of dyspepsia, in other words the patient eats plenty of wholesome food and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest it for him. In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. One of these tablets will digest 3,000 grains of meat or eggs.

Your druggist will tell you that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the purest and safest remedy for stomach troubles and every trial makes one more friend for this excellent preparation. Sold at 50cts. for full sized package at all drug stores.

PORTO RICANS UGLY

They Are Dissatisfied With Uncle Sam's Supervision.

AGITATORS LEAD NATIVES

Returned Officers Predict Trouble from Our New Proteges—An Effort Will be Made to Get Them to Join the American Army—Four Companies Will be Enlisted and Trained.

New York, March 13.—Many of the officers of the Forty-seventh regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry, just returned, believe that an uprising in Porto Rico is only a matter of leadership and a few months. A leader is bound to appear. The island is full of agitators. The rebellion may not be a success, but its suppression will cost lives and money.

The headquarters of the Forty-seventh was at Caguas, a filthy town of seven thousand inhabitants and a hot bed of rebellion. The present leaders are priests who lost their income by the change of rulers.

Colonel Hubbell of the Forty-seventh, a man of experience, says of the general tenor of feeling in Porto Rico:

"We will have trouble in Porto Rico. There is bound to be an uprising sooner or later. The planters are dissatisfied because of the refusal of the United States to admit their products free of duty, and the lower classes because they want freedom and hate the American soldier nearly as much as they did the Spanish.

"We had much trouble in the island. Our duty was to police the towns and make the natives clean up. We made Caguas look like a new town, but we made enemies in doing so. Our first trouble was with the Black Hand, a secret society which, as near as I can learn, mixes politics and crime. We kept the members in control, but of course it was impossible to break it up.

"As soon as the Forty-seventh was ordered home and the natives learned of it, they became more insolent and disorderly. The natives have thrown away evry opportunity offered them. We tried to make them respect the law and the officers of the law. We made more of a show in a change of administration than they were accustomed to. They pretended to like it, but that was all.

"The people want a local self government. Every native wants to be some sort of a political boss. When they can't get what they want they clamor for their 'rights.'

Planters Are Dissatisfied.

"The planters are dissatisfied because they are product poor. They have big crops of sugar, tobacco and coffee on hand, with no markets. When the troops first landed they thought a surrender meant that the United States would open her ports to their products free of duty. When they learned otherwise they became dissatisfied.

"Of course the lower classes depend on the planters for a livelihood, and only reflect their feelings. These feelings of discontent are augmented by professional agitators, who pass as members of an educational alliance.

"The war department has been deceived by the apparent good feelings of the native. He is a treacherous person, meeting us always with a bouquet and a knife. They tried to crawl up on our sentries and knife them. Whenever our men met a suspicious looking native they made him hold up his hands, and usually they found a knife in his sleeve.

"The Porto Rican is not a great fighter and hates and fears the American soldier, but he has pluck enough to go into an uprising if he has a leader.

"I'm told the conditions at Ponce and San Juan are as bad as they are at Caguas. It is a satisfaction to me to know I hold the same views as General Henry, forming them from independent investigations.

"The preventive for an uprising is more soldiers to police the island for three years at least. The natives have had things too much their own way. General Henry has only three regiments of infantry and two batteries to guard the whole island. Until the natives learn more of our ways and get away from the agitator's influence more soldiers are needed. There is trouble ahead in Porto Rico for the United States."

Porto Ricans To Join the Army.

Washington, D. C., March 13.—In accordance with the recommendation of Major General Henry, authority was cabled to him by Secretary Alger to enlist four companies of natives of not more than one hundred men each.

General Henry stated that he believed such action would have an excellent effect upon the natives, who seemed to be suspicious of the purposes of the United States. It would not be a difficult matter to get good men, who could be uniformed and armed in Porto Rico, and who would always be required to serve with regular troops, thus minimizing the danger of an outbreak.

It is expected that General Henry will assign white officers to the native companies and some of the white enlisted men as non-commissioned officers.

It is explicitly stated in the war department that nothing has been received from General Henry showing that a revolution on the island is imminent. It is true that his force has been reduced, because of the necessity of bringing home and mustering out volunteers, but he has not objected to such action or requested that additional troops be sent to him. The authorities are inclined, therefore, to regard reports of impending trouble in the island without foundation.

Great Steel Works to be Enlarged.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 13.—The announcement is made of enlargement at the Pennsylvania Steel Works at Steelton by the addition of six new fifty-ton furnaces to the open hearth department and additional underground furnaces at the blooming mill.

Extensive cranes for the handling of rails will be placed in the yards at the rail mill.

The demand for billets and structural steel was never so heavy. A number of departments are to be enlarged shortly. There were six thousand names on the February pay roll, a gain of two thousand over the same month in 1897.

HIGGINSON DECLINES PROMOTION.

The Rear Admiral Distinguishes Himself by Making a New Record.

Washington, D. C., March 13.—Rear Admiral Francis J. Higginson of the navy has written a letter to Secretary Long declining to accept the five numbers he was advanced for gallantry in the action at Santiago. He bears the distinction of being the only officer engaged in the Santiago campaign who received the confirmation of the United States Senate for gallantry. In his letter to the secretary of the navy Admiral Higginson says:

"Sir: I respectfully request to be allowed to resume my former number on the naval list after Rear Admiral Kempff. While deeply grateful to the president and yourself for my nomination for work done off Santiago, I do not regard my own services as so conspicuous as to warrant my advancement while the other commanding officers nominated at the same time as myself go unrewarded. They were a gallant band of naval officers, and certainly deserved well of their country, and if their services are to go unrecognized, I desire to share the same fate."

This action caused considerable comment in the department, and the question has arisen, whether or not, in view of the confirmation of the Senate, the secretary has the power to reduce him to his former rating. Secretary Long, in his reply to Admiral Higginson's letter, does not touch upon the subject:

The secretary said: "Will you let me express my high appreciation of your very handsome and considerate conduct in asking to resume your former number on the navy list rather than accept the advancement which places you above other officers who, for their gallant services in the recent war, deserved recognition, but failed to receive it, owing to the failure of the Senate to act upon the recommendations sent in by the president. The spirit which you manifest is so admirable that I hasten to write you this letter."

DID NOT BRIBE EX-ATTORNEY-GEN.

Ex-Attorney-Gen. Watson Indignant at Recently Printed Stories.

Washington, D. C., March 13.—D. K. Watson, formerly attorney general of the state of Ohio, is highly indignant at the alleged interviews and other stories from Cleveland and Columbus to the effect that while he was attorney general the Standard Oil Company attempted to bribe him.

Mr. Watson is in the city attending to his duties as a member of the commission for the revision of the laws. He said that there was not one word of truth in all the stories of attempted bribery. The Standard Oil Company had never offered to bribe him with the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars or for any other amount. He added:

"The story is false in every particular and evidently emanated from the brain of a crank. I have not been in Columbus, from which place the alleged interviews have come, for five weeks. I was never approached by anyone who offered to send me or suggested that I go to Baden Baden or to any other resort for my health, or offered me any amount for taking myself out of the way in order that the prosecution of the Standard Oil Company might be stopped. While attorney general of Ohio I tried to conduct my office properly, and had charge of some matters against the Standard Oil Company, but now that I am out of office I have no animosity against the company and absolutely nothing to do with its affairs. I have no desire to be drawn into any controversy with the company nor intention of permitting myself to be entangled in the present case."

Mr. Watson has taken every opportunity to deny the story and brand the originator as a fakir and a liar.

GEN. WHEELER NOT TO WED.

Report That He is to Marry Mrs. George W. Childs Is Not True.

Washington, D. C., March 13.—General Joe Wheeler, when asked if the report emanating from Philadelphia, which couples his name with that of Mrs. George W. Childs, in a prospective matrimonial venture, was true, replied that it was not. While the denial was not of the positive nature that would be given to a less embarrassing question, the general sought without the use of emphatic words to have it clearly understood that the report was without foundation.

In conclusion he said: "I am sorry that the lady's name has been mentioned in this connection. I was well acquainted with her husband, and she is a woman who revers his name. She is a woman whom any man might be proud to marry."

Members of General Wheeler's family discredited the report, as they had heard nothing to confirm it. It was less than two months ago that Miss Helen Gould was called upon by gossips to deny an engagement with General Wheeler.

Dewey's Ships in Good Shape.

Washington, D. C., March 13.—The navy department has been informed that the care which Admiral Dewey has given to the fleet on the Asiatic station is shown in the condition of the vessels, which is much better thon could be expected in view of the long service they have undergone far from repair stations.

With the same information come reports that the shops at Cavite have been re-established and that under the direction of American mechanics the native workmen have been able to make all the ordinary repairs which the ships need.

Mrs. Place is Not Insane.

New York, March 13.—Drs. William M. Polk and Charles L. Dana, the physicians appointed by Governor Roosevelt to examine into the sanity of Mrs. Martha Place, the condemned murderess, have decided on the report that they will submit.

While neither would disclose its character in advance of its receipt by Governor Roosevelt, it is stated on unquestioned authority that the physicians found that the woman is not insane, although a person of moods and at times dangerous.

The report will be sent to the governor at once and will be made public from Albany.

Mrs. Place's execution is set for the week beginning March 20, and only eight days remain to the governor in which to decide.

GEN. GOMEZ REMOVED

The Cuban Assembly Makes Itself Ridiculous.

LAUGHS AT HIS DEFAMERS

The Assembly Was Not Satisfied With His Acceptance of the $3,000,000 from the U. S. Government for the Payment of Soldiers—The Act Will Doubtless Result in Its Overthrow.

Havana, March 13.—A tremendous sensation was created in Havana by the announcement that General Maximo Gomez had been deposed from the office of cammander-in-chief of the Cuban army by the assembly.

The assembly decided by a vote of 26 to 4 that Gomez be degraded and the office of commander-in-chief of the Cuban army be abolished, all of the powers heretofore pertaining to that office to be exercised by the assembly.

With the exception of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes all of the representatives declared that Gomez was a traitor to his country.

Manuel Sanguilly proposed that the office of commander-in-chief of the army be abolished, and General Lacret amended this proposition by declaring that it was not enough to degrade Gomez. He should be court martialed and shot, and he (Lacret) offered to command the troops to carry out the sentence.

Gomez, he declared, had sold to a foreigner the honor of the Cuban army, and the fact that military law was at an end left him no defence.

Aristides Aguero presented the resolution that Gomez be deposed and left without any authority over the Cubans. This resolution was carried with the amendment that the office he held be abolished.

The feeling of indignation against the assembly among a majority of the people of the city, who are in favor of Gomez, is very great, and if it were not for the fact that the Americans are in control and enforce order, the Cubans would be fighting one another.

GENERAL GOMEZ.

Ninety-two political clubs met Saturday night to pass resolutions in favor of Gomez and attack the junta Patriotica of Havana, which, in the opinion of the clubs, is responsible for all of the evils which the situation presents. The clubs will sever all connection with the junta and establish a big party entitled the Siga Patriotica, electing General Gomez as its president.

General Gomez attended mas early in the day and afterwards went to City Hall, where thousands went to see him. He addressed the people, and in the course of his remarks congratulated Guanabacoa upon having such a chief magistrate as Mayor Hyatt, an American by nationality, but a Cuban at heart, who had done so much in saving the lives of ten thousand reconcentrados.

Mayor Hyatt replied to Gen. Gomez, saying that the Americans and Cubans ought to unite under the protection of President McKinley's government for the peace and reconstruction of the country.

When General Gomez reached Havana he said: "I have done my duty to Cuba. The people, not the assembly, will judge me. My conduct has been honest and clear. My long life has been devoted to the freedom of the island. I made war to obtain everlasting peace for Cuba, and now peace has been established."

Captain Peabody of General Ludlow's staff will leave on Monday for Washington, carrying with him President McKinley's picture, the gift of the people of Cuba to the president.

The quarrel between General Gomez and the Cuban assembly started when he agreed to accept three million dollars from the United States government for the Cuban army. The assembly declared that the sum should be twelve million dollars, and has discussed the question at several stormy sessions. An attempt to float a loan of nine million dollars failed. When General Gomez reached Havana the assembly demanded to know whether he would obey its orders. He replied that he would when the orders were for the good of Cuba. General Gomez insisted that the three million dollars he accepted for the army as a reward, not in full payment, leaving that question to be decided by the future government of Cuba. The assembly continued to hold meetings to discuss this question, and on Thursday Governor Gen. Brooks ordered that the dispute be ended, as it was needless and was causing uneasiness in Havana. This brought matters to a crisis.

Kaiser Will Be His Own Admiral.

Cologne, March 13.—The retirement of Admiral Von Knorr brought out the fact that the kaiser personally sent what has been described as an impulsive telegram to Admiral Von Diedrichs, rating him harshly for making trouble and directing him curtly to get out.

Admiral Von Knorr resented this as an infringement of his rights and the kaiser, who had been very much irritated, promptly sent Admiral Von Knorr to the right about.

he commenced a course of treatment with them, using them according to directions. EX-PRESIDENT CLEVELAND SCORED.

Wanted His Industial Farm Worked for All There Was In It.

Princeton, N. J., March 13.—John Henry Vroom, who started what was known as the Cleveland Farm School near Princeton, expresses his disappointment over the abandonment of the project and practically places all the blame on Grover Cleveland, former president of the United States.

Mr. Vroom is bitter in his comments on the present attitude of his former benefactor. He says he is living in a small house, which is separated by a barbed wire fence from the farm owned by Mr. Cleveland. He declares that warning signs have been placed on the farm to prevent him from trespassing, and that Mr. Cleveland is desirous of forcing him to leave the neighborhood.

According to Mr. Vroom there was merely a verbal agreement between him and Mr. Cleveland. The latter, he declares, approved of the plan of an industrial school for poor boys and told him that he could have the farm for five or ten years. All that Mr. Cleveland wanted, he says, was to be supplied with milk and eggs; the rest of the products of the farm could be kept for the boys.

"Shortly after the boys arrived," said Mr. Vroom, "Mr. Cleveland began to criticise. When the accounts of the school were published in the newspapers and boys began to pour in upon me, he told me to drop the educational feature and work the farm for all that it was worth.

"I could not take care of all the boys Mr. Cleveland told me to send them back to the places from which they came. Then Mr. Cleveland wrote to me a letter couched in diplomatic language, that he wished to use the farm for another purpose. If I would get another place he would help me with a handsome cash contribution. Not until I had signed a paper agreeing to vacate did I see my mistake. On October 6 or 7 he sent a messenger to me directing that all the boys should leave the farm."

Mr. Vroom says that the final settlements were made on November 6 and that Mr. Cleveland sent him a contribution of $500 to continue the project on another farm.

He asserts that the contribution was $250 short of the amount he had borrowed and spent upon the Cleveland farm.

Americans Win the Cable Chess Match.

Brooklyn, N. Y., March 13.—The American experts in the cable chess match with Great Britain, which ended Saturday night, clearly demonstrated their superiority, and won by a score of six to four. The Englishmen won only a single game out of ten.

It was an interesting struggle, the British players fighting stubbornly against a steady gain by the Brooklyn team.

The hall in Brooklyn was crowded with chess enthusiasts. When Showalter scored the first victory for the side the cheers were loud and strong. One of the ladies presented him with a large bouquet of pinks and roses, and the Kentuckian was overwhelmed with congratulations.

Pillsbury, the American champion, was the only American who lost his game, Blackburne, the British champion, defeating him in seventy-one moves.

Showalter, Barry and Hodges were the Americans to win. The score was six to four.

The totals in previous macthes were: 1896, United States 4½, Great Britain 3½; 1897, United States 4½, Great Britain 5½; 1898, United States 4½, Great Britain 5½.

First Sunday Paper in London

London, March 13.—Only those Americans who have been eye-witnesses of the gloomy sabbatarianism of the British people will fully appreciate the announcement that the London Daily Telegraph is to publish a Sunday issue. This is not an incident. It is a revolution.

Next to the British constitution the British people have hitherto been most proud of the British Sunday, especially as it was to be found in London. The British people justly regarded their long endurance of this twenty-four hours of gloom and dreariness as one of the proofs of their hardy and heroic fibre.

The Britisher particularly rejoiced in the fact that none of his great dailies came out on Sunday. But now he is yielding to American influence where he resisted without difficulty the influence of his next door neighbors on the continent.

A London Sunday with a real Sunday newspaper will be no longer a London Sunday.

Will Row Big Race at Poughkeepsie.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 13.—The second annual regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association will be held on Tuesday, June 27.

Chairman Thomas Reath of the Pennsylvania rowing committee is authority for the information. He says there is no longer any question as to Wisconsin sending an eight to Poughkeepsie, and that the four crews—Pennsylvania, Columbia, Cornell and Wisconsin—would row together.

The freshman crews of the four institutions will row their race on Monday preceding the regular regatta. The day of the regatta comes earlier this year than usual. Generally the race occurs on Thursday, Friday or Saturday. The Harvard-Yale race is set for June 29th.

The Census Bureau's Force.

Washington, D. C., March 13.—Director Merriam of the census bureau announced before leaving for Minnesota that he would make no further appointments for at least a month, and that the office force of three thousand clerks would not be needed until the month of July, 1900, when the returns of the enumerators will come in.

The three hundred supervisors, however, would be selected by December next, and their names sent to the Senate for approval. These supervisors will have the appointment of forty thousand enumerators, who will do the actual work of takin gthe census in the various states and territories.

The few staff and clerical appointments to be made before Congress meets will comprise only the skeleton force necessary to perform the preliminary work. This, however, says the director, will be no small task.

CHUCK BEEF CANNED

CHICAGO TESTIMONY GIVEN

So-Called Roast Beef Was Boiled Beef of the Coarser Grades—Dr. Devoe Says That Condemned Carcasses Were Taken from Tanks and Sold in the Market.

Chicago, March 13.—The present beef inquiry by the war department has shown at least two things—that the commissary department of the army was lamentably weak during the late war and that the government system of inspection of meat and cattle is deficient and a makeshift at the best.

While Major Lee, representing General Miles, has not as yet definitely shown that the beef furnished the troops by the Chicago packers was in any way "chemicalized," his examination of witnesses, as well as that of Judge Advocate Davis, has brought out the fact that the business management of the army and the so-called meat inspection by the government were almost hopelessly bad.

Another point was brought out that created a great deal of surprise. This was that it was possible for the condemned carcases of animals to get from the tanks to which they were sent to the outside, where they could be sold for meat; that uninspected carcasses could get into the canning departments of the packing houses, but the inspectors on the stand did not know of cases where such things had happened.

Inspector W. A. Bruelt testified that he understood that horses were being slaughtered for beef in Chicago, one establishment being just south of the city, but as it was not under government inspection he could say nothing about it. The law does not require the inspectors to inspect the canning departments, and therefore he could not say anything about them. He did not know that chemicals were used, but he had seen salt, saltpetre, borax and syrups used on beef.

The testimony of the United States government inspectors seemed more interesting from what they did not know and did not see than from what actually came under their supervision.

Some of the testimony before the inquiry board was startling. Lieutenant Colonel Charles G. Sharpe, chief commissary of the great camp at Chickamauga, among other things asserted that "the soldiers' beef at Chickamauga was transported from the depot to the camp in wagons reeking with filth."

He added that it had been ordered that straw should be put upon the bottom of the wagons and that the wagons should be covered to keep off the sun, but these orders were never obeyed.

"The wagons were used in the policing of the camp," Lieutenant Colonel Sharpe said. "They were unwashed, the bottoms thick with garbage, and yet, without any hay or straw, were sent for the beef. The beef was taken through the hot sun with no covering. In cases which fell under my personal observation, I refused to issue any beef to wagons in such condition. Complaints came in that beef which had stood in the sun for hours in those wagons was spoiled. A complaint was received about a load of beef filled with vermin. I examined the beef and found it in a garbage wagon thick with filth and swarming with the vermin generated in that slime."

"I had it washed, put in the cooler over night, and told them to give it to another regiment, with an explanation of the circumstances. If that regiment did not want it, I directed that other meat be issued in its place."

"I served canned roast beef during the whole campaign," Lieutenant Colonel Sharpe further testified, "and heard many complaints that it was unpalatable, but as it was an army ration by regulation I continued to serve it. I supplemented it by local cattle, which the men complained of as much as of the canned meat."

Evidence tending to support the charge that the carcasses of condemned cattle thrown into the rendering tanks at the stock yards packing houses under the eye of a government inspector and supposed to be reduced to a fertilizing substance, were really taken from the tanks while the inspector was away and sold in the local market, was given by Dr. W. S. Devoe, inspector in charge of the bureau of animal industries, under a severe cross examination by Major Lee, representing General Miles.

Dr. Devoe, who was a traveling inspector of the bureau of animal industries in 1894, came here to investigate complaints made at Washington that bottomless tanks were being used, apparently as rendering tanks, and the condemned beef taken from them.

"I found," said the doctor, "that in a certain house diseased meat was removed from the top of a rendering tank after it had been placed there for destruction. This was done by lowering a man through the hole in the top of the tank by means of a rope and having him attach ropes to the carcasses so that they could be taken out. The beef so removed was sold in the local Chicago market. This information came first through discharged employes but I found that very unsatisfactory. From men who were still at the work I learned satisfactorily that it was correct."

"What house was this found in?"

Objection was made to this question.

Then Major Lee questioned the doctor about canned beef furnished the soldiers.

"Is it not a fact," Major Lee asked, "that this beef is 'chuck,' the cheapest grade of meat on the animal?"

"It is," replied Dr. Devoe.

"What is it worth?"

"From three to four cents a pound."

"And is it not from the cheapest and poorest cattle in the market?"

"It is," was the reply, and Major Lee smiled and made a note of it.

According to Major Smith, who for nine days had charge of the beef issue at Santiago last July, the beef came in refrigerator ships and was of the finest quality. The brigade and division commissaries were supposed to transfer the meat to the camps, and to do so without delay. Instead of so doing the wagons were allowed to stand for hours in the heat of a Cuban day.

HILL TOASTS DEPEW.

Incidentally Sneers at Croker's Coming Jeffersonian Banquet.

New York, March 13.—Two hundred and seventy members of the Lotus Club assembled at a dinner Saturday night in the club house, given to Senator-elect Chauncey M. Depew, who was proclaimed on the menu as orator, lawyer, statesman and poet.

Next to Senator Depew sat at the right hand of President Frank R. Lawrence, while opposite Dr. John Watson (Ian Maclaren) and opposite him were former Governor David B. Hill, John A. Taylor, Colonel Ashton Wolfe, former Judge Henry E. Howland and James J. Coogan. General Merritt, Bourke Cockran and Governor Roosevelt came in later.

President Lawrence called upon former Senator David B. Hill to speak after Secretary Long had read a letter of regret from Whitelaw Reid, who is in California.

Mr. Hill said that he was present to express his profound respect for Mr. Depew. He told of meeting an enthusiastic Democratic friend in the train on his way to New York, who expressed surprise on hearing that Mr. Hill was going to a dinner at the Lotus Club.

"Why don't you wait and attend the great dinner on April 13," the enthusiastic Democrat inquired, "given by the swellest club in New York?"

As Mr. Hill repeated the question he assumed an intensely "tough" expression and moved his shoulders. The hundreds of men in the dining room roared with laughter.

"I am one of those," said Mr. Hill, "who believe that one of the best reforms this country can have is an amendment of the ederal Constitution which will give the people of each state the right to elect their United States senators.

"Mr. Depew has merited this promotion at the hands of his party. His voice has always been heard advocating Republican principles and Republican candidates. He has been known many years to the public as a disinterested partisan serving his party. I am here to remind him and remind you that for twenty-one years he occupied the valuable and lucrative office of member of the board of regents of the state of New York, and now, having received all the honors and emoluments of this position, he is rich enough to go to the United States Senate. In what does Mr. Depew excel? As an orator. No one excels him in this broad land. A most dangerous man on the stump I can certify.

"I am not here to say what carried the last election in this state. A distinguished soldier thinks he did it. There is a slight suspicion in some quarters that some presiding genius in one of the other parties assisted. (Roars of laughter and cheering.)

"I am going to make a confession. I am going to claim some of the credit for the election of that Republican. During the campaign I spoke of the desperation of the other side. I said: 'They have even gone so far as to resurrect that perennial, moss-covered orator, Chauncey M. Depew.' What was the effect of that remark? From the hills and the valleys and all the deepest recesses of the woods all the mossbacks came out to vindicate Depew, and I propose hereafter to let the mossbacks alone. (Laughter.)

"Mr. Depew as an orator is one of those men who, when he speaks, says something. He is dangerous because when he speaks he thinks. There are some leaders in some parties (cries of oh! oh! and laughter) who do not think and don't know how to think."

This allusion created such a storm of laughter, applause and cheering that Mr. Hill was not able to go on for at least a minute. He continued:

"I am here as one of Mr. Depew's opponents to predict that in this new field of labor to which he has been called he will not disappoint his friends or his enemies. I spea kof enemies, meaning those opposed to him politically, for he has no other enemies. He enters the Senate at a most critical period in the country's history. New problems have arisen which must be met and met heroically. I listened to-night for some inkling of what precise policy he is going to adopt, but I listened in vain. That speech of his will fit in all parts of the country. Democrats, Populists, Prohibitionists alike will indorse the 'policy of civilization,' whatever that may be."

TAMMANY HALL NEGLECTED.

Wigwam Followers Say Croker is Killing the Organization.

New York, March 13.—Old Tammany men are muttering deep under their breath that Mr. Croker is trying to kill Tammany Hall for the Democratic Club. They point to the fact that not one meeting of the Tammany general committee has been held since last October. For years the old oak-ribbed and copper bound Tammany men have been wont to gather once a month and hear the Jeffersonian truth of Democracy put before them by skilled speakers.

Now there is not even a chairman of the general committee, though the late Augustus Peters has been dead three months.

The executive committee, which includes the various district leaders, has met but twice since the last election, and both times to take some official action that Mr. Croker wanted made public.

No meeting for the month of March has as yet been called to elect a chairman of the general committee.

Up until ten months ago the monthly meeting of the Tammany Society was an event at which from one thousand to two thousand members gathered. A dozen or two of the old fellows, mostly "ex's," hold melancholy meetings now. At the March meeting in the past it has been the custom to appoint a committee to select a ticket. This ticket includes the board of sachems, a scribe, a wiskinkie, a sagamore, and some minor officers. No one is being talked of for sachem, and the possible successor to ex-Judge Feltner as grand sachem is not being even speculated upon.

John F. Carroll, Mr. Croker's adjutant, goes to Tammany Hall once or twice a week and gives a casual glance at such mail matter as may have accumulated, but no one else in the organization goes there.

To those who believe capital punishment should be abolished, here is a pertinent question: "What punishment does a murderer most fear, execution or imprisonment for life?"—News.

As tending to restrain violence that results in murder the consideration of what the consequences are to be—whether execution or life-long imprisonment—seldom, if ever, enters into the mind of the person who commits the crime. We believe that no man ever committed the crime of taking human life in a sane moment; the mind and purposes under such perversion possess all that is possible to be obtained in insanity. However sound may be the mind before or after committing such an act, the immediate promptings are those of a perverted and insane mental condition. And it is both law and justice that no man's life should be taken for actions performed while he is mentally irresponsible.

In reviewing the work of New Jersey Congressmen The Tribune says of Mr. Fowler:

In the House Mr. Fowler busied himself mainly with finance, and if no legislation resulted the fact was due to the diversity of views in the banking and currency committee and in the House. Some of those here who are recognized as having expert knowledge have spoken most highly of the ability displayed by the representative from the VIIIth New Jersey Congress District.

There is too much politics in the police force of Plainfield. Not Democratic or Republican politics—but police politics. Good service cannot be expected or secured when there is a constant tugging at the ropes of jealousy and competition in a set of local officials like the police force. The powers that be should remember an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Millionaire Twombly, who owns one-half the land and employs one-half the voters in the newly-formed borough of Florham Park, in Morris county, will be an autocrat such as no other municipality in New Jersey can exhibit.

On the cover of a prairie wagon which passed through Kansas the other day was printed the notice: "Not bound for Missouri. Not busted. Not going to wife's folks. Just doing this to beat the railroads."

It was leniency with a "coal combine" that disrupted and defeated the theretofore almost invincible Democrats of New Jersey a few years ago. Are the Rupublicans to follow the same way?

Among some of the bright sayings of a writer in the Chicago News is that Satan would be unable to run his business if men didn't furnish him so much free help.

A New York man who shaved off his whiskers to be married and caught cold and died before the nuptial knot was tied had more than a close shave after all.

There seems to be a great uncertaintity as to the ones who will go up Salt River tomorrow night when the boat sails out of the local Canada.

There is no better argument in favor of bi-ennial sessions of the Legislature than the do-nothing record of the present Legislature.

Tomorrow at this time in the borough it will be almost over except the rejoicing of one side and the sorrowing of the other.

Well, which ever way election goes in North Plainfield it cannot be said that General Apahy was a factor in the contest.

Now wonder that horse jockies get as big pay as kings and queens. They always rein.

Egotism in proper proportions is an essential to every man's success.

THE MONADNOCK AND GENERAL HUGHES.
The monitor Monadnock, of Dewey's fleet, was in her element during the fighting at Manila. Her draught enabled her to get as close to shore as necessary to hurl great shells over the American lines into the Filipinos. Brigadier General Hughes superintended the work of extinguishing the fires started by insurgents and their sympathizers.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has issued an order that hereafter its men shall not use the word "wreck," but call it "accident," and must call a wrecking train a "tool train." This reminds us of the thoughtful person who invented, as a synonym for the Civil War, the phrase "the late unpleasantness."

In one of the lower counties of Kentucky recently a ragged, dirty, disreputable tramp stole a pair of oxen and sold them. A shrewd young lawyer undertook his defence, and when the case was called a well-dressed, clean shaven, good looking man took his place in the dock. The change was so great that none of the men who had seen him with the oxen were able to completely identify him, and he was acquitted.

LIBRARY ADVANTAGES.

Twelve Hundred Valuable Volumes for School Work.

The following notice has been sent to all the schools in the city:

"The Public Library has recently, by means of the Babcock endowment, built up its departments of mathematics, astronomy, physics, including electricity and electrical engineering, chemistry, geology, botany, natural history and photography, in all a library of about 1,200 volumes. The selections for the above have been carefully made, many of them by specialists, and contain the best recent books on these subjects. A number of these are elementary and particularly suited to class room use and to the needs of beginners.

"Desiring that these books should be of the utmost use to our Plainfield teachers, we take this means of bringing to their notice the fact that these books are now accessible to them.

"The librarian will be glad to receive suggestions for purchase of books of known value, suitable for the Babcock scientific library.

"The departments soon to be built up are those of scientific travel and psychology, both of especial interest and importance to tachers.

"Librarian."

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"Charley's Aunt" was the most laughable comedy seen in this country and England for many years, and memories of its ludicrous situations will never be effaced. On the same lines, "His Better Half," the comedy to be presented at Music Hall tomorrow night is constructed and received highest praise from the London public, where it was first produced at the Theatre Comique in that city. Its success in this country has been such that the menagement have succeeded in effecting an engagement for a run of the play at the Bijou Theatre in New York the coming month, and the same company who appear in the cast tomorrow night, will be seen in the same original roles in that city. The company is composed of thorough good artists, all especially selected for their respective characters, while the two principals, Frank Sheridan and Arthur Larkin, are said to be superior in their delineations. A good dramatic performance is always enjoyable and such is the offering for tomorrow night.

If the public want to see a novelty, and everything points to the fact that they do, then they will soon have their wish gratified for "A Ragtime Reception," a rollicking, jingling farce comedy will soon be seen. It will have its first presentation at Music Hall Thursday night.

Tonight Chauncey Olcott enters on the last two weeks of his engagement at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, New York, where he has made a success in "A Romance of Athlone." He could continue until the warm weather had not Mr. Pitou made contracts a year ago calling for his appearance in other cities in the months of April and May.

Prosperity of no uncertain measure attends upon the famous Proctor theatres in New York city—namely the Twenty-third Street theatre which is so handy to all suburban visitors to the metropolis because of its central location just west of Sixth avenue, and the vast Pleasure Palace at Fifty-eighth street and Third avenue. The chief reason of Mr. Proctor's success is the constant excellence of the continuous programmes. Always a star of wide celebrity heads the bills at each theatre. At the Pleasure Palace this week Marie Dressler, the famous comedienne of comic opera fame, and Walter Jones, the star of all the Casino productions, will appear in a special sketch for the vaudevilles. In addition, there will be a score of other acts of great variety. Attention is specially directed to the special offering of the best seats at the Pleasure Palace in the afternoons to the ladies and children for only 25 cents. This is just one-half the evening price. At Mr Proctor's Twenty-third Street theatre, beginning today, Minnie Palmer, of "My Sweetheart" fame, who made a triumphant debut in vaudeville at the Pleasure Palace March 6th, will present her new comedietta, "Rose Pompon," assisted by her own company.

Manager Charles W. Runyon, of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, and family, have leased Mrs. Coombs' house on Westervelt avenue, and will move there April 1st. from East Fifth street.

GIVE THE CHILDREN A DRINK

called Grain-O. It is a delicious, appetizing, nourishing food drink to take the place of coffee. Sold by all grocers and liked by all who have used it because when properly prepared it tastes like the finest coffee but is free from all its injurious properties. Grain-O aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. It is not a stimulant but a health builder, and children, as well as adults, can drink it with great benefit. Costs about ¼ as much as coffee 15 and 25c.

NO LETUP!

Steam is up. The throttle is wide open, and everything is running at high pressure. Running a business is like rolling a stone up hill—it's easier to keep it rolling than to stand and hold it. We are constantly putting forth greater efforts to make our business grow—taking great care, however, that the growth shall be strong and healthful. The stupendous bargains we gave the people last week will linger in their memories for a long time to come. We shall hold out just as great inducements in the days to come, and call when you may we shall have good things for you.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, March 13.—The dissatisfied voters met Saturday night in the town hall to nominate a ticket to oppose the Citizens' ticket put up Thursday night. There was only two new names put up, R. J. Swackhamer for mayor and Peter C. Staats for freeholder, the rest of the ticket being the same as the regular ticket. This shows that there is some opposition to Mayor Brakeley and Firman Gise, but not enough to make the contest tomorrow very exciting.

It does not look as though work would be resumed very soon laying the water pipes, as some of the trenches dug before the blizzard are full of water, and will have to be pumped out before work can be begun.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Scotch Plains, N. J., March 13.—To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I am requested to say that the net amount realized from the fair given by the young ladies of Scotch Plains and Fanwood for the benefit of the Scotch Plains Public Library will be the sum of about $390 instead of $200, as previously reported. David P. Hall.

The residents along Terrill road complain bitterly about the condition of the roads through their section. Some claim the mud is over a foot deep. The road appropriation has been raised $250 this year. Maybe they will receive a share of it. They deserve it.

The many friends of George L. Dunn will be glad to learn he is improving very nicely under Dr. Cooley's treatment and will shorty be able to leave the institution and return home.

The annual mud holes on Cole's hill are being filled with crushed stone, and the hill, which has been nearly impassible, will soon be in good condition again.

THE FARCE WAS SOLEMN.

Episode of the Hungarian Revolution Recalled.

On September 22, 1851, a most solemn farce was performed within the Austrian empire, such as seems an almost incredible occurrence for a European country and at so recent a date. The kingdom of Hungary, which forms the central portion of that empire, was seeking independence, so far as to possess a parliament of its own, or what we call a constitutional government. This struggle was made during the reign of the present emperor, Francis Joseph, who had succeeded to the throne in December, 1848, and it was at last successful.

The national assembly, or Hungarian diet, consisting of upper and lower houses, was opened at length by a conciliatory rescript from his majesty on November 19, 1866, and on June 8 next year he was crowned king of Hungary at its capital, the two united cities, Buda-Pesth, its independence being thereby recognized. But this had been won not without great cost to the people, and especially, or prominently, to their leaders. On October 6, 1849, five of these famous men were put to death at Buda-Pesth, including Count Lewis Batthyani, and thirteen others were executed on the same day at Arad, ninety-five miles to the southeast. But the government, or its military commander, General Haynau, was not content with such severities. Count Julius Andrassy, born March 8, 1823, had escaped into exile, but on February 23, 1851, it was announced that he had been sentenced to death as a traitor, though he afterwards became, on February 17, 1867, the head of an independent constitutional ministry, and lived until February 18, 1890, and was buried with all honors in the presence of that same emperor. Yet, on September 22, 1851, Count Andressy had been executed at Buda-Pesth in effigy with all the solemnities which usually accompany the capital punishment of a living being, and with him in a similar manner the other leaders who had fled for refuge within the frontiers of Turkey, including Louis Kossuth, who nevertheless lived from April 21, 1802, till March 20, 1894, Casimir Batthyani and two other ministers and five military leaders.—Spare Moments.

Drink More Water.

"My opinion is that people do not drink as much water during the fall and winter season as they should," observed a well known physician to a Star reporter, "or as much as is positively necessary for them having health in view. There are thousands of people who do not drink one glass of water during the entire day, people, too, who drink from three to six glasses daily during other seasons of the year. Water is as necessary during the cool as during the warm seasons, and those who keep up their usual quantity, regardless of seasons, are benefited thereby in their general health. I do not believe in gulping down water just because it is convenient to drink it, but I do believe that drinking a regular liberal quantity of water each day is demanded by the system, and that what are known as water drinkers have on the whole much better health by so doing. There are many people who have such a horror of growing stout that they never drink a drop of water except that which goes into their coffees, teas and soups, and many of them carry it so far as to give up these so as to avoid using water. I have yet to see the man or woman who has been made fat by drinking water, while I know many who have grown stout by avoiding it. The kidneys cannot properly work unless there are liquids consumed. Stimulating drinks, beers and the like may furnish the liquids, but the stimulation they cause, and which is unnecessary for perfect health, more than counteracts the benefits derived from their use. Take any of the animals, and it will be found they drink a regular supply of water every day in the year; that is, when they have any choice in the matter. It is a pretty safe rule to follow the habits of animals. I am sure none of them grow fat on water alone."—Washington Star.

How Various Nations Sleep.

In the tropics men sleep in hammocks or upon mats of grass. The East Indian unrolls his light, portable charpoy or mattress, which in the morning is again rolled together and carried away with him. The Japanese lie upon matting with a stiff, uncomfortable wooden neck-rest. The Chinese use low bedsteads, often elaborately carved, and supporting only mats or coverlids. A peculiarity of the German bed is its shortness; besides that, it often consists in part of a large down pillow or upper mattress, which spreads over a person, and usually answers the purpose of all the other ordinary bedclothing combined. The English beds are the largest beds in the world. The ancient Greeks and Romans had their beds supported on frames, but not flat like ours. The Egyptians had a couch of a peculiar shape, more like an old-fashioned easy chair with hollow back and seat.

Curious Measurements.

It is said the Indian and half-breed canoe-men of Canada compute distances on the water by pipes. One pipe is the distance they can paddle in the interval between the haltings they are allowed to make in order to have a smoke. Permission for this halt is given by the person in charge, at intervals which vary according to circumstances. If the guide is indulgent, he makes the pauses frequent; if the travelers are in a hurry, or if the weather is threatening, fewer stops are made. A "pipe" is, therefore, wholly indeterminate.

In the rock of Gibraltar there are seventy miles of tunnels.

FILIPINO SNAKE DANCE.

Each Native Holds Several Reptiles and Then Lets Them Escape.

"There are some things in which the Filipinos resemble the American Indian disagreeably," says C. F. Todd of St. Louis. Mr. Todd spent a number of years in the Philippine Islands, returning to this country just before the outbreak of the war.

"I was exploring a portion of the Sulu group in search of a purchasable tract of teak, when my native guide invited me to see a snake dance at moonrise. We made our way through a tangled jungle till we came suddenly upon a group of forty natives squatted on the ground, perfectly motionless, as though carved out of marble. My guide had previously warned me not to speak or make a noise, as it would break the spell and incur the wrath of the medicine men, with serious and perhaps fatal results.

For many minutes there was no sound, then from behind a tree darted a hideous naked figure carrying in each hand a writhing serpent. It danced into the centre of the crowd, and others began to come out of the semi-darkness until there were twenty nude savages, each with from one to five twisting snakes of all sizes and kinds, and as they bent forward and backward in contortions, snakes and men seemed blended into a writhing mass. The only sound was the angry hiss of the snakes.

"The ceremony lasted for full half an hour, then, though no word had been spoken, but by some preconcerted signal, each performer cast his snake to the ground and allowed it to escape. I was paralyzed with horror when I saw a huge reptile wriggling toward me, but it passed into the jungle. My guide afterward told me that the ceremony is performed twice a year, and the snakes are always allowed to escape. In the recollection of the oldest native, neither performer nor spectator had ever been bitten by the serpents at the celebration."

The Doomed Elephant.

Alfred Sharpe contributes to Blackwood a very interesting little plea for the preservation of the African elephant, which is being ruthlessly slaughtered for its ivory, and is now in danger of extinction. The reason is not far to seek. The African native throughout the continent, since the introduction of firearms, urged on by the high value of ivory in European markets, has slaughtered elephants wherever he could find them, regardless of size or of sex, and so long as ivory of all descriptions is a valuable article elephants will continue to be indiscriminately killed. It would not do, as some have suggested, to try to destroy the trade in ivory, because it is almost the only export of Central Africa, but—

"If all the powers and states holding territory in Africa would agree to strictly prohibit the export of tusks under a certain weight, say fourteen pounds (or portions of such tusks) and would faithfully carry out such agreement, all small ivory would become valueless to the owners. The African does not like to waste his powder; he would soon cease slaughtering the small and undersized elephants. Not many cow tusks exceed twelve pounds in weight, and one result of this prohibition would be that in the course of time, as soon as the news had spread throughout tropical Africa that small tusks were no longer of any value, neither cow elephants nor under-sized beasts would be shot for their ivory. It might be expedient even to go a step further—to make it a criminal offense to be in possession of tusks under fourteen pounds in weight."

This sounds very well in theory, but for a country which cannot prevent the destruction and probable extinction of our rarer birds at home it is probably in the nature of a counsel of perfection. It is unfortunate that up to the present it has not been found possible to catch and tame African elephants and to have them of practical use, as is done with the Indian species. They would probably not be more difficult to tame, but conditions in which they live make it almost impracticable to secure them. They roam over vast tracts and are so harrassed by hunters that they never remain in one locality more than a few hours, and a day later are, perhaps, twenty miles away.

The Bright Side.

Look on the bright side. It is the right side. The times may be hard, but it will make them no easier to wear a gloomy and sad countenance. It is the sunshine and not the cloud that gives beauty to the flower. There is always before or around us that which should cheer and fill the heart with warmth and gladness. The sky is blue ten times where it is black once. You have troubles, it may be. So have others. None are free from them; and perhaps it is as well that none should be. They give sinew and tone to life, fortitude and courage to man. That would be a dull sea, and the sailor would never acquire skill, where there is nothing to disturb its surface. It is the duty of every one to extract all the happiness and enjoyment he can within and without him; and above all, he should look on the bright side. What though things do look a little dark? The lane will turn, and the night will end in broad day. In the long run, the great balance rights itself. What appears ill becomes well—that which appears wrong, right. Men are not made to hang down their heads or lips, and those who do only show that they are departing from the paths of true common sense and right. There is more virtue in one sunbeam than in a whole hemisphere of clouds and gloom. Therefore, we repeat, look on the bright side. Cultivate all that is warm and genial—not the cold and repulsive, the dark and morose.

SOME ANTIQUE RINGS.

ODD SUBSTITUTES FOR THE GOLD BANDS WORN BY BRIDES.

One Titled Lady Married With a Curtain Ring—A Scarf Pin Which Was Used in an Emergency—An Instance in Which a Quoit Was Turned into Service.

Incidents in which the marriage service has to be temporarily suspended while bridegroom and best man tumble over one another and murmur strange nothings as they vainly search for a missing ring are by no means so uncommon as one might imagine. This fiasco is usually brought about through an excess of caution.

The groom, being afraid perhaps to trust to his own memory upon such a momentous occasion, hands over the precious circlet to the best man for safe custody. The latter, who, by the way, is no more in the habit of carrying loose wedding rings about than is the groom himself, places the ring for safety in as out-of-the-way place as he can possibly think of in the brief time at his disposal. Before he has had time to properly commit the hiding place to memory he is seized by half a dozen importunate small fry and hurried off to attend to something else.

The consequence is that the admonitory stage whisper of the officiating minister to "have the ring ready," falls upon him like a bolt from the blue. Where the dickens did he put it? It was somewhere close handy, he is sure of that. But where, oh, where?—and a cold perspiration breaks out all over him as he realizes that the service has stopped, and the reproachful glances of the whole company are turned upon him, the rascally culprit who has mislaid the ring.

It is useless to pursue the scene further. Any one possessed of the slightest fund of imagination will readily picture to himself the frantic scene of flurry which inevitably follows, more especially if the contracting parties are sufficiently well known to secure a large and fashionable attendance at the church. Suffice it to say that it is a position in which not a few best men find themselves in the course of a year, and many are the expedients by which they endeavor to extricate themselves from what is at the best of times a particularly unpleasant dilemma.

The Duchess of Hamilton is said to have been married at Mayfair with a curtain ring; while a bridal party at Colchester were forced to fall back upon the ring of the church key. Even this case, however, was capped by one which occurred at Stratford when the only ring obtainable was an extempore one of kid, cut upon the spot from the bridegroom's glove.

Some couples are particularly improvident in this respect. One couple who were at their wits' end what to do for a ring, were considerably relieved by an inspiration of the best man. Gallantly plucking forth a huge horseshoe scarf pin from his tie of many colors, he broke off the pin, bent the soft metal shoe round his finger, and, with the air of an Angelo admiring his chef d'oeuvre, handed the brazen circlet to his pal. Another couple got over the difficulty by using a coin from which the center had been removed, and which, curiously enough, the groom was carrying in his pocket at the time.

The most curious ring of all, however, was that employed by a dock laborer, who by some means or other, had mislaid the more conventional article on his way to church. Casting about in his perplexity for a suitable object wherewith to embelish the finger of his charmer, his eyes suddenly fell upon one of the quoits with which he and the best man were subsequently matched to play for the price of the dejeuner at a neighboring tavern.

Despite the protests of the lady and the guffaw of his companions, the groom insisted upon going through the ceremony with the aid of this ponderous plaything; and, since the only alternative was to indefinitely postpone the event, the lady put the best face on the matter by accepting the quoit—and the docker..

Secrets of Snake-Charming.

A snake-charmer can, by a simple motion of his hand, make a moving snake stop instantly. The reason is this:

The snake is a most timid animal. His eyes, while dull to color and form, are quick to motion, especially if it is rapid. If any large thing moves very quickly too near him, he gets frightened and scurries off; while at certain distances the motion stops him, if he be moving.

He stops from astonishment, fear, or the wish to see what it is that moves. Hence he glides on, unconscious of the charmer's presence near him so long as the latter remains perfectly quiet; the snake doesn't know him from a tree or a rock.

But when he gives a sudden evidence of life, the snake is astonished, and immediately remains stock still.

In India and Africa the charmers pretend the snakes dance to the music, but they do not, for they never hear it. A snake has no external ears, and perhaps gives evidence of sound only through its skin, when sound causes bodies in contact with him to vibrate. They hear also through the nerves of the tongue, but do not at all comprehend sound as we do. However, the snake's eyes are very much alive to the motions of the charmer, or to the moving drumsticks of his confederate, and being alarmed, he attempts to strike.

A dancing cobra (and no other makes dance) is simply a cobra alarmed and in a posture of attack. He is not dancing to the music, but is making ready to assail the charmer.

OUR MIGRATING BIRDS.

To the lover of nature there is no subject more interesting than that of bird migration. The semi-annual coming and going of the birds mark the changes of the season as accurately as does the calendar, and there is every reason to believe that the Indians thus determined the approach of warmer or colder weather.

It is true they counted time by the moon, dividing the year and months into so many moons, but they anticipated the approach of spring by the coming of the bluebirds, martins and thrushes, while the departure of these birds in the fall heralded the approach of cold weather.

Boys and girls can study this subject with pleasure and profit. A record can be kept of the different species of birds which arrive in the several states, together with the time of their departure and when such a record extends over a number of years the facts thus obtained are likely to prove of great value.

Besides this, by studying birds and their habits we learn to love them; a rivalry will soon spring up as to who shall catch the first glimpse of the returning songsters, and this will take us to the woods and fields, where bird-life can be studied in all its phases.

The department of agriculture at Washington has enlisted the services of scientists all over the country, and secured from them detailed reports as to what they have seen of the appearance and disappearance of birds.

One of the most curious and interesting phases of the subject is that of the relative speed of different birds when traveling north and south. The comparative speed of the different species was readily obtained, but to find out the exact number of miles which individual birds can travel in a day was a task of great difficulty.

Birds, when they once start on their journey, do not maintain a steady flight. Those which breed in a certain grove or orchard are always the first to appear there in the spring, the desire to return to their old home causing them to start early.

In the migration southward, in the fall, the young birds seem to be the most eager to depart to warmer climes.

The record of fifty-eight species of migrating birds for one spring showed that on an average they covered twenty-three miles a day during a journey of five hundred miles.

They traveled more rapidly at the southern than at the northern end of their journey. In the mid-Southern states they lingered for several weeks, and, as they drew near to the North, they found that the weather was still cold, so that they did not hurry themselves.

In noting the average rate of travel of twenty-five species it was found that most of the species averaged nineteen miles a day during March, twenty-three miles during April and twenty-six miles during May. The later the bird is in starting for the North the faster it flies.

It was also found that the early-arriving birds, such as the robin, the cow bird and the golden flicker, travel on an average twelve miles a day, while those which may be called summer birds, including the night-hawk, red-bird, Baltimore oriole and ruby-throated hammer, cover twenty-eight miles nearly every day.

During the daytime birds do not travel so far as by night, because they stop to feed and often wait for other companies to come up with them.

Land birds make an average of fifteen miles in the daytime, but cranes, geese and ducks fly much faster. It is also thought that birds do not fly for several nights in succession, but that they stop to rest and feed after having flown for one or two nights.

If the birds were to keep up a continuous journey northward they would reach their destination in a very short time. But they are on a pleasure trip, and do not care to tire themselves out.

When the different flocks draw near their goal they separate, and, in the course of a few weeks, are scattered all over the country.

In the fall they reassemble and start on their southern journey. What system of telegraphy they have, by what intuition they all fix upon one gathering place, not even science can tell. Will the problem ever be solved?

Arctic Cold.

"Our physical sensations are relative," says a traveler in Arctic regions, "and the mere enumeration of so many degrees of heat or cold gives no idea of their effect upon the system. I should have frozen at home in a temperature which I found very comfortable in Lapland, with my solid diet of meat and butter, and my garments of reindeer."

The following is a correct scale of the physical effects of cold, calculated for the latitude of sixty-five to seventy degrees north:

Fifteen degrees above zero.—Unpleasantly warm.

Zero.—Mild and agreeable.

Twenty degrees below zero.—Sharp, but not severely cold. Keep your fingers and toes in motion, and rub your nose occasionally.

Thirty degrees below zero.—Very cold. Take particular care of your nose and extremities; eat the fattest food and plenty of it.

Forty degrees below zero.—Intensely cold. Keep awake at all hazards, muffle up to the eyes, and test your circulation frequently, that it may not stop somewhere before you know it.

"TO BURN SATAN IN EFFIGY."

A Salvationist Describes Their Vivid Manner of Forcing Truths.

"You see, we Salvationists have learned that the old ecclesiastical way of bringing out truths doesn't reach everybody. So I've hit on this spectacular show to burn sin and the devil out of the hearts of the people. First we'll have fireworks and a parade on the streets. The word 'Sin' will be borne aloft in burning letters than can be seen half a mile away. After the parade we will return to Memorial Hall, New York, and a number of cadets dressed in red will enter, some bearing a huge red coffin with "Hades" painted in white letters on either side. After marching around to the tune of a dirge they will place the coffin on a platform. After a song or two I'll get in my work.

"I shall take a huge knife, and after pulling yards of ribbon from the coffin, the head of the devil attached to the end will appear, arrayed in a huge bonnet covered with feathers, laces, ribbons, and what not. This represents pride, one of the greatest enemies to salvation, and off the head will come. I will then deliver a short address on pride before cutting out the devil's vertebrae. That's doubt, and will be illustrated by one of Bob Ingersoll's lithographs, used for advertising purposes, and a revolver, for you see he advises a person with no hope in life to put an end to existence. I shall speak of how doubt brings destruction and faith salvation. Next I'll cut the tongue out of the devil's head. You see it has 'scandal, lies, blasphemy' printed on the back so that all can read. And so it will be until I've cut the old fellow into mincemeat. At the close the room will be darkened and the devil will be burned in effigy in a lake of fire. It is a grewsome sight, but it is a representation of the different sins being taken from the people by conversion."—New York Sun.

No Fear of the Wine Cup.

"Harry," she said, reproachfully.

"Well?" he returned, apprehensively, for there was that in her tone that made him fear the worst.

"It is evident from your breath," she went on, "that you have been drinking."

"Well," he said again, for want of something better to say.

"When a mere girl," she explained regretfully, "I made a solemn vow that lips that touched wine should never touch mine."

"Oh, is that all?" he said, with evident relief. "If you were a little more conversant with the price of things in that line and with the details of my salary you wouldn't hesitate a moment on account of that vow. But it's mighty lucky that you didn't include anything but wine in it."—Chicago Post.

The Busy Queen.

Queen Victoria's private letters number many hundred every year. She writes to her numerous relatives, forgetting no anniversary or occasion on which a letter might be welcome. The London Chronicle says that to the younger members of the royal family she never fails to send birthday gifts, accompanied by a few loving words of greeting. Every day the birthday book is consulted—not that birthday book in which singers, actors and other personages are asked to write, but that smaller volume reserved for relatives and intimate friends. Then there are numerous letters of a semi private nature which are written by the Queen herself—letters of condolence, letters of congratulation to brides who have been connected with the court, letters to foreign monarchs.

A Cure for Balky Horses

An officer of police gives the following method for curing balky horses. "When I was a mounted policeman," he says, "I learned of a most humane and kind method of curing a balky horse. It not only never fails but it does not give the slightest pain to the animal. When the horse refuses to go, take the front foot at the fetlock, and bend the leg at the knee-joint. Hold it thus for three minutes, then let it down, and the horse will go. The only way in which I can account for this effective mastery of the horse is that he can think of only one thing at a time; and, having made up his mind not to go, my theory is that the bending of the leg takes his mind from the original thought."

What He Needed.

The physician pondered the case for a few minutes before he ventured an opinion.

"I think your husband needs a rest more than anything else," he said at last. "If he could be convinced of that"——

"But he refuses absolutely to listen to me, Doctor."

She Showed Good Judgment.

Her Selection.—"How did you happen to insure in that particular company?"

"I consulted the wishes of my wife."

"Of course, that's very praiseworthy. But—does she know anything about life-insurance companies?"

"Yes. She investigated, and found that this one always issues the prettiest calendars."—Washington Star.

Wholly Different Now.

Among the Egyptians, engagement rings were always of iron, indicating the mutual sacrifice of liberty. One of the earliest gems used in the engagement ring was the lodestone, which symbolized the force of attraction which drew the maiden from her own family into another.—Philadelphia Record.

HOMES OF THE CLY-EATERS

Yellow clay as a daily food is what many of the people of Winston county, Ala., live and thrive on. The county of Winston is in the northwestern portion of the state and is sparsely settled, its population being poor and appearing to be eking out a mere existence. It is only within the past few years that the amount of taxes collected from the entire county amounted to $1,000. Until 1818 Winstead was forty miles from the nearest railroad and the county court house twenty miles further. Houses for worship and those for educational purposes are few and far between. A majority of Winstead's population live in small log cabins of the rudest kind and eke out a miserable existence by farming, hunting and fishing.

Their farms, or patches, as they call them, are small clearings around their cabins, and are seldom more than a few acres in extent. Their crap (as they invariably say) consists of corn, peas, potatoes and a few who are fortunate enough to own a horse attempt to raise a little cotton. The land is very poor, and, as the crops receive little work, the yield is always small. A few hogs are raised, but the majority depend on the country stores for the few strips of bacon they eat during the year. Here in this county, though, the moonshine stills flourish as the green bay tree. In almost every cave and on every little brook among the hills may be found a still whose undertaker's delight is produced by the soft light of the moon and where Uncle Sam fails to get his pull-down of 90 cents on the gallon. These people are too far from market to sell their corn for money, but they can convert it into good, straight liquor, carry it in kegs or jugs to the more thickly settled neighborhoods a few miles away and obtain a few dollars in money, some tobacco, coffee, and snuff for the women folks. Men women and children are all slaves to the tobacco habit. The women chew, smoke, and dip snuff, but "dipping" is generally a Sunday luxury, as snuff is hard for them to get.

The clay eaten by these people is found along the banks of the small mountain stream in inexhaustible quantities, and is of a dirty white color usually, sometimes a pale yellow. It has a peculiar oily appearance, and the oil keeps it from sticking to the hands or mouth. When dry it does not crumble, and a few drops of water will easily soften it until it can be rolled into any shape desired. The clay is almost without taste, but evidently possesses some nourishment, as these people declare they can subsist upon it for days without any other food whatever. They place a small piece in the mouth and hold it there until it dissolves, and is swallowed in small quantities at a time. The quantities eaten at one time varies from one lump as large as a pea for a child or beginner to a lump as large as a man's fist for those who have eaten it for years. These people eat the clay with a ravenous relish, and the only bad effect seems to be the bad appearance it gives the skin of those who become addicted to the habit. The skin turns pale, so pale, in fact, as to give the face the pallor of death, and then later on it turns a sickly pale yellow, a color closely resembling some of the clay eaten. Children who become addicted to clay eating grow old, at least in appearance, prematurely, and their faces lose forever the bright glow of youth and health. Strange as it may appear, there is little sickness among the clay eaters, and they live as long as the average of mankind, this proving that clay eating is not fatal in its effect.

Muscular Balance.

In an actor's face the muscles are exercised as thoroughly as are the body muscles of an athlete who is undergoing a systematic course in a gymnasium. Hence, in a typical actor's face, when seen at rest, no one group of expression muscles outpulls the others; and, as a consequence of this state of muscular balance, there is about it a peculiar aspect, suggestive of a mask.

Primitive Sounds.

The sounds most easily produced in infancy, such as pa, ma, da, and the like, are generally used to signify father and mother; but it is a singular fact that what signifies father in one language means mother in another. In the Georgian language, for instance, spoken in the mountains between the Caspian and Black seas, dada means mother, and mamma father.

Not a Success in Politics.

LIFE OF TOLSTOI.

INFORMATION CONCERNING HIS EARLY LITERARY STRUGGLES.

Count Leo Tolstoi, to-day the most remarkable figure in Russia, has once more attracted the attention of all Europe by his renewed attempts to secure imperial permission for the deportation of the members of the long oppressed Dhoukhobortsi.

It was in 1852 that Count Leo Tolstoi sent to The Contemporian of St. Petersburg his first literary work, "Childhood," which he presented without a signature. It was only when the poet Nekrassoff, who was the director of The Contemporian, urged him to sign his writings and assured him that no Russian review had the right to publish an anonymous article that the author decided to sign his name to his work. Nekrassoff praised his first work, but at the same time wrote to Tolstoi:

"As to the question of honoraries, I neglected to speak of it in my first letter for the following reasons: It is the custom (with our reviews) not to pay for the first work offered to the public by a debutant. Our greatest authors, Gontcharof, Turgeneff, myself, we all have passed by that road. I advise you to submit to this rule, promising you for your subsequent works the highest price, the price we pay our best writers—fifty rubles an impression leaf (sixteen pages)' Another motive for my omission of this subject in my letter was this: Before speaking of it I wished to see if the opinion of the public should accord with my own. It is certainly in your favor. I am very happy to see that I was not misled by my opinion of your first work, and it is with a lively satisfaction that I offer you the above conditions."

Three years later, in 1855, Tolstoi published in The Contemporain his "Souvenirs of Sevastopol," which suffered severely at the hands of the censor. In regard to that work Nekrassoff wrote to Tolstoi:

"The horrible mutilation which your article suffered has turned my blood. I cannot think of it even now without rage and sorrow * * * Your work shall not be lost. It must always bear witness to the rare power which was able to exhibit a truth as strong and as healthy as that contained in your writings under conditions which would have made it impossible for any one but you to do such work. I cannot tell you how highly I esteem your writings, and to speak in general terms, how highly I esteem the tendencies of your talent and all the qualities which render it so vigorous and so new. It is just exactly what Russian society needs—the truth, the truth of which here remains so little in our literature since the death of Gogol. You are right when you give so large a place to his love of truth. I do not know any one in our day who makes himself as warmly loved as the one to whom I write these words, and I have only one fear. It is that time and the misery of reality may make of you what they have made of the majority of us by killing the energy, without which there are no writers—in fact, such as we need in Russia. You are young, and there are changes in course of preparation, which, let us hope, may finish well, and perhaps then your career may be brilliant. I will not console you by saying that your work, even mutilated as it is, has been considered admirable by many people. We who know the work in its plentitude know that, mutilated as it is, it is only a mass of words without cohesion, a work whose intimate meaning has disappeared. Your story, the 'Coupe du Bois,' has suffered less from the censor, although in that also several inestimable features have been suppressed. My opinion of this novel is that in its form it reminds us of Turgeneff, but the resemblance ends there. All the rest belongs to you alone, and you only could have written it. Do not neglect such subjects. In all that concerns soldiers our literature furnishes nothing but trivalties. Under whatever form you may express what you know of military life your writings will be interesting and useful in the highest degree.

That Tolstoi profited by the counsels of Nekrassoff we can see in his celebrated romance, "War and Peace," which he wrote not long after he received the poet's advice.

Why an Elephants Neck is Short.

The reason of the shortness of the elephant's neck is, that the head of the animal is so heavy that were it placed at the end of a neck of a length proportionate to the dimensions of that organ in other animals, an almost incalculable amount of muscular force would be necessary to elevate and sustain it. The almost total absence of a neck obviates the difficulty, and the trunk serves as a substitute. The uses and advantages of a long neck, peculiarly exemplified in the giraffe, which contains only the same number of vertebral articulations as in the elephant, are in the latter supplied by the trunk or proboscis, by which he is enabled to carry food to his mouth and to drink by suction. This curious organ contains a vast number of small muscles variously interlaced, is extremely flexible, endowed with the most exquisite sensibility, and the utmost diversity of motion, and compensates amply for the absence of a long neck.

SPORTING.

THE GREAT INDOOR GAME

WHAT IS GOING ON IN LOCAL BASKET BALL CIRCLES.

Happenings of Interest to Plainfield Enthusiasts—What the Local Teams are Doing—Gossip Among the Players.

The basket ball team of the Summit Y. M. C. A. will attempt this evening to turn the tables on the five from the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. The match will be played in the local association gymnasium. The manager of the Summit team has written to Manager George E. Fuller, of the Plainfield team, saying that the Summit boys have been practicing hard for the game and will promise to give the home combination a lively time of it. The game is the second of a series. The first was played last fall in Summit, Plainfield winning easily. The game is called for 8:45 o'clock. Owing to the limited capacity of the visitors' gallery, those who wish to secure seats are advised to go early.

GOLF.

The coming season gives promise of being very successful with the Park Golf Club. An enteresting schedule of events will be arranged, and after the course is properly worked it will be in fine condition. A decided feature will be the usual afternoon teas, and an effort will be made to make them even more successful than last year, if that is possible.

As soon as the weather permits work will be started on the greens of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and will be pushed rapidly so that if possible p'ay can be resumed at an early date. There is a desire on the part of the members to make the schedule of events cover less time this year, so that they can have more time to individual play. A notable change has been made in the golf committee. Last year W. T. Kaufman was chairman of this committee which performed the work in a highly efficient manner. Mr. Kaufman has been obliged to resign from the committee on account of a pressure of business, and he will be unable to attend to the work Sylvanus L. Schoonmaker, also a member of the same committee, has resigned. Lewis E. Waring has been appointed to fill Mr. Kaufman's position and it is likely that the committee will be com posed of younger people than those who served last year. The committee as yet has not been announced.

AROUND THE BASES.

There is little prospect of baseball at the Crescent Oval this summer except for an occasional game by the High School boys. The High School team has made arrangements to play there and will schedule matches for Saturday mornings and week day afternoons. B. A. Mumford has announced, however, that he will put no team on the diamond this year. He had all the experience he wanted last season. Robert C. Wood, who backed the Riverdale Field Club, will not be out here either, he says. He is too busy to handle a nine this year and the indifferent support he received from the townsfolk has prejudiced him against another attempt in Plainfield.

AT THE TRAPS.

There was a shoot at Terry's farm Wednesday afternoon. The principal event of the afternoon was the match between "Pony" Lambert and "Al" Calloway. It was at ten birds for $30. The men tied with seven birds each. The shoot-off was at three birds. Lambert killed two and Calloway none, giving Lambert the victory. Sweepstakes followed.

VARICUS SPORTS.

The open dumb bell contest and the open bar bell contest at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium will be run off as one on the evening of Saturday, March 25th. There are so few contestants for that style of events that Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood has decided that there will be no trouble in holding both on the same night.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

Shannon and Mack, who were in the bowling contest at the Catholic Club and won first prize, also secured the prize for the highest average.

FUNERAL OF A HIBERNIAN.

Obsequies Over Remains of Walter Berry Attended by A. O. H.

The funeral of Walter Berry was held yesterday afternoon from the house, 660 South Second street. Rev. Father Smyth officiated and the services were attended by over 100 members of the A. O. H. to which the deceased belonged.

The funeral was held from the house instead of the church, the invariable rule with Roman Catholics, because of the 40 hours' devotion which was begun in the church at high mass yesterday, and which will continue until 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. The floral decorations consisted of two pillows of flowers, one from the A. O. H. and the other from the Ladies' Auxiliary.

The pall bearers were Joseph Galbraith, John Donnelly, Patrick Devier, Francis Donnelly, Edward Birmingham and Patrick O'Sullivan. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

THE GREAT SILAS D. COMING HERE.

His publication, The Real Estate News, will be published in the future from either Plainfield or Westfield, but whichever it is Mr. Drake says that Plainfield will come in for a large amount of free advertising.

DENOUNCED CAKEWALKS.

Yesterday morning at the Mt. Olive Baptist church the pastor, Rev. E. E. Jackson, preached a strong sermon from the text "No Rest Here for the Redeemed," after which two persons came forward and united with the church. There have been additions at this church every Sunday since the pastor commenced his special sermons. Last evening at 7:30 o'clock Rev. B. W. Hand preached an able sermon in which he denounced cakewalks and public balls and said that these are not the places to find Christians.

Communion Service.

Last night communion services were held at Bethel chapel, corner of Washington and Fifth streets. Two persons were received into the church by confession of their faith.

A Narrow Escape.

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in eight bottles. It has cured me and thank God, I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's Drug store.

Regular size 50c. and $1.00. Guaranteed or price refunded.

This advertisement tells of the greatest event ever known. We have purchased the entire stocks of Messrs. Woodhull, Goodale & Bull, of Syracuse, and Quiri & Wilkie, of Amsterdam, N. Y., at a spot cash price, so very much below the real value of the merchandise that a statement of the exact figures would seem marvelous. A great many retail dealers would gladly take this fine stock of clothing off our hands at a good round profit if we desired to sell that way. But having acquired this $15,000 stock at such a ridiculously low figure, we wish to use it to introduce ourselves with our first sale of the season. On account of the way which we have purchased this stock, we will tomorrow and throughout this great sale offer many goods at less than half and less than one-third their usual value.

THE CITY WILL FIGHT DISTRICT COURT BILL.

Council Authorizes Corporation Counsel to Approve It.

NOW IN THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. BARROWS SAY THE MEASURE IS TYPICAL OF ELIZABETH.

C. W. Meeker Secures the Contract for Making Repairs and Improvements to the Sewer System—Y. M. C. A. Wants Lower Tax Valuation—Street Committee Furnishes Plenty of Business for Council.

The Common Council passed a resolution last night which instructs Corporation Counsel Marsh to appear before the proper Legislative committee and oppose the enactment of what is known as the Squire Bill, which provides that Union county shall pay the expenses of the District Court at Elizabeth, which is now maintained by Elizabeth. Mr. Barrows stated that if the bill becomes a law it means that Plainfield will have to pay $800 for which she will receive practically nothing. He said further that it is another case of where Elizabeth wants everything and wants Plainfield to help them. In his opinion he thought this was the biggest steal yet perpetrated, and he thought the move should be defeated. Every member concurred with him and the resolution was adopted unanimously.

The first matter considered before the regular order of business was taken up was the bids offered for making repairs and improvements to the sewer system, as advertised previously. Four bids were received as follows: C. W. Meeker, Patsy Christmas, of Plainfield; A. Coster, of Orange; A. B. Hamlin, of East Orange. All bids were in proper form and the necessary certified check accompanied them. Mr. Meeker's bid was the lowest and by resolution of the Council he received the work. His bid in round figures for the principal part of the work was $2,879 while the next lowest bidder was Patsy Christmas, whose figures were $2,936. The bids of the other two men were very much higher.

In a communication President S. A. Cahoone, of the Y. M. C. A., petitioned the Council to place a true valuation on the association property, claiming that the present valuation of $18,600 is too high. The matter was referred to the committee on assessment and collection of taxes.

George J. Tobin petitioned the Council to refund $16.94, being the amount of tax paid twice on the property located at 701-713 West Sixth street. The request was granted.

At this time Mr. Barrows presented a batch of business for the consideration of the Council. The first matter called for the adoption of the plans and specifications drawn for the proposed repairs and improvement of the sewer system.

The next resolution provided for a two weeks' notice in the local papers, that the Council would receive bids for constructing the proposed Park avenue storm sewer Monday evening, April 3d. This was followed with another resolution introducing a corporation notice which includes the plans and specifications for constructing the Park avenue sewer.

Another resolution by Mr. Barrows provided for an advertisement to be inserted in The Engineering News, New York, to the effect that the bids for the above work will be received April 3d.

An important matter, introduced by Mr. Barrows was an ordinance providing for the laying and maintenance of sidewalks in the city. The ordinance is drafted to comply with a recent enactment by the Legislature on the subject. It provides for a certain kind of stone with specified measurements. It also provides for the proper notice to the property owners, and gives the Council authority to lay walks and effect a lien on property. The ordinance also extends the sidewalk district to some extent and makes it obligatory that all walks be laid the same way, according to grade furnished by Street Commissioner Gavett.

Following the introduction of the above ordinance, Mr. Barrows presented a corporation notice providing for a public hearing of the ordinance Monday evening, April 3d.

Mr. Barrows offered still another resolution to the effect that where the Council is obliged to lay walks that the money for that purpose be taken from the appropriation for street work. This action was taken to obviate trouble heretofore in doing such work.

This concluded the business of the evening and the Council went into secret session to consider appropriations and plans for the reorganization of the fire department.

SUMMIT BOYS BEATEN AT BASKET BALL

The Plainfield Team Won An Easy Victory.

VISITING TEAM WAS LATE.

SUMMIT TEAM SCORED ONLY ON FREE THROWS ON FOULS.

Plainfield Boys Guarded Them Too Well Most of the Time—When They Did Get a Chance Their Aim Was Poor—Long and Smith Did Clever Work—Score Stood 16 to 0 in First Half.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basket ball team had rather an easy time of it last evening in their match with the Summit Y. M. C. A. team in the local association gymnasium. The Summit boys played a hard, rough game but it couldn't stand up against the fast team work of the local five and Summit went down by a score of 20 to 3.

While Plainfield did not have much trouble in the match played at Summit, it was said that the Summit combination was vastly improved now and would give the Plainfielders a lively time. It was a mistake. At the very start the local players began to score and had no trouble in rolling up sixteen points in the first half. Long and Smith did some particularly clever work. They played right together and their excellent work resulted in four of the goals.

In the second half Bonny took Long's place and the Plainfield team slowed up. Smith was the only one to score in the second half. There were an unusual number of fouls called. While the playing was not much rougher than on previous occasions, fouls were twice called on both sides for rough play. Summit's only score was made by goals thrown on fouls. When it came to goal throwing from the field, they seldom had a chance and when they did the throwing was very wild.

The Summit team came over in a stage and was very late arriving. The game did not begin until 9:40 o'clock and then only fifteen minute halves were played. A large audience was present.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		SUMMIT.
Long, Bonny	right forward	Muchmore
E. Moraller	left forward	McDonald
Egan	centre	Wagner
M. Moraller	right guard	Foster

FELL THROUGH FLOOR.

John G. Bantle, of Watchung Avenue, Met With an Accident Friday.

John G. Bantle, the Watchung avenue tailor, met with an accident Friday from which he has now only just recovered. He was walking on the floor beams of his new building on Watchung avenue, when he slipped and fell through the open work into the cellar, landing in a heap of rubbish. Luckily no bones were broken, and he escaped with sundry scratches and bruises which were severe enough, however, to confine him to his bed for a day or two Elizabeth Industries Growing.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Elizabeth, March 14.—Lewis Nixon, the Elizabethport shipbuilder, has such a large number of orders on hand that he has been forced to enlarge the capacity of his plant, and has leased Dolan's wharf, adjoining the shipyard. There is also great activity at the Singer Sewing Machine Works, where business is brisker than it has been in fifteen years. Several of the departments are working overtime, and the boiler-shop employes have to work on Sundays. There are over forty five hundred persons employed now at the Singer plant.

NO DUAL MEET WITH BRUNSWICK Y. M. C. A.

Plainfield Objected to a Professional Gymnast.

CONTEST IS CALLED OFF.

BRUNSWICK WANTED FANCY GYMNASTICS INSTEAD OF CLASS MOVES.

Neither Side Would Agree to Other Proposition—Mr. Heywood Also Asked That the Brunswick Team Be Composed Strictly of Amateurs—Mr. Shetter Refused—Challenge Sent to Brunswick.

The proposed dual gymnastic contest between the Plainfield and New Brunswick Y. M. C. A.'s is off. This sudden action was immediately brought about by the refusal of New Brunswick to accede to the terms of Plainfield. The real cause was, however, that New Brunswick had a professional gymnast on its team and Plainfield did not care to injure the amateur standing of its gymnasts by allowing them to compete against him.

Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood went to New Brunswick Saturday afternoon to see N. W. Shetter, physical director of the New Brunswick association, with a view to settling the final arrangements for the dual contest. The nature of the moves had not been decided upon definitely as yet.

The New Brunswick men wanted to have fancy exhibition moves while Mr. Heywood thought it much fairer to have the regular recognized class move. The New Brunswick team was composed of old gymnasts who had had long experience. One was the gymnastic team of a New York club and was a recognized professional. Mr. Heywood insisted that he should be withdrawn as his appearance in the dual athletic contest had come near suspending the members of the Plainfield team. The New Brunswick management could not see it in that light.

No satisfactory agreement about the moves or men could be reached. So the $5 deposited by Plainfield was returned to Mr. Heywood and the contest was called off.

Mr. Heywood has now sent a challenge to New Brunswick for a dual gymnastic contest with class moves and both teams to be composed of amateurs only. It remains to be seen whether the challenge will be accepted or not.

IS TRACTION CO. RESPONSIBLE?

Hard Question for Dunellen Justice of Peace to Decide.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, March 14—The case in tort of Victor D. Schomp, of Plainfield, against the New Brunswick Traction Company for the value of a horse killed by one of the company's cars last winter, has been tried, and today Justice Warden is expected to render his decision. The case is a hard one to decide, for no particular value was set upon the horse by the plaintiff. Then the traction company at the trial showed good reasons why they should not be held responsible for the horse's death, as the animal was on their tracks, when there was plently of room for him on other parts of the road.

Codington & Swackhamer were Schomp's lawyers, and Frederick Weigel represented the company.

RUTGERS GLEE CLUB COMING

Will Entertain at High School Athletic Association Benefit

While final action has not yet been taken by the committee in charge, it has been practically decided that the entertainment for the benefit of the High School Athletic Association will be held in the Y. M. C. A hall the evening of Easter Monday, April 3d The entertainment will be furnished by the Rutgers College Glee Club, assisted by a reciter from the college. This will be the first appearance of the Rutgers boys in this city for several years, and they will undoubtedly receive a hearty reception from the townsfolk. It is the intention of the High School associations to make it a popular price entertainment.

SCHOOL TEACHERS PLAY BASKET BALL.

They Have Organized a Team in Plainfield.

THE FIRST PRACTICE HELD.

MET AT GYMNASIUM IN WHITTIER BUILDING LAST NIGHT.

Miss Bessie Fitz Randolph, of the High School Team, Will Coach the Beginners — Elizabeth Schoolma'ams Have a Team, Too—Practice to Be Held Regularly—Those Who Organized Team.

Seven of the young women who are employed in this city as instructors in the public schools organized a basket ball team last evening. With the assistance of three other young women they played their first game last evening under the coaching of Miss Bessie Fitz Randolph, of the High School team.

The school teachers of Elizabeth have a basket ball team as have most of the teachers' colleges and normal schools. Among the most enthusiastic spectators of basket ball at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium have been some of these young women who have now decided to take up the game for themselves.

The movement was started sometime ago by Miss Mary Griswold and Miss Harriet Fillmer, both teachers at the Irving School. They interested others in the project, and it was finally decided to start at once if permission could be obtained to use the gymnasium on the second floor of the Whittier building where the High School girls play. Superintendent Maxson granted the necessary permission and the first practice was called for last evening.

Some of the young womem, who were interested in the game, knew it only as they had seen it from the visitors' gallery at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. So Miss Randolph, who is one of the best and most experienced players on the girls' High School team, will coach the novices in the game.

The first practice was held last evening at the Whittier building under the direction of Miss Randolph. Beside the seven teachers, there were three other young women to fill out the number so that there might be two teams. The practice was very satisfactory and will be continued regularly up to the close of the playing season.

ZEPHYRS TO DISBAND

ANOTHER COMPANY OF VOLUNTEERS TO BECOME NON EST.

Hook and Ladder Boys Took Decisive Action Last Night—Funds to be Divided Among Those in Good Standing.

The example set by the other volunteer fire companies in this city has now been followed by the Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company. At a meeting of the company held last evening it was decided to disband that organization in a month without waiting for action on the part of the Common Council.

For some months the Zephyr Company, together with the other organizations of the local volunteer fire department, has been waiting for the re-organization of the department. The term of service of all the members has expired, and they are all entitled to exemption. Some of the members were for disbanding at once, but the more conservative persuaded them to wait and give the Council a chance to make the necessary changes in the department.

Last night a meeting of the Zephyr Company was held and was attended by over twenty of the members. The attendance was the largest at a meeting for a long time. The meeting was a lively one. A majority of the members expressed themselves as being in favor of a disbandment. It was accordingly decided to disband the company in a month and divide the funds in the treasury among the members in good standing.

To Loan $8,700.

At the regular meeting of the Union Building and Loan Association last evening arrangements were made for the loaning of $8,700. There is not one penny in the treasury now that is idle, and all the money is out making more money for the members. At the next meeting a large number of shares will be subscribed for. This association is starting off under most favorable auspices and there are good prospects for plenty of business.

No Services Till Friday.

Owing to the sickness of Rector Simpson there will be no services at St. Stephen's church until next Friday.

DESERVING POOR TO WORK IN SOAP FACTORY

Organized Aid Association to Establish an Industry.

SCHEME LOOKS PRACTICAL.

IT IS IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION IN ORANGE.

The Association Also Plans to Secure and Fit Up Small Houses for the Use of Poor People at Moderate Rent—Latter Plan Cannot Be Carried Out Without Considerable Expense.

The quarterly meeting of the Organized Aid Association was held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last night. A few reports were read and some suggestions made, after which the time was taken up by H. P. Reynolds and W. I. Nicholl, the latter from Brooklyn. Mr Reynolds read a report of the Conference of Charities, which he attended in New York last May, and Mr. Nicholl, who is secretary of the Bureau of Charities, of Brooklyn, told something about his work there.

Col. Mason W. Tyler presided at the meeting. The first report read, that of the treasurer, showed that the association had a balance in the treasury of $99 86. The receipts were $284.66, and the expenditures $184.80.

The executive committee had two unique plans to propose, which they intend to put into operation as soon as possible. One is the establishment of small industries by which the deserving poor can be helped until something substantial in the way of employment can be found for them; and the other is to fit up, clean, neat homes, which can be let at a small rent to those needing assistance, until they have been put on their feet again. But to do this capital is needed, so it is not likely that this second plan can be carried out just yet.

The industry which is under consideration is the establishment of a soap factory. The scheme looks practical, they say, and point out one in Orange that is self-supporting. No capital is required to start it, neither does it require skilled labor. A superintendent of experience is needed, however, and when the association is ready the superintendent from Orange has promised to come over and teach them for a small sum a day. The sewing room and the woodyard, the employment committee reported, are working well.

Rev. Mr. Nickerson reported for the district committee that he was surprised to learn that many of their applicants are people who have never had to ask for help before, and said that people who heretofore were comfortably situated, had met with reverse and were compelled to ask the Organized Aid to be their friends. He said that the number of applicants is decreasing from year to year.

Mr Nicholl, who made the address of the evening, spoke on the "Value of Organized Charity to the Benevolent and Those Needing Assistance." Mr. Nicholl has been in charitable work for many years and hence his remarks were listened to with attention and profit. He spoke of the harm done by good hearted people who give indiscriminating to every beggar who knocks at their back door, and pointed out how much more good they would do themselves as well as the applicant for alms if they would devote that money to the Organized Aid, and let the poor be helped through the regular channels. He described some of the ways in which the poor are helped in Brooklyn, where they have a wood yard and a laundry in which the man or woman receives a small sum of money for their day's work, and at the same time are helped to something permanent.

Miss Schroeder, a niece of Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, entertained the audience with two vocal solos during the evening. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Dumont.

A Lucky Township.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Roselle, March 14.—As Union Township finds itself with nearly $2,000 in the treasury, the voters will not be called upon this election to make appropriations for township expenses, but will vote to use the money in the hands of the treasurer. The question of a drainage and sewerage system will be voted on, and if carried it is expected that the secession of the First Election district into a borough will be dropped.

EXPLOSION AND FIRE IN A CANDY STORE.

Big Show Window Blown Into the Street.

CAUSE IS A MYSTERY.

EXPLOSION REVEALED A FIRE IN THE BUILDING.

Flames Were at Work in Back of Second Floor—Fire Alarm Whistle Didn't Sound at First—Fire Mostly Confined to Room Where it Originated—Loss Will Reach $500—Covered by Insurance.

A mysterious explosion blew out the big plate glass windows in the front of John O. Campbell's confectionary store, 112 West Front street, late last evening, and gave the first warning of the fire within that was threatening the building with destruction. A quick response by the fire department checked the conflagration before the fire had spread far from the room in which it originated.

The first floor of the building, 112 West Front street, which is owned by Mr. Campbell, is occupied by his candy store. The second floor is used as a store room. On the third floor are the rooms where the candy is made.

Mr. Campbell and a lad in his employ closed up the store shortly after ten o'clock. There was a solitary Welsbach gas light burning in the central part of the store. There was also a stove on the third floor.

Half an hour later Henry Liefke, of West Front street, was standing in front of Crosby & Hill's store watching the decorations of the show windows. He was suddenly startled by a dull roar and the crash of broken glass. He saw the window in Campbell's store blown into the street amid a rush of smoke. He promptly turned in an alarm from keyless box No. 12. The alarm worked all right, but the whistle gave only one blast.

Patrolman Vanderweg thought that the box was out of order and sent in another alarm from the other box No. 12, immediately after. The second alarm brought out the entire department.

The firemen responded in quick time and found the fire in the rear of the building on the second story. Chief Doane telephoned to Manager Charles W. Runyon, of the telephone company, who hurried around to the power house and sent in an alarm on the whistle.

The stream from the chemical engine did good service in the front part of the store. Three lines of regular hose were laid in at the rear. The first alarm came in at 10:45 o'clock and the fire was under control inside of half an hour. In an hour the flames were entirely extinguished, but the department did not leave the scene until after 12 o'clock.

Most of the fire was confined to the back room of the second floor where a quantity of supplies was stored. The floor was burned through in one place. The ceiling was also burned through in another.

There was no apparent cause for the fire or for the explosion. While the big window was completely shattered, the interior of the store was not injured by the force of the explosion, and the gas in the centre of the store was not extinguished. The fire started in the back room on the second floor from some cause unknown. Chief Doane says that it may have been spontaneous combustion. There was no odor of gas about the store right after the explosion. The Chief says there was hardly time for a "back draft" explosion.

The loss on the building will amount to $350, and on the contents to $150, all of which is covered by insurance. The adjacent building, owned by Mrs. Samuel Dreier, was slightly damaged by smoke and water.

STRUGGLE NOW IS FOR THE DECIDING VOTES.

Exciting Election Time in the Borough Today.

ALL ARE WORKING HARD.

CANDIDATE SMALLEY LOOKING AFTER HIS OWN INTERESTS

Mayor Wilson's Canvass is Being Looked After by His Friends—Voting is Exceptionally Heavy—Workers Within 100 Feet Limit of the Polls—Betting is Still Going on Among the Venturesom.

This is election day in the borough, and it is safe to say that never before has there been such a bitter contest in two political parties, and what makes the battle more exciting is the fact that both parties are divided. An unusually large number of workers are employed and carriages are kept going constantly getting out the voters.

The voting started in promptly at 6 o'clock this morning and has been lively every since. The way the vote is coming out is a surprise to even the oldest resident, and it is predicted that nearly 1,100 votes will be polled.

Today forenoon 214 votes were polled in the first district, while 180 were polled in the second district. This is high, especially in the first district, according to the vote polled at the last election at the same time. At that time only 180 were cast. Judging by the length of time a voter remains in the booth it looks as though considerable scratching is being done by both sides.

In the vicinity of the polls there is an unusually large number of people, and no attempt is being made to keep the crowd back to the 100 yard limit, in fact in some cases the crowd reaches almost to the place of voting.

In spite of the large crowd out there seems to be no disturbance and opponents meet friendly and exchange courtesies. N. B. Smalley, Republican candidate for Mayor, is on the scene and is personally looking after his own canvass, assisted by his corps of workers.

Mayor Wilson appeared at the polls early and cast his vote, but he did not stay long. In fact he did not frequent the polls during the day. He is leaving his interests to the leaders of his party.

Considerable money has changed hands and the betting at times is brisk. Friends of Mr. Smalley claim that they can find no money to cover, while the same thing is claimed on the other side, but somehow the money gets together and betting goes on.

A singular coincident was noticed early this morning when four ex-Mayors met in the doorway at the first district polls. They were W. L. Saunders, B. A. Hegeman, Jr., H. E. Needham and Charles Place. Courtesies were exchanged and the best of feeling was evidenced.

Levi Kline is serving in the second district as a challenger and during the morning an attempt was made to displace him on the ground that he was not a voter in that district. This complaint would not stand, however, and Mr. Kline remained at his post.

One thing conceded by all the workers is that it is impossible to get an adequate idea of how the vote stands notwithstanding all calculations. They all say that not till the vote is counted will they be able to ascertain the result. All sorts of boasts are made, however.

In the contest for Councilmen there seems to be just as much rivalry, although the great issue is in the contest for the Mayoralty honors. There are a great many people who claim that the straight Republican ticket will be elected, while some not so confident only claim that the Republican Councilmen will get by. There is little interest in the contest for other offices.

A thing that has excited no little interest is the fact that several well-known politicians from this city are circulating among the boroughites and using their influence, a thing unheard of before in the borough elections.

Exciting times are looked for tonight after the polls close and no doubt a large crowd will be on hand to watch the proceedings with great interest.

HARD TO EXPLAIN.

If This Had Occurred Anywhere Else Than Plainfield There Might Be Grave Doubts About It.

If this were published anywhere else but in Plainfield, that is, if the statement given below went the rounds of the press, readers in Boston or New Orleans would not believe it. In the very nature of things men and women will not believe that a simple little pill would have any effect on humanity when the subject is in a serious condition. When it has that effect; when the party is a living witness, perhaps a neighbor, Plainfield people at least cannot possibly deny it, particularly so when investigation is courted. Now ask Mrs. R. Wortman, living with her daughter Mrs. S. E. Cook of 204 Somerset street, and see if she will not corroborate the following.

"I used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results for severe pain across my back and hips, which no doubt was caused by the kidneys being out of order. It was painful for me to stoop or bend forward and I could not sit ten minutes in one position but had to be constantly changing about. It was the same way at night time. I used many different kinds of medicine recommended for kidney troubles but I could not see that any of them benefitted me. Doan's Kidney Pills were procured for me at L. W. Randolph's drug store and it is the only remedy I ever used that gave me any relief. I always keep a supply of them on hand and would not think of being without them. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and advise all who suffer from a lame back to give them a fair trial."

SAMPSON IS MODEST

Stands Aside and Asks Promotion of Subordinates.

ADDRESSES THE PRESIDENT

The Rear Admiral Says Reward Should Not Be Withheld from Officers About Whose Cases There Is No Doubt or Discussion—Letter Sent Through Secretary Long.

Washington, March 14.—Another interesting contribution to the Sampson-Schley controversy was received at the Navy Department yesterday. It was a letter from Rear Admiral Sampson addressed to President McKinley through the Secretary of the Navy, and contained a request that the President renew the appointment of those officers about whose services there has been no discussion in the Senate, in order that they might not suffer from the effects of the Sampson-Schley controversy. The nomination of those officers for promotion and advancement in grade numbers were defeated in the Senate through the attitude of Admiral Schley's friends. Admiral Sampson's letter follows:

"United States Flagship New York,
First Rate.

"Havana, Cuba, March 9.

"Sir: I respectfully ask your attention to the facts contained in this letter and that it may be officially filed as part of my record in the United States Navy.

"When the late war was threatening I was placed in command of the North Atlantic fleet, and after the declaration of war was appointed by the President a Rear Admiral and confirmed in my command.

"This duty and responsibility came to me entirely unsought, nor had I any special wish for it, though recognizing the great honor then conferred upon me. My sole aim was to achieve success—to blockade Cuba, destroy Cervera's fleet, and to maintain an efficient war fleet.

"It is not necessary to dwell on the incidents of the war, which are now well known. Based upon these incidents certain officers, distinguished for faithful service, were named by me, in the exercise of my natural duty as Commander-in-chief, for promotion or such other rewards as you, sir, might deem desirable. These names you have been pleased to nominate to the United States Senate for promotion, and you have done me the honor to add my name to that list of officers.

"It now appears that the Senate, though well disposed to most of the names on that list, has, for reasons not necessary to be here discussed, objected to my promotion, and has similarly failed to confirm the deserving officers about whose merits there has been no doubt or discussion.

"Hitherto, Mr. President, undisturbed by any eager desire for advancement, or any other form of reward for doing my duty, I have not specially concerned myself with matters outside of that duty. I have felt that I have done my duty in the conduct of the West Indian naval campaign to the utmost extent of my ability as thoroughly as I was able, and if no reward should come, that I would be satisfied with the consciousness of having done my best. I did not however, anticipate that dissatisfaction with any act or acts of mine would cause the Senate to withhold from other officers a promotion which they have well deserved, and which has been promptly granted in similar circumstances to others.

"I therefore respectfully suggest, Mr. President, that your appointment of these officers about whom there is no discussion should at once be rewarded in order that they may thus secure their promotions under the Personnel bill to which they are entitled and without creating confusion.

"Very respectfully,
"W. T. Sampson.

"To the President of the United States of America, through the Secretary of the Navy."

Rear Admiral Higginson's Case.

Washington, March 14.—The Navy Department officers are in a quandry in regard to the request or Rear Admiral F. J. Higginson for a withdrawal of his promotion from Captain to Commodore for his services in the war with Spain, which enabled him to obtain his present advanced position in the list of Rear Admirals. For some reason that has not been explained, the Senate confirmed the nomination of Capt. Higginson to be a Commodore, while declining to confirm thos of other officers nominated for advancement.

Secretary Long said that he did not regard the request of Rear Admiral Higginson as a mere empty form, but nothing could be done at this time to comply with his request that he be restored to the place on the naval list which he would have occupied had the Senate not confirmed his nomination for promotion. It was evident, said the Secretary, that Rear Admiral Higginson meant what he said, and it was the purpose of the Secretary to call the attention of Congress to the case, with a view of securing legislation that would provide that if the officers nominated for promotion for war services were not advanced, Admiral Higginson should be dropped to his former place.

The Navy Department is powerless to help the Admiral, as his nomination as Commodore was confirmed and a commission issued, and his transfer to the grade or Rear Admiral made in accordance with his standing on the list of Commodores.

To Muster Out Lee's Volunteers.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—Orders will probably be issued from the war department to-day for the mustering out of nineteen or twenty regiments of volunteers, most of them belonging to General Lee's command, the Seventh Army Corps.

These regiments comprise practically all of the volunteer force remaining in the service.

The primary reason for haste in mustering out the regiments which are now in Cuba is that the quarantine regulations in most of the southern states will go into effect on May 1, and the war department will avoid great inconvenience and some additional expense by landing the volunteers in the United States before the end of April.

NICARAGUA CANAL SCHEME.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—Senator Frye's response to Representative Cannon's statement about the folly of the scheme to pay the Maritime Canal Company five million dollars for a worthless concession in Nicaragua does not clear up the matter by any means. Every one in Washington knows that whatever may have been Mr. Frye's individual innocence of intent, the plan behind the proposed appropriation was to buy out the Maritime Company at a handsome figure.

The point behind which the senator takes refuge is that the president was authorized to appoint appraisers to estimate the value of the company's work as far as it had gone. But even this would have been a waste of money. The Nicaragua canal commission, a highly competent organization, spent a year on the ground and in studying over the various proposed routes must have become abundantly informed of the extent and value of the company's work. For the company, as is well known, exerted itself in every way to impress the commission with the excellence of its route and the practicability of its plan of construction.

There is no reason in the world why Congress or the president should not have obtained gratuitously from this commission all the information needed about what the Maritime Canal Company had done and what the whole thing was worth as it stood.

The trouble with the company probably was that that sort of expert opinion was not what it was seeking, for the commission might not have been willing to recommend to the president the payment of a sufficiently generous sum for the company's "dead horses."

Junta's Work to End.

New York, March 14.—In reference to the breach between General Maximo Gomez and the Cuban assembly, and his deposition by that body from the position of commander-in-chief of the Cuban army, T. Estrada Palma, head of the Cuban delegation in this country, said:

"My position as the representative of the Cuban assembly forbids me to make any comment on the incident, further than to say that I deplore any discord between Cubans, for it has been my dearest wish to see all my countrymen operating to rehabilitate our war-stricken island, to establish a republic upon firm foundations and to restore to the nation tranquility and prosperity."

Mr. Palma was asked to what extent the assembly represented the Cuban army and not the Cuban people.

He answered that the members of the assembly had been chosen at an election in which the voters were the soldiers of the five army corps. He did not know whether the suffrage had been restricted to Cubans in arms.

In the same manner Mr. Palma was asked what General Gomez meant by speaking of himself as a foreigner.

"General Gomez is a citizen of San Domingo. In that respect he is a foreigner."

"Is he not in race, sympathy and service essentially a Cuban?"

"Oh, he has served Cuba with great devotion through many years."

Gomez is Upheld.

Havana, March 14.—A public manifestation of the different patriotic clubs was held at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. Those who took part marched with music and banners to Quinta, where they expressed to General Gomez their adherence to himself and their disapproval of the action of the assembly in removing him from his command as general-in-chief.

There were cheers last night for General Gomez in Central Park and cries against the assembly. In the evening at the theatre, General Gomez was vociferously applauded. The feeling against the assembly is growing.

Boston's Sparrow War.

Boston, Mass., March 14.—Yesterday the city officials began their fifth day's crusade against the sparrow. Men armed with hooks, sticks and ladders climbed trees and arc lamp posts and explored the eaves of the buildings in and about the common, which has been chosen as the first point of attack.

Several months ago Mayor Quincy stated that steps were to be taken to exterminate the sparrow in Boston. First, the nests were to be destroyed, and if this did not diminish their number poison was to be used.

The order was given only after a large number of citizens, including persons of prominence, well known clergymen, physicians and scientists, had signed a petition asking for the prolific little fellow's annihilation for scientific and cleanly reasons.

After the edict went forth for their destruction the mayor's mail was enormously increased by letters from the friends of the sparrows, condemning him and his action in terse and impolite language.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has interested itself, and its protests, accompanied by hundreds of names, may have some effect eventually in stopping the slaughter.

The Christian Endeavorers.

Detroit, Mich., March 14.—The press committee for the International Christian Endeavor Convention to be held here July 5-10, has begun work by issuing a letter setting forth the attractions of Detroit in general, and of the coming convention in particular.

Detroit expects to entertain at least sixty thousand visitors on this occasion.

The letter says that the convention will be characterized by two new features, viz., the employment of a higher grade of music than formerly and lectures upon sociological questions and other present day problems.

The latter feature is designed, however, to supplement and not to supplant the spiritual element which has always been the great characteristic of C. E. conventions.

Glass Factory Destroyed by Fire.

Camden, N. J., March 14.—The factory of the Atco glass Company at Atco was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The loss is fifty thousand dollars, with a partial insurance.

The fire started in the engine room. Nearly twelve thousand boxes of glassware, worth from 2.50 to $3 a box, were in the warehouse ready for shipment and were destroyed.

FILIPINOS ON THE RUN

Wheaton's Brigade Begins the General Advance.

NATIVE VILLAGES TAKEN

Insurgents Cut Off from Communication With the North—Army and Naval Forces Combine in Driving the Insurgents Before Them—Thirty Rebels Killed, Sixteen Wounded in an Engagement.

Manila, March 14.—Gen. Wheaton's provisional brigade, consisting of the 20th and 22d Infantry regiments, two battalions of the 1st Washington Infantry, Troops E, I and K, 4th Cavalry, mounted, and Scott's battery of the 6th Artillery, assisted by a gunboat, advanced at 7 o'clock yesterday from San Pedro and captured Guadaloupe, the gunboat shelled the rebels along the Pasig river.

The troops then swung to the right, took possession of San Nicolas and made an attack upon Pateros.

The insurgents, anticipating the movement of the Americans, retreated to Pasig and Taguig. Scott's battery shelled Pasig vigorously. The advance of the American troops was stopped by the river. The troops of Gens. Anderson, Wheaton and King now comprise our lines.

Gen. Wheaton occupies the bluff commanding the towns of Pasig, Pateros and Taguig. He estimates the strength of the enemy at 1,000. He has passed the obstruction in the way of his reaching Laguna de Bay, breaking the backbone of the insurgents line of communication with the northern forces.

A captured Tagalo engineer says that the insurgent leader, Pio del Pilar, commanding 800 natives, is retreating south toward the lake.

Killed—Private Steward, Company B, 20th Infantry, and Private James Munson of Company K, 22d Infantry.

At 7.30 a. m. a river gunboat started to ward Pasig. The rebels were first encountered by this vessel in the jungle near Guadalupe. Steaming slowly the gunboat poured a terrific fire from her gattling gun into the brush. For all of an hour the whirring of the rapid fire guns alternated with the booming with the heavier pieces on board.

In the meantime Scott's battery, on shore, was shelling the trenches and driving the enemy back. The artillery advanced to the ridge of bamboo and drove a few of the enemy's sharpshooters away with volleys from their carbines. After that little opposition was met.

At this juncture the infantry was sent forward in extended order, the Washington regiment resting on the bank of the river, each regiment deploying on reaching its station and furnishing its own supports. The entire column then wheeled toward the river, driving the enemy toward his supports and then advancing on Guadalupe. The artillery moved to a ridge commanding Pasig and Parteres.

Enemy in Full Flight.

By this time the enemy was in full flight along a line over a mile long, and the firing was discontinued temporarily, to give the troops a rest before making the attack on Pasig. At this stage of the engagement it was raining heavily.

After a short rest Gen. Wheaton resumed the attack on Pasig. Scott's battery, supported by two companies of the Twentieth Infantry, advanced on Guadalupe by the road along the river bank, the remainder of the Twentieth Regiment and the Twenty-second Regiment following with the reserve of the Oregon volunteers.

At 11.30 a. m. the column came in contact with the enemy, and a gunboat steamed to the firing line and cleared the jungle on both sides, while the battery took up a position on the bluff at the right. The first shot from the American field pieces at twelve hundred yards' range dislodged a gun of the enemy at Pasig.

After the town had been shelled, the Twentieth regiment lined up on the bluff and the Twenty-second took up a position on the left of the place, with the cavalry in the center, whereupon the enemy retreated to the town. The gunboat then moved into a bend opposite and a hot fire on the rebel position was maintained along the whole American line until 2.20 p. m.

Thirty of the rebels were killed, sixteen were taken prisoners and the Americans lost six men wounded. The whole American line bivouacked at 5 o'clock.

The Iron Pipe Combination.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 14.—Colonel Clarence E. Burke, one of the promoters of the cast iron pipe trust, states that the big deal has been consummated and that practically all the pipe foundries in the country are included in the combination, which has been incorporated with a capital of thirty million dollars.

"The object of the new company," said Colonel Burke, "will not be to advance prices, as we will simply follow the prices of pig iron and be governed by them. We shall seek to ship from the nearest foundry to the point of consumption, and will not enter the territory of one foundry with the produce of another. None of the plants will be closed down unless the market compels it. General Samuel Thomas will probably be president of the company."

To Fight the Whiskey Trust.

Louisville, Ky., March 14.—Twenty-five big distilleries have seceded from the New York combination, and will operate independent of the trust.

Among the largest of the plants that will fight the combination are: In Louisville the Old Kentucky Distillery, the Fern Cliff Distillery Company, the Rugby Distilling Company, Stitzel Brothers Company, Rosenfeld Brothers Company (two houses), the Old Times Distilling Company, Max Selliger & Co. (two houses), and in Owensboro the Sour Mash Distilling Company, the Eagle Distilling Company, the Davies County Distilling Company, the Glenmore Distillery, J. W. McCulloch, M. P. Mattingly and the Rocksprings Distilling Company.

A resident of Wyocena, Wis., a veteran of the late war, writes that he had suffered from stomach and bowel troubles ever since the war, and had been treated by more than a dozen doctors, besides trying almost all kinds of patent medicines. He tried Ripans Tabules and says that "they are the only thing I ever used that has begun to fill the bill for all kinds of stomach trouble. My daughter," he adds, "is eighteen years old and rather delicate; poor appetite and inclined to be consumptive. Of all the medicines she has tried, the 'Tabules' have done her the most good; she has gained in health and strength so that she has gone to Missouri on a visit."

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

THE DELAWARE CONTEST.

The Legislature Adjourns Without Electing a Senator to Succeed Gray.

Dover, Del., March 14.—Intense excitement attended the meeting of the Delaware legislature the last day of the session.

During the morning there was much interest over a reported combination between Democrats and regular Republicans to elect Levi C. Bird of Wilmington, regular Republican.

Democrats, however, were afraid that any attempt on their part to interfere in the Republican factional fight might induce some Democrats to vote for J. Edward Addicks, and thus secure his election. The Democrats did not hold a conference.

The Republican members conferred and agreed to stand by Addicks to the end. The regular Republicans decided to support Colonel Henry A. Dupont, ex-Senator Anthony Higgins and Rev. Jonathan S. Willis, alternately.

The one hundredth ballot for United States senator was taken by the joint assembly yesterday afternoon. It resulted:

J. Edward Addicks, Union Republican, 20; Willard Saulsbury, Democrat, 12; Anthony Higgins, regular Republican, 10; George Gray, Democrat, 6; Colonel Henry A. Dupont, regular Republican, 1; John Biggs, Democrat, 1; absent, 1; total vote, 50; necessary to a choice, 26.

On the 106th, 107th and 108th ballots Addicks was still in the lead, with 21 votes, but lacking five of the number necessary to elect. The other votes were scattered.

General disorder prevailed in the House when the 110th ballot was taken without change, and Speaker Salmon threatened to clear the gallery. General filibustering followed.

The regular Republicans said that it was better to have no one than to have Addicks, and after another ballot the legislature adjourned sine die without electing a senator.

COMPETING FOR CORPORATIONS.

Delaware Now a Rival of New Jersey and West Virginia.

Dover, March 14.—Yesterday the new corporation law of Delaware went into effect and the corporation business started off busily.

At midnight five men were in line at the office of the secretary of state, waiting for the office to open. As morning came on it developed that each man was anxious to secure the name "Corporation Trust Company of Delaware" for his principals. It was assumed that the Corporation Trust Company would try for the business of bringing about corporations.

One well informed on matters relating to the organization of large corporations, said that New Jersey would probably retain her lead in the matter of registering corporations.

New Jersey's income from this one source will probably reach four million dollars this year.

The fact that her laws on this subject have not been changed in almost thirty years has a great deal of influence. No organization wants to put its business in the hands of a state which is likely to legislate against it. Then, too, New Jersey has received so large an income from incorporations that she feels friendly towards them.

West Virginia saw the situation and amended her laws. Delaware followed and Pennsylvania and other states will soon amend their laws.

New Rebellion for Spain.

Tacoma, Wash., March 14.—Advices by the steamship Victoria from the Orient, state that the insurgent Moros of Palawan Island, one of the group to the north of Borneo, murdered the Spanish governor of Palawan and killed his assistants.

The governor's head was cut off and carried back into the hills to incite a rebellion among the natives, who previously had feared Spain's power. A church and other Spanish buildings were burned.

This news comes from Singapore. Onerous taxes and other burdens imposed by the Spanish caused the natives to strike a blow for freedom. The Spanish mail steamship which called at Port Royalist after the massacre, did nothing except to make inquiries.

A British steamer brought away the governor's wife, several women and children, a priest and twelve soldiers.

General Booth Recovering.

London, March 14.—Inquiries made regarding the dispatch from Melbourne Victoria, published in New York, saying that General William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, was lying so seriously ill there that his recovery was doubtful, show that a dispatch has been received at the headquarters of the Salvation Army here from Adelaide, South Australia.

General Booth has been suffering from dysentery, but is recovering as rapidly as expected. He will be able to proceed to New Zealand to-day.

Presidents Party Off.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—President and Mrs. McKinley and a party of friends left the city at 6.40 o'clock last night for a vacation of ten days or two weeks in Thomasville, Ga., where the train is scheduled to arrive at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The president occupied the magnificent private Pullman observation car Iolanthe, on the rear of the special train, the remainder of which was made up of a compartment car, a sleeper, a dining car and the combination smoking and baggage car.

Firebugs Cause Terror.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 14.—Residents of Ashley, a suburb of Wilkesbarre, are terror stricken over the work of incendiaries. On Saturday they set fire to valuable property, causing a loss of $20,000, and yesterday morning they destroyed the large public school building and two dwellings; loss, $25,000; insurance $14,000.

Eleven teachers were employed and six hundred children are without school accommodations. A mass meeting has been called to take immediate action in the matter.

Librarian of Congress.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—The president yesterday announced the appointment of Herbert Putnam of Boston to be librarian of Congress.

CHOICE CHUCK BEEF

Regarded by Treasurer Tilden as Best Part of the Carcass.

WORTH SIX CENTS A POUND

Canned Roast Beef Unknown as an Army Ration Until Our War for Humanity Began—The Committee Is to Go to Omaha, Kansas City and New York.

Chicago, March 14.—Edward Tilden, treasurer, and one of the directors of the Libby, McNeill & Libby Packing Company, was a witness yesterday in the army beef investigation.

Referring to the grade of stock reported in the newspapers as "canners," he said:

"I understand that it refers to a cheap grade of cattle, but so far as the packing houses are concerned it is a misnomer and does not signify anything."

Witness said their aim is to get a uniform class of beef for canning, about a thousand pounds of live weight. Generally, the forequarters are used for canning.

Major Lee asked: "Is it not a matter of fact that you can what might be termed the inferior part of the forequarters?"

"No, sir; it is a matter of fact that we can the best part of the fore-quarters, the chuck."

"Is it not a fact that chucks were sold the troops at Watertown, N. Y., and other points for four cents per pound?"

"If they were, somebody must have been very anxious to dispose of them. The market price would be about six cents. The chuck is not by any means the worst part of the carcass; We look upon it as one of the choicest parts. In fact, the forequarter of the carcass is the only part eaten by an orthodox Jew."

Major Lee: "Then the price would depend upon the number of Jews in the community?"

"No, sir; not at all."

Through Colonel Smith's testimony the board hoped to learn who was responsible for the purchase of canned roast beef as an army ration. Until the outbreak of the war canned roast beef was unknown as an article of diet for soldiers, and a member of the court of inquiry said last night that no person had been found yet on whom could be placed the responsibility of suggesting the experiment of placing it on the ration list.

Colonel Smith purchased the bulk of the beef, refrigerated and canned roast, used by the army. He bought it in Chicago direct from the packers.

It is assumed that he acted under positive orders in making all the contracts which passed through his hands, and it is those orders that the court of inquiry desires to have the former purchasing agent produce.

So many Chicago witnesses must be heard that the court announced its intention of sitting here until Wednesday night and then adjourning to reassemble again after a trip to Omaha and Kansas City.

The hearings in those cities are not expected to last longer than a week and a half, bringing the court back to Chicago by the end of next week, in time to resume its sittings on Monday, March 27.

The court expects to be in New York the first week in April. A notice has been served upon Governor Roosevelt to hold himself ready to appear before the court and tell how the Rough Riders found the different kinds of beef.

THE STRANDED CASTILIAN.

Montreal, March 14.—Information received at the office of the Allan line, in this city, is that efforts are to be made at once to get off the steamer Castilian, which is ashore on Gannett Rock ledge. Members of the firm express some doubts as to the result of the undertaking.

The cargo is valued at four hundred thousand dollars, fully insured, partly in Canadian and partially in American offices.

The steamer Mongolian is to be put on the route to replace the stranded steamship.

Captain J. J. Riley, a marine insurance expert, who was a passenger on the new Allan Line steamer Castilian, which went ashore on Gannett Rock ledge, near Yarmouth, N. S., during a fog, and whose forty-six passengers were landed there by tugs later in the day, telegraphed here last night that he believed that the vessel could be saved.

The Allans carry their own insurance on all their vessels. The Castilian sailed from Portland, Me., on Saturday and carried a valuable cargo.

The Chinese Rebellion.

Tacoma, Wash., March 14.—The steamer Victoria brings news from Nankin that twelve thousand Chinese rebels have crossed the Anhui borders into Honan, joining the insurgents at that place, the combined forces numbering over twenty thousand men.

Thus united they marched against and captured Shouchun, the second city of the Anhui province, badly defeating General Kuo and the imperial forces under his command.

They have secured large quantities of arms and have sent a body of raiders into Honan to secure ammunition. The telegraph lines in North Anhui have been cut, and the imperial troops are gradually being hemmed in by the insurgents.

Five hundred rebels and many soldiers were killed in the battle in North Kiangsu between the rebels and the combined forces of Generals Kuo, Wu and Lieu. Several leaders were taken, but the main body of the rebels escaped and started for Anhui.

Prof. Hoppins Resigns at Yale.

New Haven, Conn., March 14.—Professor James Hoppins announced yesterday his resignation of the professorship of the history of art in the Yale School of Fine Arts, closing thirty-eight years of continuous service in the university.

ROOSEVELT AFTER ARMOUR

Violations of the State Laws Should be Punished, Says the Rough Rider.

Albany, N. Y., March 14.—Governor Rosevelt has refused to sanction the proposed compromise of suits brought by the state against Armour & Co. of Chicago for violating the state butter laws, and has ordered the attorney general to proceed with the prosecution of the suits.

Four years ago suits were brought to recover from Armour & Co. penalties amounting to $1,250,000 for selling oleomargarine in this state.

An agreement was entered into that the suits be discontinued on the stipulation that the Armours would pay twenty thousand dollars and agree to sell no more oleomargarine in this state.

The agreement was signed by Commissioner Wieting and Attorney General Hancock, and was presented to Governor Black. He took no action, and it has been pending in the executive chamber for nearly two years.

Governor Roosevelt said yesterday that he did not think it was a matter to compromise under the conditions proposed. The suits were brought to recover $1,250,000, and a compromise at $20,000 was too small, if the state had any grounds for bringing suits for the original sum, and too much if the state had no case against Armour & Co.

He was of the opinion that the cases should be prosecuted, and the determination left to a decision of the courts based on their merits.

Attorney General Davies said yesterday that the governor had instructed him to proceed with the prosecution, and he would do so, but it would be several weeks before steps would be taken.

Religious Work in Porto Rico.

New York, March 14.—The American Missionary Association, in response to the report and recommendations of its commissioners to Porto Rico, for the investigation of educational and religious conditions there, has voted to enter upon a forward movement there, by introducing in Porto Rico at once the species of Christian schools such as it has established in this country at intervals during the last fifty-three years, chiefly for the negroes in the South, but also for the Indians in the West, the Chinese on the Pacific coast and the Southern highlanders.

The Rev. Andrew J. McKim, an agent of the American Bible Society, who has been sent to Porto Rico to begin the work there, has written to the society that the Young Men's Christian Association has a representative in San Juan, and that the Women's Christian Temperance Union is already at work. He is to go to the interior, where English is rarely heard, and will there dispose of two large invoices of Bibles. Mr. McKim sold forty thousand Bibles in Cuba during an eleven years' residence there.

Will Gov. Hill be Invited?

New York, March 14.—Richard Croker declined yesterday to give out the names of the guests invited to the Democratic Club dinner on April 13. The names were voted upon Sunday at a meeting of the dinner committee. The members of the committee pledged themselves to secrecy in making known the list of those invited.

The remarks of former Governor Hill at the Lotus Club dinner to Hon. Chauncey M. Depew on Saturday evening led to the statement that Mr. Hill would not be invited. This could not be confirmed.

A well known Democrat who saw Mr. Croker said that Hill had not been invited. It was the impression of this Democrat that only the friends of Tammany Hall throughout the state would be at the dinner.

A member of the house committee of the Democratic Club said that Mr. Hill would be one of the guests, and further said that Perry Belmont had insisted upon inviting the former senator.

Mr. Croker declined to discuss Senator Hill's speech at the Depew dinner.

Mr. Kipling Out of Danger.

New York, March 14.—It was said this morning at the Hotel Grenoble that the danger of a relapse was past. Mr. Kipling will be able to leave his bed within a few days. Within two weeks he will be able to take a short outing. His child is pronounced to be convalescent.

Though Mr. Kipling has made no definite plans for the immediate future, an intimate friend said this morning that his visit to this country will probably be a short one. So soon as he is strong enough he will go to Brattleboro, Vt., for a few weeks.

In all probability he will return to England early in the spring. He will not go to Mexico.

Jerry Simpson to Write a Book

Wichita, Kan., March 14.—"If the Devil Came to Congress" is the title of a book that ex-Congressman Jerry Simpson will soon issue. Mr. Simpson's third term expired with the closing of the last session, and he has returned to his farm in western Kansas to raise cattle and write the book.

It is said that he will put things in the book which will cause many of his former calleagues to move uneasily in their seats.

Among other things, he will give a description of the power of Speaker Reed from a personal standpoint, and will also assert that it is impossible for a man to be a congressman and live on the salary of the office.

To Raise Wages 10 Per Cent.

Manchester, N. H., March 14.—The local cotton mills will raise wages for weaving in No. 1 mill ten per cent., to take effect April 3. All reductions that went into effect in January, 1898, are to be restored.

To Restore Former Rates.

Worcester, Mass., March 14.—The West Boylston Manufacturing Company will return on April 3 to the scale of wages before the cut down on January 1, 1896. About three hundred men are affected.

An Increase at Syracuse.

Syracuse, N. Y., March 14.—The Syracuse Tube Company, which employs three hundred workmen, has posted a notice that the wages of all employes will be advanced ten per cent. on Saturday of this week.

A Campaign Roorback.

In a spirit of fairness we are impelled to characterize the story printed in the News yesterday, concerning the alleged disorderly condition of the borough last Saturday night, as a contemptible campaign falsehood designed to damage the candidacy of Mayor Wilson.

The inference aimed at in the story printed by the News was that the alleged disorderly scenes were due to the money that Mayor Wilson had furnished for campaign purposes with no regard for the channels it was used in. To those who know Mayor Wilson it is scarcely necessary to refute any such sensational inference as this; in fact, we opine that the article will prove more of a roorback than result in what it was designed for.

Mr. Wilson received intimation early yesterday morning that the Republican machine had sent an emissary to the News office with the alleged facts. Not standing on dignity the Mayor made a personal visit to the News editor and informed him that he understood that a such a story was in circulation and that if it reached the News office he desired beforehand to stamp it as an unmitigated lie.

But when the proper influences were brought the News editor was ready to do his dirty work—his gratitude to the G. O. P. being described by a lively sense of favors to come—and not only was the whole fabrication exploited in the news columns but Editor Runyon devoted seven brilliant editorial comments to the fake.

Prompt and Proper Action.

The Common Council has acted promptly on the advise of The Daily Press to oppose the passing of the bill introduced in the Assembly for the purpose of saddleing the expense of the district court in Elizabeth on Union county.

The idea, as expressed in these columns several weeks ago, is a pernicious one. Plainfield receives no benefit whatever from a district court in Elizabeth, and it is a wrong principle of government to suppose that we should contribute something like $800 a year to its maintenance, as would be necessary if the bill becomes a law.

Corporation Counsel Marsh has a pecular faculty of putting such questions in a clear, convincing light and no doubt when he appears before the proper Legislative committee the death knell of the district court bill will be sounded.

If we are to believe all or even part of what a Somerville correspondent to the New York Tribune says in a communication published yesterday morning, the county seat of old Somerset is not what it is cracked up to be. For instance, here is one paragraph:

Bound Brook, four miles distant from this place, received from the trolley $5,000 and streets macadamized from curb to curb. Somerville, with her "wiseacres and seers," gets a scaling price which will take twenty years to realize $5,000 for giving a trolley franchise and a superfluous amount of mud on Main street. Somerville is a slow town, and if it was not for a trolley car observed occasionally there would be no life in the place. Her citizens do not wish any industries to locate here, neither do they want to consolidate with the town of Raritan, one mile distant, with a population of 2,500, as the society of Raritan isn't good enough for Somerville.

The Newark Advertiser's Legislative correspondent puts Assemblyman Murray down for considerable sagacity in his ante-session opposition to the elevation of Speaker Watkins to the presiding chair of the Lower House for a second term. It will be remembered that the Plainfield statesman insisted that the Republicans were lacking in good leaders on the floor and that Watkins could be of more service in the pit than on the rostrum. The Advertiser says that what Mr. Murray predicted has come true and that it would have been much better for the G. O. P. if the Speaker had been chosen leader on the floor.

A Jersey City man driving a team of horses lost his way in Elizabeth the other day and came near losing his life as well as ending the existence of the equines by driving into quagmire while thinking that he was on his way home. It looks as though there might be a small fortune for some enterprising individual to make a lot of charts of good roads in Elizabeth and sell them to teamsters. A blank piece of paper would cover the situation.

The machinery of Newark Republican politics, which was thrown slightly out of gear by the temporary retirement of Major Lentz from the chairmanship of the Essex county Republican committee and the refusal of Franklin Murphy to act in his place or choose a committee to lead the spring campaign, has been put in smooth working order again by the choice of Henry M. Doremus as leader.

Aguinaldo has a few things yet to learn before he can become a real fighting hero. For instance, his name has not yet appeared as a conspicuous contributor of magazine articles. Perhaps he is waiting for Dewey to take the lead in such a matter, as he has in most other affairs within the past year.

The gamblers are still fighting in the courts against the decision that the constitutional amendments, preventing racetrack and other gambling, are legal. The gamblers seem to be taking their medicine with ill-grace.

Texans are complaining because Former Governor Hogg wants a $10,000 fee for the collection of $100 000 for the big commonwealth. The Hon Mr Hogg evidently wants his cognomen to have some meaning to it.

An exchange pertinently remarks that the old residenter who complains that the weather is not what it was when he was a boy should remember that he is not what he was when he was a boy, either.

The magazine writer who tried to make an interesting article out of the subject "Our Daughters: What Shall We Do With Them?" probably forgot that there is any such thing as a man in the world.

Whether Mayor Wilson is elected to succeed himself or is defeated by his opponent, his name will go down in borough history as one of the best Mayors the municipality has ever had.

One of the curious features of the borough campaign is the little part that the issue of consolidating city and borough has played in the gossip and activity of the voters.

According to various reports there are about 'steen people who have the promise of being borough clerk and as many for chief marshal.

A yeast company capitalized at $1,000,000 has been formed in this State. That probably means a fight with the baking powder trust to see which will rise the fastest.

The Newark Advertiser very properly questions the propriety and policy of naming a Sheriff as the recognized head of a political party.

Township elections are most uncertain in political results.

It was supposed that Edwin Savage's famous painting of Washington and his family was destroyed by a fire in Savage's museum in New York; but fortunately it turns out that Savage had removed the picture to Boston before the fire occurred. In 1840 it was discovered in a gallery over Boylston market and removed to the Boston museum, where it was recently found, hanging over a doorway, in a poor light and covered with dust and cobwebs. It is now in the Havemeyer collection.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Under the act making a city of Summit, the first election for city officials will be held on the second Tuesday in April instead of today, as has been stated. The township officials will hold office until the Monday following the election. The particular features of the new form of goverment are set forth in an act recently passed by the Legislature. The law, it is expected, will be ratified by the voters at the forthcoming election. If this act should be rejected the incorporation will be under the law of 1897, which applies to cities having a population of less than 12,000.—Newark News.

The appeal sent out by the president of the New Jersey Women's Suffrage Association urging women to vote at the school meeting March 21st, does not need belief in female suffrage to enforce its arguments. Women are interested in the public schools, in seeing that the buildings are ample and properly equipped, and the appropriation adequate. In the towns and rural districts in which school meetings are held, they cannot vote for trustees, but they can vote on all other matters and are themselves eligible to the office of trustees. They ought to come out in force all over New Jersey Tuesday of next week.—Newark News.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

The new comedy "His Better Half" will be seen at Music Hall tonight. It is a farcical comedy of English origin and possesses a combination of ingenuously clever and laughable situations and bright lines that make it a delightful evening's entertainment. The plot is by no means a deep one, but the author has set all his characters at cross purposes and involved them in a series of complications that are delightfully funny. The central figures of the piece are a father, son and a friend of the latter. To accommodate the son and help him deceive his father, the friend disguises himself in petticoats and passes as the wife of the son. His task is further complicated by the appearance upon the scene of his friends intended wife, together with her chum and a maiden aunt. There is no horseplay in the piece. It is unnecessary. The fun is sufficient without it.

* * * * *

Delightful singing, funny fun, bewitching costumes, graceful dancing, eccentric characterizations, artistic scenic effects, clever comedians and pretty girls are all said to be presented in the ragtime comedy that comes to us under the fetching title of "A Ragtime Reception" at Music Hall Thursday night.

FIGURED HIMSELF OUT.

Brown's Knowledge Proved a Handicap in Trying to Win a Girl.

"Of all things on earth," said this society girl, who is among the eligibles, "I hate to have a man who calls on me talk 'shop.' Young Johnson did nothing the other night but tell me about how Detroit is handicapped in the matter of freight rates and explain his scheme for relieving the situation. Jones tells about his paintings, which are never finished, and Wilson talks enthusiastically of his literary triumphs, that are yet in the future.

"But Brown outdoes them all, and Brown was here last night. He's a statistician. He first had the impudence to ask my age, and when I informed him he went to figuring like mad. 'Now,' he inquired, 'how much food do you suppose has passed between those rosy lips of yours at the present time, basing the estimate upon the daily consumption of food by those who can afford to live well?'

"I insisted that the subject did not interest me, but he reeled off figures about beeves, calves, sheep, poultry, fish, fruits, bread, cake, cheese, vegetables and everything else we ever had on the table. Totals ran into the tons and hundreds till I was so ashamed that I went to telling him in a very direct manner what I thought of his method of entertainment.

"And what do you think he did?" Out came that pencil again, he figured like a lightning calculator, and then had the audacity to inform me that if I should talk that rapidly for a period of twenty years my jaws would have traveled through a distance of 1,247,905 miles and a fraction. I was so angry that I just told him to reach home by starting at once and taking the shortest route."—Detroit Free Press.

A Painful Mistake.

Only that duty compels us to tell the news, we should keep still about the matter. It seems that Tuesday afternoon Bill Capron got an idea that there were prospects of snow. To satisfy his mind on the subject he stepped out in front of the store to make observations, and striking an attitude of wild but graceful abandon, he was soon lost in contemplation of the sky. While he stood thus, like a statue of Apollo, a farmer from Marine walked into the store, and called on Lon for twenty-five cents' worth of five-cent cigars.

"We don't sell cigars," said Lon.

"What?"

"We don't sell cigars."

"Never?"

"No, never."

"Never?"

"Well, hardly ever."

"Jupiter!" exclaimed the farmer, "this is the first tobacco store I ever saw where they did not sell cigars."

"This ain't no tobacco store!" protested Lon, indignantly.

"I will take my affidavit on a stack of Bibles that this is a stove store," yelled Lon.

"Well," said the puzzled farmer, pointing through the window to the imposing figure of the stately Bill, "this is the first time I ever saw the image of an Indian stuck up for a sign in front of a stove store."

The funeral of the farmer will occur at Marine on Sunday. Friends and relatives are invited to attend.

Orator Beaten by a Boy.

Daniel O'Connell, the famous orator, when taking a ride in the neighborhood of his house, had occasion to ask an urchin to open a gate for him. The little fellow complied with much alacrity, and looked up with such an honest pleasure at rendering the slight service that O'Connell, by way of saying something—anything—asked:

"What's your name, my boy?"

"Daniel O'Connell, sir," replied he, stoutly.

"And who's your father?" demanded the astonished Liberator.

"Daniel O'Connell, sir."

O'Connell muttered a word or two below his breath, and then added aloud:

"When I see you again I'll give you six-pence."

Riding briskly on he soon forgot the incident, and fell to thinking of graver matters, when, after traveling some miles, he found his path obstructed by some fallen timber, which a boy was stoutly endeavoring to remove. On looking more closely he discovered it to be the same boy he had met in the morning.

"What!" cried he; "how do you come to be here now?"

"You said, sir, the next time you seen me you'd give me six-pence," said the little fellow, wiping the perspiration from his brow.—London Weekly Telegraph.

Not in the Dictionary.

One day a gentleman was holding a conversation with his wife in the presence of their five-year-old son, and among other things mentioned was "diplomacy."

"Pa," said the youngster, when a break in the conversation allowed him to interfere, "what does diplomacy mean?"

"Diplomacy, my son," said the father, "is this—doing exactly the right thing at exactly the right moment."

"Then I suppose I used diplomacy when I got out of the pantry yesterday, dad, did I?"

"What do you mean?" was the reply.

"Why," said the son, "I got into the back yard with that meat-pie just at the moment ma caught the cat in the pantry, and told you to drown her for thieving."

Out of Sight.

"Mayme, did you see me at the matinee the other day?"

"Gracious, Nan! I recognized your hat and coat, and your big chrysanthemum, but I couldn't see you at all."

SHE WASN'T JEALOUS.

Only Just the Least Bit Curious That Was All.

Mr. and Mrs. Wells were a model loving couple. Mrs. Wells would have shaken hands on a bet with anybody that her husband was the very standard of goodness and honor, and that his affection for her was of the undivided variety.

One evening after tea Mrs. Wells excused herself and vanished into the kitchen to give her maid orders for the morrow. This done, she returned to join her husband. Beyond the dining room into the library she could see Mr. Wells peering through his spectacles at a piece of paper in his hand. The jealous spirit within her conceived the idea of tiptoeing noiselessly up behind her husband, whose hearing was none too keen, and taking him unawares.

Half way across the library floor her eyes bulged, and she stopped. The paper in the hands of Mr. Wells was a violet tinted sheet of notepaper. On his knee lay a square envelope to match, upon which she saw distinctly his name and business address, traced in a dainty feminine hand, and the atmosphere of the room was fragrant with a sweet, delicate odor of violets. For a moment Mrs. Wells felt benumbed.

Her first impulse was to rush forward and snatch the letter from his grasp, but he deliberately returned it to the envelope, slipped it into his coat and smilingly gazed at the new wall paper. So, unseen, unheard, Mrs. Wells retreated to the darkness of the dining room for an instant, then audibly rustled back into the presence of her innocent-looking spouse.

All the evening she thought of the lavender-hued missive in her husband's inside pocket. He had but one female relative, his mother, and nothing could ever tempt her to use anything but plain, white stationery.

"You'd better leave that coat at home to-morrow," suggested Mrs. Wells, most eagerly. "That one has an ugly spot down the front; I'll clean it for you."

"Ye-eh. All right," answered Mr. Wells, half asleep before the fire, yet dreamily appreciating the thoughtfulness of an excellent wife.

The next morning Mr. Wells was reminded to "wear some other coat," which he did, and, being in a rush to get off to business, evidently forgot all about the concealed letter, to the delight of Mrs. Wells. The moment her double-hearted semi-self slammed the front door and was gone she raced upstairs to the captive coat and drew forth the sweet-scented, pale-purple mischief maker. All the wrath within her surged and raved at sight of the fashionable penmanship, all angles and straight lines. She thought of a few meaningful things to say to Mr. Wells as she jerked the love message from hiding, and here is what the billetdoux revealed:

"Our violet wafers will cure acute heart-burn. Give them a trial."

Mrs. Wells caught a glimpse of herself in the mirror, and, as she confessed to her bosom friend, she actually had not the nerve to look herself square in the face. She slipped back to breakfast table and drank cup after cup of coffee, while she undid the kink in her estimation of guiltless Mr. Wells.—Augusta (Me.) Journal.

How Sailors Pull Teeth.

Sailors often suffer from toothache, and have to bear the pain as best they can until they reach the shore. One day a captain, seeing a sailor's mouth in a bad condition, asked the cause. The poor fellow had suffered so long with a bad tooth that his patience gave out. Then he took a chisel and hammer, and found a comrade who was willing to cut off the top of the tooth for him.

The same voyage the captain was caught by an aching tooth, the pain from which soon became unbearable. The remedy of the sailor had proved so much worse than the disease that the captain was unwilling to try the chisel.

His contrivance for extracting the tooth was ingenious though intricate. He fastened a fine long wire to a bullet, which he placed in his pistol with the wire hanging out. Securing the wire to the aching tooth he opened his mouth as wide as possible and fired.

His ingenuity was rewarded, for the tooth followed the bullet into the air. His experience, however, made him buy a set of dentist's instruments. But strange to relate he never had any use for them, though he followed the sea for many years.

Two Babies.

Mrs. Newma—Oh, I wish you could see Mrs. Winkler's baby. It's perfectly lovely! Such a delicate, sweet little creature as it is! It's a perfect little cherub, with the loveliest eyes, the sweetest little mouth, the cunningest little nose, and eyes of heavenly blue. It looks as if it just dropped from heaven and every tiny feature had been fashioned by the angels."

Mr. Newma—Is it as nice as our baby?

Mrs. Newma—Mercy! no, not half.—New York Weekly.

Never Got Over It.

Bride—"I'm so afraid people will find out that we're just married that I've made Will promise to treat me in public just as if he had no thought of any one but himself."

Matron—"I adopted that plan when I was married, and my husband never got over it."—Tid-Bits.

Not Intentional.

Mrs. Newlywed (who is thinking of something else and not listening)—"Don't you think your life insurance premiums are a waste of money, John?"

Oldenburg.

Oldenburg. Zur Verbesserung der Akustik im großherzoglichen Theater hat die Leitung eine ebenso einfache wie zweckmäßige neue Einrichtung getroffen, nämlich das Ausspannen eines Stahldrahtes zwischen dem Prozenium. Diese Erfindung, die sich schon an vielen Bühnen auf das Vortrefflichste bewährt hat, bewirkt, daß auch der leiseste auf der Bühne gesprochene Ton auf den entferntesten Plätzen deutlich hörbar ist.

Waghäusel durch einen Säbelhieb verwundet, flüchtete er dann nach der Schweiz, wurde aber bei der Rückkehr an der Grenze abgefaßt und zu 20 Jahren Zuchthaus verurtheilt. Nachdem er 9 Jahre 8 Monate abgesessen hatte, wurde er begnadigt, hatte aber zeitlebens an den Folgen der Haft zu leiden.

Nach Professor Dr. Fraas' Gutachten stammt der Fund aus dem Diluvium. Sehr zu beklagen ist, daß der Zahn, bevor er geborgen war, von bübischer Hand stark beschädigt wurde. —Die bekannte Firma J. G. Rohrdorf. Seit Jahrhunderten führen die Gebirgsbewohner im Allgäu am Schwarzgratberge und der Adelegg im Winter Festspiele religiösen Inhalts auf. Nach dreijähriger Pause veranstalteten neulich die Rohrdorfer einen Festzug sämmtlicher 49 männlichen Mitwirkenden zu Pferde, der weiblichen zu Wagen, alle in ihren historischen Kostümen. Nachmittags wurde das Schauspiel: „Der heilige Ulrich und die Hunnenschlacht (955)" im Freien vor dem Gasthaus „Zum Kreuz" aufgeführt. Ein Sonderzug brachte Zuhörer bis von Leutkirch; zu Fuß und zu Schlitten kamen Hunderte an, und die Aufführung fesselte die Menge derart, daß sie, trotzdem Alles im tiefen Schnee stehen mußte, 2½ Stunden bis zu Ende des Stückes aushielt.

Wiblingen. Hier rüstet man sich, das 800jährige Bestehen der Gemeinde zu feiern. Das Kloster, das im Jahre 1099 erbaut worden, dient heute als Kaserne des 19. Ulanen-Regiments. Für das Fest der Kreuz-Erfindung am 3. Mai ist eine größere Erinnerungsfestlichkeit geplant, die sich in eine kirchliche und eine weltliche Feier theilen wird.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Eine großartige mechanische Weberei hat die Badische Baumwollspinnerei und Weberei A.-G. Karlsruhe im Albthal unweit Ettlingens errichtet. In dem etwa 7000 Quadratmeter großen Saale fanden vorerst etwa 500 Webstühle Aufstellung. In hygieinischer Beziehung ist die Fabrik geradezu musterhaft eingerichtet. Die Kraft zum Betrieb liefert die Alb, die, in einen drei Kilometer langen, geschlossenen Kanal gezwängt, mit einem Gefälle von 26 Meter auf eine 600pferdige Voith'sche Spiralturbine stürzt. Mit dem Ausbau der Weberei bis auf die geplanten 1224 Webstühle soll heuer fortgefahren und die Spinnerei mit 50,000 Spindeln errichtet werden. Oberhalb der Fabrik ist die Erbauung einer Arbeiterkolonie mit etwa 500 Häusern geplant.

Mannheim. Im Bürgerausschuß wurde die Erbauung einer Festhalle mit Konzertsaal in Barockstil nach den Plänen von Professor Bruno Schmitz in Charlottenburg beschlossen. Der Bau der Halle, die an den Wasserthurmplatz zu stehen kommt, ist auf 1,598,600 Mark veranschlagt.

Triberg. Dahier wurde wegen dringenden Verdachts, den Mord an der 23jährigen Dienstmagd Joos in Schonach begangen zu haben, der 21 Jahre alte Landolin Hoch von Schonach verhaftet. Er war in einer hiesigen Fabrik beschäftigt. Seine blutigen Kleider, sowie seine Verletzungen veranlaßten die eigenen Angehörigen zur Anzeige.

The useful beetle known as Novius cardinalis, and employed in California to eat up the "white or fluted scale," insects of the orange groves, has been exported to Portugal for the same purpose. The beetles were packed in moss with a quantity of scale insects to eat, and sent by mail to Lisbon. Only a few reached their destination alive, but they are prolific, and in a few months thousands were available for work on the scale insects which infest the orange groves of the Tagus.

WORTH KNOWING.

An eminent German physician declares that as long as a bicyclist, after a long tour, has a good appetite, does not feel a desire to go to sleep at once, and is not annoyed by heavy dreams on the night following, he may consider that he has not made too great a demand on his physical resources.

In Servia there still survives a wonderful old institution known as Zadruga. It is the living together of a whole tribe, numbering sometimes as many as 100 persons, all under the absolute authority of one chief. He keeps all the money, makes all purchases, and decides the minutest details of family life.

A very interesting experiment in cooperation is to be initiated by the miners of Northumberland. The powder manufacturers have lately raised the price of powder from 4 pound to 5 pound a ton. Accordingly the miners are seeking to establish a factory of their own which will turn out gunpowder at the original price or less.

Thousands upon thousands of persons handle our silver dollar, but few happen to observe the lion's head which lies concealed in the representation of the familiar head of liberty; frequently even a careful examination fails to detect this hidden emblem of British rule; but, as before, when once found it is quite obvious.—Hartford Times.

CHINESE ETIQUETTE.

You may thank your stars that you are not the Emperor of China. He is a most unhappy individual. He is surrounded by a wall of etiquette as old as his Chinese wall and even more unchanging.

Here are some of the rules he must follow unflinchingly and with the greatest care. They are imperative and are never known to be broken:

The dishes served at breakfast are the same day after day, and have been fixed from time immemorial.

Every dish is served in couples; two ducks, two chickens, two soups, two cups of tea, etc., each following the other in time-honored succession.

He must eat just so much of each dish, and show no partiality, and eat heartily of it, the state physician, who stands behind him all the time, immediately orders it to be taken away.

The emperor must never turn a corner when out for a drive. If he is seized with a fancy to drive out, which, fortunately, does not occur often, as it means enormous expenses, all the streets must be made straight; if any houses interfere they are promptly swept away, while even a dried-up water course must be spanned with a bridge.

PREACHER'S EXPLANATION

It Was Made, But Did Not Improve Matters Much.

Recently, while a number of newspaper men were interviewing the Governor, one of the group, drawing certain inferences, tried to put words into the Governor's mouth. Thereupon the Governor gave caution lest some enthusiastic correspondent overstate his opinions. "You may draw as many conclusions as you like," said the Governor, "but don't attribute them to me," and then he told the following story:

"There was once a colored preacher who, upon the occasion of delivering a forceful harangue to his congregation, said:

"'I see before me twelve chicken thieves, including William Sanders.'

"Now, Sanders was a handy man with a razor, and, being exceedingly wroth over the preacher's severe indictment, threatened to carve the parson on sight. But the parson's friends, learning that there was trouble in the wind, urged him, in the interest of his own welfare and that of the community, to set things right with Sanders at the first opportunity. Taking this view of the situation, he parson did, on the next Sunday, make the following announcement:

"'Brethren, at our last meeting I made a statement which, after mature deliberation, I desire to correct, realizing as I do that my remarks upon that occasion might not have been understood correctly. What I should have said was: "There are in this congregation twelve chicken thieves, not including William Sanders."'—Rochester Post-Express.

Not an Amateur.

Mrs. Fowler—So you have been to sit up with a sick man, eh? John Fowler, can you look me in the face and say that?

Mr. Fowler—Why, of course I can, Nettie! What do you take me for—for just an ordinary amateur prevaricator?—Boston Transcript.

They were Married.

A newly elected justice of the peace, who had been used to drawing up deeds and wills and little else, was called on to marry a couple in haste. Removing his hat, he remarked:

All being uncovered, he proceeded:

"Hold up your right hand. You, John Makin, do yer solemnly swear to the best of yer knowledge an' belief, that yer take this woman to have and hold for yerself, yer heirs, executers, administraters and assigns for yer and their use forever?"

"I do," answered the groom, promptly.

"You, Alice Evans, take this year man for yer husband, ter have and ter hold forever; an' you do solemnly swear that yer lawfully seized in fee simple an' free from all encumbrances, and have good right to sell, bargain an' convey to said grantee, yerself, yer heirs, administraters and assigns?"

"I—I do," said the bride, doubtfully.

"Well, that 'er's worth a dollar 'n fifty cents."

"Are we married?" asked the bride.

"Yes. Know all men by these presents, that I, being in good health and of sound mind and disposition, in consideration of a dollar 'n fifty cents to me in hand well an' truly paid, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, do an' by these presents have declared you man an' wife durin' good behavior, an' until otherwise ordered by the court."

One on the Legislature.

As the representative of a Georgia county which is always well represented in the Legislature was leaving home to assume his honorable duties one of his aged colored constituents said to him:

"Marse Ben, you gwine ter de Legislatur?"

"Yes; that's where I'm bound."

"En you gwine ter make laws fer de people?"

"That's what they tell me."

"Er, how much will you git a day fer dat?"

"Four dollars."

"My Lawd!" exclaimed the astonished old man. "En dister think—all I gits is forty cents a day fer plowin', en oly meat an' bread fer pickin' cotton!"

What Puzzled the Boy.

It is told of a certain bishop that while dining at the house of one of his friends he was pleased to observe that he was the object of marked attention from the son of his host whose eyes were firmly riveted upon him. After dinner the bishop approached the boy and asked:

"Well, my young friend, you seem to be interested in me. Do you find that I am all right?"

"Yes, sir," said the boy, with a glance at the bishop's knee breeches "You're all right, only"—hesitatingly—"won't your mother let you wear trousers yet?"—Tit-Bits.

IS LEPROSY CHECKED

HAWAII'S DREAD PLAGUE DISCUSSED BY A HAWAIIAN.

Island Authorities Hope, But Are Not Sure, That They Have It Under Control at Last—Life in the Colony—Regarding Infectiousness.

Hawaiian authorities sincerely believe that they have fought leprosy to a standstill. They base this belief on the fact that few or no lepers under middle age are now discovered. The young leper is only occasionally found. A few years ago it was not so. When the plan of segregating the sufferers from their kind and sending them to the colony on Molokai to live was put into operation, the discovery of young victims was comparatively common. Now, if no more youthful cases are found it is perfectly obvious that the complete stamping out of the disease will be only a question of time. It is, of course, unnecessary to state that no person in Hawaii cherishes any hope more earnestly than the hope that the spread of the disease has at last been definitely stopped.

The leper colony contained 1,111 persons on a certain date not long ago, and the population thereof is gradually though very slowly increasing. The number of persons known to be leprous in the colony is not increasing, however, but the reverse, the decrease by death more than offsetting the increase by newly discovered cases. The increase of population comes from the births. An attempt was made some years ago to prevent the marriage of lepers. It was not successful, however, and many children have been born of these marriages. Whether they will surely be lepers is not yet settled. Many of them are now apparently as healthy as any one. The boys and girls are kept separate, are educated and well cared for. The dread of leprosy felt by these young people is very marked, as a matter of course. They aid the authorities in the work of fighting it to the extent of their ability by keeping entirely apart from those known to be tainted. This is rendered quite easy by the fact that the quarters of the youngsters are several miles from the homes of the adult sufferers. The colony, you must understand, covers a territory at least ten or eleven miles long and half as many wide, or more at one point.

The leper colony, by the way, is a little world of itself. The colonists are much like other human beings. They engage in various occupations and have a social life of their own. They even publish newspapers. There was a time when the lepers were allowed to have certain small amounts of money in their possession. This has been stopped, however, because it was found that they would gamble it away and all the money in the colony speedily found its way into the pockets of a few.

Everything possible is done to make the life of the children in the colony as bearable as may be. Every now and again an appeal is published in the newspapers for the raising of money to buy them something which they lack, and such an appeal never fails of its object. The boys have two bands and their instruments and the uniforms which they wear were sent to them as the result of private subscriptions in Honolulu, and the pleasure to the young girls in the colony has been especially looked after in many ways.

It is not easy for strange newspaper men to visit the colony. In fact, no one can obtain a permit to do so unless he is vouched for as a person who will not write in too "yellow" a vein concerning what he sees there.

"The statement that leprosy is not contagious," said a lifelong resident, "has been made so many times that it is hardly necessary to repeat it. The contention that it is not infectious, made by some who should be able to speak with authority, is false and misleading. Hawaiians, who ought to have some notion of the facts, if any one has, are unanimous in the belief that it is infectious. Furthermore, although they think it not likely to be contradicted by persons of correct life, yet even that is not impossible.

The table linen, too, is always displaced at these January "white sales." For the last two years it has been carnations and broken grasses for borders, oak leaves and acorns and a sort of zigzag chain lightning pattern, but now we find four leafed clovers with clover blossoms, polka dots large and small and half moons with a small flower of some sort scattered among the moons. The prettiest of them all was one satiny design of moss rose buds with trailing vine of the same as border. The napkins, three dozen, are always produced in miniature in the same design in three sizes. One can always obtain a tray cloth and doilies of the same if one wishes—and has money enough. Isn't it funny when you look at it? You see a pile of beautiful, clean, white linen which the storekeeper is willing to give you in exchange for some dirty, ill-smelling, old, greeny brown rags.

The Colosseum.

The Colosseum is the name given to the Flavian Amphitheater in Rome, a large edifice for gladiatorial combats, fights of wild beasts and similar sports. It was begun by Vespasian, who died A. D. 79, and finished by Titus, 80 A. D., when to mark the event games and fights were held, in which it is said that 5,000 animals and a large number of gladiators were killed. The amphitheater was 1,641 feet around, 615 feet long, 510 feet broad, and was in the form of an eclipse, and seated 87,000 persons. The marble with which it was originally lined has been used to build the palaces of modern Rome. More than 400 varieties of plants have been found in the ruins.

JOPKINS'S OMISSION.

His Scheme Worked Nicely Up to an Unforeseen Climax.

Jopkins had read somewhere that if a woman got hold of a newspaper with a clipping cut out of it she would never rest until she had procured a complete paper and read the missing item. This struck Jopkins as a very shrewd and Machiavellian plan of exposing this well-known weakness of lovely womankind and he resolved to put it into practice.

So that night when he went home from the office the ostentatiously protruded from his coat pocket the day's paper, from which he had neatly cut a paragraph referring to the rings of Jupiter, or some such matter.

He threw the paper to one side in a careless way, and after supper he noted with an unholy glee that Mrs. Jopkins had secured it and was running her eye over the bargain ads. and working her way, after the manner of her sex, through the personals, marriage notices and back to the telegraphic dispatches.

Presently Jopkins observed a sudden and suspicious frown overcast her face. She had come upon the hiatus made by the waggish penknife. Jopkins reveled with internal hilarity, but preserved an outward appearance of innocent unconsciousness.

"My dear," said Mrs. Jopkins, laying the paper gently aside, "I'm going to run over to Mrs. Hopkins's a minute. I won't be gone long."

She went over to the opposite neighbor's, and while she was gone Jopkins had lots of fun. She came back presently and Jopkins noticed she carried another paper under her shawl. She went upstairs and Jopkins leaned back in his chair and shook all over with joy.

"Best joke I ever got off" he said to himself. "Won't she be sold when I tell her."

Mrs. Jopkins remained upstairs about twenty minutes, and when she came down she had on her hat and street dress, and Jopkins felt his knees shake when he looked into her eyes.

"Wh—where are you going?" he asked.

"Where am I going?" said his wife. "You want to know where I am going, you deceitful, disreputable, underhanded, depraved, villainous, brutal, wicked, unprincipled, scandalous, abandoned monster! I'm going home to my mother."

"Wha—what's the matter?" said Jopkins.

"Look at that!" said Mrs. Jopkins, thrusting the paper into his face. "Cut it out to hide it from me, did you? To think that I should ever have married such a ruffian!" Jopkins looked where her finger pointed and read:

After the performance of the Devil's Auction' last week quite a recherche little supper was given to the leading lady actresses by a few of their admirers. A prominent merchant, whose name we withhold, is said to have cut up some rather high jinks on the occasion. We wonder if his estimable sand charming wife knew of his whereabouts?"

A cold shiver ran over Jopkins. He was innocent but he had neglected to read the other side of the clipping. He began to explain and the milkman says he was still at it when he called with his regular morning supply of chemicals.

As Mrs. Jopkins was seen a week later wearing an elegant new silk dress, to say nothing of "a dream of a bonnet," it is presumed that the matter was satisfactorily arranged.

How It Was Paid.

"Why do you seem to try to avoid Miss Sweet?" asked the man with the cigar. "Only a week ago you were devoted to her."

The man with the cigarette scowled.

"Don't speak of her," he said. "She is the most aggravating, underhand and designing girl that ever walked the earth."

"What has she done?"

"Oh, she hasn't done a thing but play a regular confidence game on me," returned the man with the cigarette. "You see, we made a bet."

"Yes."

"I bet a box of candy against a kiss on what was practically a certainty in my favor, and she knew there wasn't one chance in a thousand of my losing."

"I see. The inference being—"

"The inference being," said the man with the cigarette with emphasis, "that she would a little rather lose the bet than win it. Naturally I was considerably elated, but to avoid any possible mistake I made her promise that she would surely pay if she lost and not try to get out of it on any technicality."

"And she agreed?"

"Promised faithfully—in fact, seemed offended to think that I had deemed it necessary to exact such a promise; said she was a girl of her word, and whatever she promised she would do. And then I won the bet."

"Yes—and she?"

"Well, she kept out of my way for a while, so that I had no chance to collect, but finally I caught her and asked her if she intended to pay the bet."

"'Pay it' she cried. 'Why I've already paid it.'

"I've never received that kiss," I asserted.

"'Then you've got no one but your sister to blame,' she answered, 'I gave it to her to give to you.'"

The man with the cigar gave a low whistle.

"That was a mean trick," he admitted.

"But that wasn't the worst of it," continued the man with the cigarette. "It knocked me out so that I hadn't a word to say, and the next day told my sister that she didn't think much of a man who hadn't the gumption to collect a kiss that he had fairly won. I tell you, a woman is the most aggravating and contradictory thing that was ever sent to torture man."

Happenings of Interest to Plainfield Enthusiasts—What the Local Teams are Doing—Gossip Among the Players.

The next game that the first team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. has on its schedule is with the mining engineers of Columbia College, or to be exact, with the team from the School of Mines of the college. The game will be played in this city on the evening of Monday, March 27th.

A letter is anxiously awaited by the management of the girls' basket ball team of the Plainfield High School. Miss Dane, manager of the Montclair High School team, promised to write and inform the local team whether a return game in this city will be played. There is some opposition among the parents of the Montclair young women about their going out of their own home to play the game.

POOL.

A pool match has just been arranged between Joe Todd, of Newark, and Walter S. Johnson, formerly of Hartford, now of Somerville, N. J., for $200 a side and gate receipts. Johnson holds the championship medal of Connecticut, he having defeated such players as Edward Beach, of Meridan; Fred Harvey, of Waterbury, and William Smith, the "Hartford Kid." The first half of the match of 250 points will be played in Somerville on Wednesday, March 22d, and the latter half at Murray's Arcade, 84 Broad street, Newark, April 1st. The tournament table at Murray's Arcade will be shipped to Somerville, where a large hall, with seating accommodations for 600 people has been hired.

Found Through a Press C. A. W.

In The Daily Press of yesterday Jacob Kirkner, of West Eighth street, advertised for a very valuable English setter dog owned by his son, George Kirkner, which had been lost. Last evening the dog was found by George Perrine, of Lake street, who saw the advertisement in The Press, and the animal was returned to the owner. Strange to say that Mr. Perrine was on his way to The Press office to advertise the dog when he saw the advertisement. Another instance of where Press ads do the work.

Ready for Business.

George W. Wrennick, a member of the Bard Company, which has paseed out of existence, has opened the store on North avenue and is ready to do business again. Mr. Wrennick will handle a full line of photographic and phonographic goods, new supplies of which are received every day. He will also handle bicycles a little later. This new concern has nothing to do with the old Bard Company.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

There is a movement on foot to secure a public school at El Mora, which is just outside of the Elizabeth city line, on the Central Railroad. A plot of land containing several acres has been offered the school trustees upon consideration that a schoolhouse to cost at least $3 000 be built thereon Plans have already been drawn by Louis Quinn, and the trustees have the matter under consideration. It is also reported that Senator McPherson, who owns a large tract of land in the neighborhood, has offered $8 000 to the Central Railroad to build a new station, provided the company will move the present one at El Mora to Colonia, about half a mile further west.

Louis Roesel, who was hanged at Elizabeth Friday of last week, told Warden Dodd the Sunday morning before the news had been broken to him that the Board of Pardons had gone against him, that the court did nothing for him Saturday. The Warden was surprised for he knew Louis had not been told of their action. So he asked him how he knew. "Well" he said, "I had a dream last night that I was brought up for sentence four times and each time was sentenced to be hung. My case finally went to the Court of Pardons and they turned me down, so I believe the dream was true. Shortly afterwards his counsel and several others waited upon him and broke the news that the court had decided against him. He thanked his counsel for what he had done and said he knew he had been turned down. Roesel was the coolest man in the party.

William H. Egbert, the former Plainfielder who is now at Manila with Company L, First Washington Volunteers, has sent The Daily Press several issues of the newspapers published there. There is "The New Orient," formerly "Uncle Sam." It is a real modern looking weekly sheet with startling double column heads. It contains six pages, mostly filled with the exciting hapenings of that region. The accounts of the little skirmishes are given in detail.

"La Independencia" is the organ of the independent Filipino party in the islands. It is printed in Spanish and consequently isn't quite as interesting to the ordinary reader in the States.

"Freedom" is another of the American publications in Manila. The number sent contains, in its editorial columns, an apology for not publishing three times a week as it had promised. The pressmen all went to Malolos to witness the swearing in of Aguinaldo so the paper couldn't be printed.

A copy of "The American" is the last of the Manila papers. This is the oldest of them all and is published daily when possible. The first page is devoted to news, the second to editorials and the last two to advertising. In this case, a supplement was added to hold several news items that were apparently crowded out of the first page.

Judgment Secured by Servant Girl.

Mary Leary, a servant formerly in the employ of Adrain Pickhardt, of the borough, secured a judgment against her old employer in Justice Mattison's court yesterday for $135 and costs. Ninety-nine of the amount was borrowed money while the balance was for back wages. Pickhardt says he will appeal.

Willing to Settle.

The case of E. M. Laing against John Sullivan was adjourned in Justice Nash's court today for one week. Sullivan hired a fifty-trip ticket to New York from Laing with $14 40 worth of unused rides, and has never returned it. Sullivan says he is willing to settle for the ticket as soon as he gets the money.

VOTE TO CHECK TROLLEYS.

Mr. Murray's Repeal of Franchise Extension Act Is Passed.

Trenton, March 14.—The Assembly after a hard fight last night passed Assemblyman Murray's bill which repeals the trolley franchise extension act of last year.

Mr. Murray said it was unfair for the Legislature to assume to extend the time for building railroads beyond the time fixed in the franchise granted by local authorities. Mr. Bell argued in the same strain and the bill went through despite the opposition of the trolley people.

IN PLAINFIELD'S HISTORY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Next Door to Music Hall.

This advertisement tells of the greatest event ever known. We have purchased the entire stocks of Messrs. Woodhull, Goodale & Bull, of Syracuse, and Quiri & Wilkie, of Amsterdam, N. Y., at a spot cash price, so very much below the real value of the merchandise that a statement of the exact figures would seem marvelous. A great many retail dealers would gladly take this fine stock of clothing off our hands at a good round profit if we desired to sell that way. But having acquired this $15,000 stock at such a ridiculously low figure, we wish to use it to introduce ourselves with our first sale of the season. On account of the way which we have purchased this stock, we will tomorrow and throughout this great sale offer many goods at less than half and less than one-third their usual value.

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 15. 1899. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR.

LUCKY "THIRTEEN" FOR NEWT. SMALLEY.

Col. Wilson Defeated For Mayor of North Plainfield By a Narrow Majority.

ONE DEMOCRAT ELECTED TO BOROUGH COUNCIL.

THE MOST EXCITING ELECTION NIGHT EVER WITNESSED ACROSS THE BROOK.

Owing to the Closeness of the Contest the Interest in the Outcome Was Intense Throughout the Evening—Proposition to Consolidate City and Borough Was Defeated By an Overwhelming Vote—Incidents of the Day and Night—Vote By Districts.

Newton B. Smalley is to be North Plainfield's next Mayor. He was elected at the borough election, yesterday by the bare majority of thirteen votes after the hottest campaign that North Plainfield has witnessed for many a year. The result was in doubt up to the time that the very last ballot was counted. Two Republicans and one Democrat were elected by varying majorities.

The whole borough was stirred to its foundations by the contest. Every one was arrayed on one side or the other. "Newt" Smalley and his political friends of the G. O. P. gathered together for the fight of their life. They had arrayed against them most of the Democrats and a certain faction of the Republican party. Party lines became indistinguishable for the time being. Col. Wilson had some of his strongest supporters in the Republican camp, while several of his bitterest enemies in the fight were fellowers of Jefferson. The contest was a bitter one, and the worst elements of both parties made it one of vilification and "mud slinging." The fight continued up to the time when the polls were closed and the last ballot was cast.

Everybody understood that the fight was to be for the Mayoralty. Mayor Wilson ran for re-election on rather non-partisan grounds and thus lost some support from his own party. His personality and the success of his term were used as a means to win over independent voters. Smalley drew the adherance of the strict partisan element of the G. O. P. His general popularity was trusted to swing many into line.

Both sides fought hard in the two weeks of the campaign. Not a stone was left unturned. Every voter in the borough was interviewed by both sides. The interest grew intense. When yesterday morning came both sides were ready for the fray, with a host of workers at the polls. Not even at a National election has so much general interest been shown. All day great crowds hung about the two polling places, which front each other on Somerset street, near Lincoln place. The first district polling place was in the store next to Warren Engine house. Voters of the second district went to Saengerbund Hall. There was deep feeling in the result, but the day passed off without any encounters.

At 7 o'clock the polls closed. The vote was remarkably large, rivalling that of 1897. Nearly a thousand ballots were polled. The excitement still continued. After a short interval the election officers began to count the votes. It was slow work for the old and laborous system was used and the men grew weary and counted slowly.

Saengerbund Hall was the assembling place for most of the interested ones. The other polling place was too small to accommodate many. The crowd began to gather in Sangerbund Hall at an early hour. At 8 o'clock it was well filled. Everybody was talking and arguing. The crowd surrounded the election officers with a ring three and four men deep. Everybody was very anxious to know how it was coming out. It was early seen that the election was going to be very close.

The results of the first fifty showed that Smalley's stronghold was in the second district, which lines to the east of Somerset street. The Colonel balanced him in the other district. When a hundred ballots had been counted at each place, Smalley showed up in the lead by six votes. Among the Councilmen, Clark and Swackhamer began to look like the leaders. Harrison Coddington afterwards came into the lead.

As the ocunt progressed it still showed Wilson and Smalley close together. It was expected that Smalley would increase his lead in the middle of the count and he did, being at one time as many as forty votes ahead. Then he slowly began to loose as the ballot boxes were gradually emptied of their contents. The morning vote in the first district piled up the Colonel's lead in that section.

Never was there such a sight as was witnessed in Sangerbund hall as the count progressed. The large hall became filled until the crowd numbered nearly five hundred people. Outside many others thronged the sidewalks and srreets. Smalley was in or near the hall all the time after the counting began. Toward the last he was dragged about by his followers who grew wild with enthusiasm and excitement as the end approached.

In the hall everybody was talking despite the efforts of the officers to keep some semblance of quiet so that the voice of John Goodwin, who was reading the ballots, might be heard. The crowd gathered in little groups and earnestly discussed the situation. Toward the last the appearance of Smalley or the announcement of a straight Republican ticket brought forth great cheers.

Both parties were represented although, from the cheering, it was evident that the Smalley faction was in the majority. There were a few who who had partaken too freely of intoxicants and were inclined to be rather boisterous.

Plainfield had a big delegation of politicians over to see how it was done. Their campaigns were but child's play in comparison to this one and they came to learn. Among the familiar faces the writer noticed were those of Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, City Judge W. N. Runyon, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray, Andrew McArdel, Wm. Newcorn, George J. Tobin, John Keely, Postmaster E. H. Bird and Councilman John VanHerwerden.

The second district was the first to finish counting. It gave Smalley a majority of 78. Swackhamer and Coddington were high men among the Councilmanic candidates. Wilson ran well ahead of his ticket while Smalley was behind the Republican vote. There were 453 ballots cast, 294 were Republican and 159 Democratic.

After the crowd had heard the result, it surrounded Smalley and bore him across the street where the entrance to the other polling place was besieged. The pressure was so great that the glass in the doors was smashed. In the first district Wilson had a lead that lack only a few votes of equalling Smalley's in the other district. The count was watched with breathless interest, and when it was concluped and Smalley's election by thirteen votes conceeded, the crowd fairly went wild.

The general result, when computed, showed that Smalley was Mayor, having received a total vote of 492, as against Wilson's 479, a difference of 13. Harrison Coddington, Republican, was elected to the Council for one year, over William J. Conroy, by a majority of 203. Robert Clark, Jr., Republican, and S. S. Swackhamer, Democrat, were elected to Council for terms of three years each by respective majorities of 64 to 62. Doud the other Republican nominee, was cut in the Second district. The results of the First district showed 313 Republican and 219 Democratic ballots cast. Wilson ran clear away from his ticket.

The result of the question of consolidation showed the overwhelming sentiment against any such action. Some were not interested enough to vote at all.

When it was known for a surety that Smalley was elected, that boroughite was picked up and placed on the shoulders of his delighted friends who carried him about the streets. A raid had been made on all the neighboring sheds and barns and soon a hugh fire blazed up at the corner of Somerset street and Lincoln place. Fresh fuel was heaped upon it until it illuminated all the scene. Some of the musical G. O. P. ites tried to sing a ditty about "Newt" Smalley, prepared for the occasion, but the cheering was too great. Then they yelled that Smalley was all right.

Smalley was hustled over to Plainfield and the Independent Fife and Drum Corps routed out. A procession of several hundred men and boys was formed. Brooms were procured and the visitors marched all over the borough shouting and serenading as they went.

While there was no regular Republican headquarters during the evening, Spencer's store served that purpose. The second floor was opened up to some of the younger workers who entertained with song and dance for a time.

The Democrats had no rallying place. Colonel Wilson did not show up at the polling places during the evening but remained at home where he was kept informed of the situation and the probable trend of events.

At 12:30 o'clock, the drum corps went over the brook and a parade was formed. The victorious candidate was hoisted into an open wagon and dragged about the streets of the borough until after 2 o'clock. There were cheers and shouting and everybody was happy. After the parade was over Smalley was called upon for a speech.

He thanked his friends for their aid in the campaign and declared that he would not disappoint them when he came to office. He promised that they would find his administration satisfactory. He declared that there were going to be some changes in borough affairs during the coming year.

Some of the younger set celebrated the victory by ringing the Holy Cross church bell while the procession was still in its glory.

There was this morning more or less talk about a recount of the votes, but no substantial reason could be learned why such action should be taken, and no one was found who would take the initiative in testing the count.

Some interesting records were kept by the Democratic challengers while the vote was being counted. They show that Smalley was scratched 203 times on Republican tickets, 121 in the first district and 82 in the second. Wilson was scratched 99 times on the Democratic tickets, 44 in the first district and 55 in the second.

ELECTION IN BOUND BROOK.

Citizens' Ticket Met With But Little Opposition.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, March 15—The borough election was held here yesterday and resulted in the election of the Citizens' ticket complete. The ticket was the result of a fusion between Republicans and Democrats. There was no organized opposition to it.

The only contest of importance was in the vote for Freeholder of Bridgewater township. There were only two nominees, the names of both of whom were placed on the Citizens' ticket. William J. Logan, Democrat, the present freeholder, was given a majority of 3 over Peter H. Smith, his Republican rival.

The votes for the other candidates were as follows: For Mayor, Richard H. Brokaw, 314; for two Councilmen for three years, Samuel W. Morton, 331; John W. Dent, 314; for Councilmen for two years, Lincoln A. Riffert, 304; Lawrence Wells, 29; for Assessor, Charles McNabb, 332; for Collector Andrew S. Coriell, 275; Thomas F. Laing, 47; for Commissioner of Appeals, Benjamin Billian, 313.

LITTLE INTEREST AT THE 'PLAINS.

Republicans Elected All But Their Town Committeeman.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, March 15—The township election held yesterday was one of the quietest in the history of the township, only 211 votes being cast out of a registry list of 316. Both sides seemed to suffer about equally from the stay-at-homes. The entire Republican ticket was elected with the exception of T. J. Nicholl, the Democratic nominee for Town Committeeman, who defeated William D. Johnston, Republican nominee, by 78 majority. E. L. Hand, Township Clerk, was re-elected over F. W. Hoppell, the Democratic nominee, by 60 majority. All appropriations were carried with very little scratching.

Fanwood.

What looked a short time ago to be a warm election in Fanwood borough dwindled down until yesterday morning found only one ticket, the Citizens. This was: For Mayor, George Kyte; Councilmen, Palmer and Young; commissioners of appeal, Messrs. Keibe, Frazee and Wright. Only 48 votes were cast out a registry of 92.

Westfield.

Cranford.

There was an exciting election here yesterday and a big vote was gotten out. There was three tickets in the field—the regular Republican, the Democratic and the Citizens'. The last won all the offices by good majorities. The ticket elected was: Township clerk, Samuel Marshall, 225; committeeman at large, J. H. Crommell; committeeman from first district, J. H. Thompson.

DEMOCRATIC FREEHOLDER.

THE REST OF THE CITIZENS' TICKET WAS NOT CONTESTED.

Mr. Swackhamer Secured a Majority of 99 Over Mayor Brakely—Railroad Employers Help to Elect Their Fellow-Workmen—Great Rejoicing After the Result of the Election Became Known.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, March 15—The closest and most exciting election that has been held in the borough for 20 years, took place yesterday, and resulted in an overwhelming victory for the People's ticket. Ruliff J. Swackhamer, nominee for Mayor, received over two votes to Dr. Peter W. Brakely's one, and Peter C. Staats, for chosen freeholder, won by eleven votes. These were the only two independent nominees, the other names on the ticket being the same as those on the Citizens' ticket.

There were no Republicans or Democrats in Dunellen this spring, all were Citizens' or advocates of the People's ticket. There was a determination to defeat Dr. Brakely, and it is said the result of the election is due to a great extent to the railroad men, all of whom voted for Swackhamer, who is also an employe of the Central Railroad.

Out of a possible vote of 334, 280 ballots were cast as follows: For Mayor, Ruliff J. Swackhamer, 189; Peter W. Brakeley, 90.

For Councilmen, J. Newton Apgar, 257; Frederick K. Wilcox, 241.

For Commissioner of Appeal, Samuel Lucky, 279. The appropriations are $1,800 for borough purposes and $150 for the support of the poor. One vote was thrown out. Lucky, for Commissioner of Appeal, received the unanimous vote, 279. The total number of People' votes was 174; Citizens, 105.

When the result of the election became known a delegation of citizens formed into parade to take the news of his election to the new Mayor. He had left the polls early, and spent most of the evening quietly playing checkers in William H. Cole's coal office, where the delegation expected to find him, but he had gone home. He received his honors in a simple manner, and responded handsomely to the congratulations.

New Market.

New Market, March 15.—A light vote was polled here yesterday and the entire Republican ticket was elected. Not over sixty per cent. of the voters turned out and there was no excitement and very little interest shown over the results The only offices over which there was any contest were for Town Committeeman and Overseer of the Poor. John H. Sebring's majority over Lewis D. Walker was only fifteen, while John C. Morris' over Clark T. Rogers was considerable more. The following are those elected: For Township Clerk, Chas. S Day; Town Committeeman, John H. Sebring; Overseer of the Poor, John C. Morris: Surveyors of Highways, Albert L. Boice and Samuel Giles; Commissioner of Appeal, William Fitz Randolph; Constable, William F. Polhemus. The appropriations voted for were $1,200 for support of the poor and $5,000 for working roads.

The annual meeting of the Ladies Aid Society of the First M. E. church was held in Vincent chapel yesterday afternoon. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Henry A. McGee; first vice president, Mrs. W. C. Snodgrass; second vice president, Mrs. Whitney; secretary, Mrs. John Lewis; treasurer, Mrs. J. Q. Packer.

CLAIMED THE JURY WAS TAMPERED WITH.

Sensational Stand Made In Justice Mosher's Court.

WAS IN THE CHAPOT CASE.

ONE JUROR HANDED PLAINTIFF'S LAWYER A NOTE.

Judge Coddington, Who Represented the Chapots, Insisted That the Jury be Kept Out Till They Agreed, but He Was Disappointed in the Verdict—Further Action Will Probably be Taken

The second right of property trial in which the Chapots were interested took place yesterday afternoon in Justice Mosher's court, and resulted in a verdict against the claimants, just the opposite to the verdict brought in by a different jury last week, when Frank Zabetti was the party who had the judgment against them.

This time Pierre Teesier, who was formerly night watchman at the factory, was the one who levied upon the goods of the C Chapot & Sons Chamois, Leather and Glove Company to satisfy a $70 judgment. The goods were claimed by the Chapot Chamois Company, which succeeded the first named concern, and therefore Tessier could not get anything until the right of property was tried.

The new company claimed to have been incorporated Dec 12th, 1898, but upon cross examination admitted that title to the goods, etc., was secured Jan. 31st for the consideration of $1.

W. S. Angleman represented the watchman and claimed that as the company was insolvent at the time the transfer was made, it was illegal.

The jury retired at 4:15 o'clock and at 6 o'clock brought in a verdict against the claimants. At 5:45 o'clock fifteen minutes before they came in, they sent out word that they could not agree, and asked to be discharged. W. A. Coddington, who represented the Chapot Chamois Company, objected to their being discharged, so Justice Mosher kept them in a little longer, and at 6 o'clock they came to an agreement.

When the jury had rendered their verdict Mr. Codington asked that the jury be polled, which was done, but the verdict was not changed. Then an unexpected thing occurred, which gave an opportunity to the lawyers to use high words. Mr. Coddington requested that the Judge should not record the verdict, as he said the jury had been tampered with, and then went on to say that just before they were locked out he had seen one of them, who afterwards proved to be P. N. Kline, hand a folded paper to Mr. Angleman and had seen the latter nod his head. Mr. Angleman admitted that he had been handed a paper, and drawing it out of his pocket showed it to the court. It read, "What is the law in reference to a firm who fails as to their power to dispose of their stock on hand?"

Mr. Angleman said he had simply nodded his head to show he had received the note, but made no answer, and that as it was done in plain view of everyone in the court room, and was not objected to at the time, Mr. Coddington had no right to say anything against the verdict then. Justice Mosher recorded the verdict, but Mr. Coddington may take some further steps in the mattter.

The jurymen were B. W. Hand, J. S. Garretson, Ralph Saums, P. N. Kline, Fred Winzel and Charles Lister.

DEVOTED TO MISSIONS.

Presbyterian Women Elect Their Officers.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian churches was held yesterday afternoon in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church and there was a very large attendance. The first business of importance was the election of officers for the ensuing year as follows: President, Mrs. Samuel Milliken; vice presidents, Mrs. Wilson Smith, Mrs. W. R. Richards, Crescent Avenue church; Mrs. James Petrie, First Presbyterian church; superintendents of collectors, Mrs. D. N. Groendyke, Crescent Avenue church; Mrs. Wm. Remsen, First Presbyterian church; secretary, Miss Henrietta Haviland; treasurer, Miss Addie Dietrich; secretary of literature, Mrs. Sarah Hayes.

Somerset Freeholders Democrats.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, March 15.—The election in Bridgewater township resulted in the re-election of William J. Logan, Democrat, for freeholder by 300 majority. H. V. Todde, also a Democrat, was elected township clerk. The rest of the officers elected are Republican. The Board of Freeholders will remain Democratic.

Improvements Planned for the Methodist Cemetery.

THEY WILL BUILD A LODGE.

SOME TALK OF REMOVING TO NEW LOCATION.

The Present Cemetery is in Danger of Being Cut Up By the Opening of City Streets—State Laws Permit It—Want to Centralize Present Cemetery and Give Trustees Power to Govern.

The Methodist cemetery on Plainfield avenue is either to be improved in appearance and put in presentable shape or else moved to a new location entirely. Such is the decision of the board of trustees of the First M. E. church, in whose hands the control of the cemetery lies. Most of the trustees favor the improvement of the present property rather than the idea of establishing a new cemetery.

When the Methodist cemetery was originally established on Plainfield avenue, just south of Evergreen Cemetery, the burying ground of the First Baptist church, it was hardly believed that Plainfield would ever stretch out as far as that. Some of the purchasers of plots were given deeds, some were not. Those that did receive their deeds were given such power over the property that the governing body of the cemetery could do practically nothing without the direct co-operation of the owners of the plots. This was very difficult to obtain and it is the cause of the present condition of the cemetery.

It is the intention of the Trustees to improve the cemetery and centralize it. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the church, has been looking up the owners of the plots with a view of securing their consents to move the remains from the scattered graves to others more centrally located or transfer one plot for another, giving in each case a deed for the new plot.

The idea is to get possession of that part of the cemetery that borders on West Seventh street and there erect a lodge house and green house. A regular sexton would be put in charge who could keep the cemetery in good condition and look after the plots and place flowers on them according to the wish of the owners. A new fence would be put around the cemetery and the present neglected condition done away with.

The other project is to purchase a tract of land adjoining the Hillside Cemetery and transfer all the remains from the old cemetery to the new, giving each owner deeds in the new one. Eventually, the cemetery would probably pass under the same excellent care that now controls at Hillside.

One reason for changing the location is that at any time the city is liable to decide to open up West Fifth and Sixth streets right through the cemetery. According to a law that was passed by the Legislature, the city can condemn the land and take possession of it to open up a street. While such action is not likely at present, a change in the circumstances in the future is possible.

Something is going to be done, anyhow, and the Trustees are doing their best to do away with the neglected appearance of things in the cemetery and to make it an ornament to the section where it is located.

BAND OFFICERS ELECTED.

Arrangements Also Made for Concerts at Dunellen Terminus of Trolley.

A meeting of the Queen City Band was held Monday evening and the following officers were elected for the year: President, Horace Adams; secretary, Adolph Kahrman; treasurer, Peter Hanson; musical director, Benjamin LaVere; assistant director, M. C. Sorensen. A number of new members were elected into the band.

Arrangements have been made whereby the band will give weekly concerts this summer at the Dunellen terminus of the Plainfield Street Railway.

Trouble Over a Dog.

A warrant has been issued by Justice Mosher against Paolo Armo, an Italian, upon complaint of Sam Venezia, another Italian, who claims that the defendant shot and killed the latter's dog a few days ago. It is not likely that Paolo will be captured, as he left his home near Netherwood yesterday with no intention of coming back. Sam lives in Fanwood township.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Millard and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Millard, of North avenue, will move to the Stillman building next week.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

THE OLD WAY.

We say the old way, but really it is a very common one at present time and many dyspeptics and physicians as well, consider the first step to take in attempting to cure indigestion is to diet, either by selecting certain foods and rejecting others or to greatly diminish the quantity usually taken, in other words, the starvation plan is by many supposed to be the first essential.

The almost certain failure of the starvation cure for dyspepsia has been proven time and again, but still the moment dyspepsia makes its appearance a course of dieting is at once advised.

All this is radically wrong. It is foolish and unscientific to recommend dieting or starvation to a man suffering from dyspepsia, because indigestion itself starves every organ and every nerve and every fibre in the body.

What the dyspeptic wants is abundant nutrition, which means plenty of good, wholesome, well cooked food and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it. This is exactly the purpose for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted and this is the method by which they cure the worst cases of dyspepsia, in other words the patient eats plenty of wholesome food and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest it for him. In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. One of these tablets will digest 3,000 grains of meat or eggs.

Your druggist will tell you that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the purest and safest remedy for stomach troubles and every trial makes one more friend for this excellent preparation. Sold at 50cts. for full sized package at all drug stores.

Mrs. A. J. Lawrence, of Beaver, Pa., says: "Brazilian Balm brought me out of a severe attack of pneumonia in splendid shape. It is a wonderful remedy for coughs and lung troubles. MORE TROUBLE IN CUBA

Gen. Gomez Continues to be Idolized.

ASSEMBLY TO BE DISOLVED

If the Demonstrations Continue Against Gen. Gomez, Gen. Brooke Will Use Summary Measures to Surpress Them—Wild Tales of a Loan by an American Syndicate and a Divy.

Havana, March 15.—Yesterday there was another great demonstration at the Salon Trocha in honor of Gen. Brooke. He was asked to remove Senors Mora and Menocal from office.

The assembly held another stormy meeting at Cerro yesterday. A thousand Cuban soldiers guarded the place of meeting and all the approaches to it, it beieng the intention of the Assembly to keep its proceedings secret. This, as usual, it failed to do, despite the extraordinary precautions. A letter was received and read from Gen. Mayla Rodriguez, who was second in command under Gen. Gomez, in which he stated that he would obey the orders of the Assembly.

Manuel Sanguily delivered a violent speech in which he gave vent to his personal feelings against Gen. Gomez, who, he said, was a traitor and had been bought by the Americans. Senores Aguero and Portuondo were no less insulting in their remarks.

Senor Sanguily submitted a resolution declaring that Gonzalo de Quesada, the representative of the Cubans at Washington, was a traitor to Cuba, he having acted as the agent of the American Government to Gen. Gomez, and conspired with the latter to accept the paltry $3,000,000, offered by the United States for the payment of the Cuban army. The resolution, after setting forth all of Senor Quesada's alleged offenses, called for his deposition. Many speeches were made against the Cuban representative, who, the speakers declared, had been bribed by President McKinley, and when a vote was taken he was deposed unanimously. The Assembly considers that he dishonored himself as a patriot by entering into the secret negotiations between President McKinley and Gen. Gomez.

Senores Sanguily, Gualberto Gomez and Lecuona were appointed to draft a manifesto to the people of Cuba, which the Assembly will issue to-morrow.

Capt. Jose Jerez, a friend of Gen. Gomez, and Gen. Julio Sanguily will probably fight a duel. The trouble between them grows out of the deposing of Gen. Gomez.

It is the opinion of every impartial observer that the time has come when it is imperative for the American Government to interfere and put an end to the abusive attitude of the Assembly and the small part of the Cuban army favoring it. There was no violence except that mentioned between the police and the crowd of Gomez adherents, but the attitude of the Assembly and certain Cuban officers against the people, Gen. Gomez and the American Government threatens extremely grave consequences.

The newspaper El Reconcentrado says that an American syndicate, which owns mines in Cuba, made arrangements with the Assembly to raise a loan of $15,000,000 in silver, the plan being to have the Assembly to force Gen. Gomez to accept the loan and then to unite and force the United States to guarantee the issue. The money to be furnished was silver "dollars," worth 40 cents each, but the people would be compelled to accept them at 100 cents. Each member of the Assembly was to receive a large "rake-off" for supporting the plan. When the subject was mentioned to Gen. Gomez he indignantly refused to co-operate in the scheme, and this is the secret of all the present trouble.

The town of Guanabacoa elected Gen. Gomez as its adopted son by a unanimous vote.

Gen. Brooke has given instructions that order must be maintained at all costs.

Havana's New Police Force.

New York, March 15.—John McCullagh, ex-Chief of Police of New York, who, on December 9, left this city for Havana to organize a police force there, returned yesterday.

"When I reached Havana," Mr. McCullagh said, "I found not one police force but four. They were as follows: An ordinance police, appointed by the Council, 300 in all, whose duty it was to enforce the ordinances; a civil police, appointed by the governor, which had 300 members also; the Orden Publico, consisting of 1,200 men, and a Guardia Civil, practically constables, composed of 3,500 men. There was always friction between the different forces. For example, if an ordinance man made an arrest he would turn his prisoner over to one of the civil police, who would refuse to take him if he felt that way inclined.

Mr. McCullagh said that the published accounts of riots and disorder had been greatly exagerated. "The people of Havana are easily controlled," he said; "all that is necessary is to maintain discipline in the new force. The Spaniards and Cubans who are troublesome are only loud talkers. They shout and make a loud noise, but nothing more.

The ex-Chief was asked what he thought of affairs in the Police Department of this city. He said: "I saw very few newspapers while away from the city, and do not know what has been going on. What I do know, though, is that you could not get me back in the department unless I was given the same powers that the Chief of the Havana force has—the power of appointment, details, promotions, and dismissal after hearing on written charges.

The President's Vacation.

Thomasville, Ga., March 15.—President McKinley and his party arrived here about 5.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. They came by way of Savannah and crossed the state line at noon. At this place houses were profusely decorated with bunting in response to a proclamation by the mayor.

The president comes here to be the guest of United States Senator Hanna at the senator's winter home.

D. L. & W. to Run Sunday Trains.

New York, March 15.—For the first time since Samuel Sloan was elected president of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, many years ago, that road will run trains on Sunday. President Truesdale, who succeeded Mr. Sloan, has issued orders for trains to run on Sundays hereafter, and the company's officers in Hoboken are busy preparing the schedules, which will be put into effect on March 19.

It was said this morning that probably six trains would be run each way between Hoboken and Phillipsburg.

President Samuel Sloan was a man who did not believe in working on Sunday, and luring all the time that he was at the head of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad he would not permit Sunday trains.

President Truesdale has just returned from a complete tour over the railroad line and wherever he went he was met with requests from the patrons of the road that President Sloan's old custom be abandoned and Sunday trains be put on.

Salt Combination Now.

New York, March 15.—It was announced in Wall street yesterday that the National Salt Company will be incorporated under New Jersey laws with a capital stock of five million dollars, seven per cent. cumulative preferred stock, and seven million dollars common stock.

Thirteen plants producing salt in this state are to be included in the consolidation. They are: Ley Roy Salt Company of Ley Roy, Kerr Salt Company of Rock Glenn, Ithaca Salt Company of Ithaca, Warsaw Salt Company of Warsaw, Silver Lake Salt Company of Perry, Pavilion Salt Company of Pavilion, Pearl Salt Company of Pearl Creek, Bradley Salt Company of Warsaw, the Glen Salt Company of Watkins, Hawley Salt Compan yof Warsaw, W. C. Gouinlock of Warsaw, Cayuga Lake Salt Company of Ludlowville and the Empire State Dairy Salt Company of Warsaw.

These concerns are said to control more than ninety per cent. of the evaporated salt made in this state. The new company will absorb the business of the existing National Salt Company, which is the selling agent at the present time of the plants named.

The Kaiser Defeated.

Berlin, March 15.—The Reichstag yesterday, by a vote of 209 to 141, rejected the army increase demanded by the government. The budget committee's proposal was also rejected. The Center and Froisinnige Union voted with the minority.

During the discussion of the bill the minister of war, General von Gosslor, said that the measure was a factor in favor of unity, adding that the defence of the Fatherland was no party question.

The bill, he continued, had been altered in committee, but he hoped that the Reichstag would restore it to its original shape. He said that he could not accept the reduction of the peace effective force by seven thousand men as the present state of the battalions was prejudicial to the efficiency of the army.

The war minister then appealed to the patriotism of the Reichstag, asking it to grant the government's demands in their entirety.

Pennsylvania Bribery Investigation

Harrisburg, Pa., March 15.—The bribery investigation committee of the House will resume its probing this evening. Among those summoned to appear are Representatives [illegible] of Berks, Hersh of Montgomery, [illegible] of Cameron, ex-Senator J. J. [illegible] Schuylkill, ex-Representative [illegible] of Luzerne, Michael J. Costello of Williamsport, and Littell and O'[illegible] of the Scrantonian.

There is little prospect of a [illegible] ment of the senatorial [illegible] week. There is no sign of a [illegible] the deadlock, and persons who [illegible] to speak with authority say [illegible] will be no election at this session of the legislature.

There can be no election unless Quay withdraws, and his chief [illegible] declare most positively that he will not desert them.

A Snowbound Train.

Cheyenne, March 15.—The Cheyenne and Northern passenger train, which has been for three weeks blockaded by the snow near Iron Mountain, is apparently little nearer being released than it was ten days ago.

The rescuing train is still more than ten miles away. The snow in many places is ten feet in depth and frozen hard.

During the past twenty-four hours thirty-five men with picks and shovels did not make more than one hundred and fifty yards. There are now plenty of supplies for the passengers.

Sandbagger Busy in Lynn.

Lynn, Mass., March 15.—Charles F. Pierce, a prominent resident of this city, was sandbagged last night and an attempt made to rob him opposite his home.

Charles H. Colby, police inspector, in going to the rescue of Mr. Pierce, was shot in the hip by the highwaymen. Two men, who gave their names as Rogers and Kennedy, were arrested a short time afterward. After having been locked up some time they confessed to having received shot wounds. A third suspect was arrested later in the evening.

Young Choate Presented.

London, March 15.—The Duke of York held a levee at St. James's Palace yesterday.

United States Ambassador Mr. Joseph H. Choate presented his son, Mr. Joseph H. Choate, Jr.; Mr. Spencer Eddy, who was private secretary to Colonel Hay when the latter was United States ambassador here, and United States Consul General Osborne.

Pennsylvania Judgeship Filled.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 15.—Governor Stone has nominated John H. Weiss of this city to be judge of Dauphin county in place of John B. McPherson, whom the president recently appointed judge of the United States district court at Philadelphia.

Mr. Weiss, who received the unanimous endorsement of the Harrisburg bar for the position, is the Republican county chairman and an intimate personal friend of ex-Senator Quay.

REBELS ROUTED AGAIN

Gen. Wheaton's Men Drive Everything Before Them.

FILIPINO LINES BROKEN

The Rebels Make a Very Poor Showing as Fighters—It is Expected that the Present Engagements Will End the Trouble With the Natives For All Time.

Manila, March 15.—Operations against the insurgents were resumed at daylight yesterday. The gunboats shelled the town of Pasig, which the enemy deserted with all possible haste. Later a force of 1,000 insurgents returned to the town, which was again shelled, the enemy suffered heavy losses from the fire of the Gattling guns. Three barges loaded with provisions were captured together with a Major, a Captain and seventy-four insurgent soldiers, who were on board the boats.

Gen. Wheaton's brigade shelled Pateros and Taguig, but was unable to cross the river. A troop of the Fourth Cavalry charged along the west bank of the river, routing the enemy. Capt. Fred Wheeler and Privates Ernest Wilcox, Michael Good, George Perkins and Horace Smith of the troop were wounded and Private Samuel Jones was killed.

A battalion of the Twenty-fourth Oregon Infantry later crossed the river and again attacked the town of Pasig. The entire brigade was slightly advanced from the position it held last night, but met with stubborn opposition.

Major Grant, with a gunboat, has been ordered to destroy the shipping on Laguna de Bay.

Telegraph communications with the front is constantly maintained.

The rebels' avenue of communication north and south is now closed, the American cordon stretching over a mile from the river to the lake. The rebels are in force at Pateros and Taguig.

At seven o'clock in the morning hearing the insurgents' bugles sounding, Scott's battery dropped in shrapnel shells into the woods on left of the Pasig church. No reply made and at 7.45 the [illegible] regular infantry advanced [illegible] encountered a number of volleys [illegible] fire was returned with interest.

The line then wheeled toward Pateros in the following order: The Oregon volunteers, the Twentieth regulars, the Washington volunteers, a cavalry detachment, the Twenty-second regulars and reserve artillery. The troops followed the roads, while the gunboats Ceste and Laguna de Bay assisted in suppressing the fire on the left flank. Three rebel canoes were captured on the river.

The rebel sharpshooters at Caloocan continue active, but no casualties are reported.

Aguinaldo's Spanish Captives.

Washington, D. C., March 15.—General Otis in forbidding further negotiations between the Spanish at Manila and the insurgents, touching the surrender of the Spanish prisoners held by the latter, acted upon his own authority.

The government, however, will support him to the extreme in any action he may take.

When the protocol was signed last August the United States undertook to secure the release of the prisoners, but simply through the suppression of the insurrection. As the United States campaign in the Philippines is being conducted with all the energy possible and as the release of the prisoners depend upon the issue of that campaign, there can be no complaint of failure on the part of America to meet its obligations.

If the Spanish minister of foreign affairs feels called upon to address himself respecting this subject to the state department, directly or indirectly, he undoubtedly will be informed that General Otis must be sustained, though reassured as to the intention of the United States to use all proper efforts to carry out its undertaking.

Aguinaldo Must Surrender.

Washington, March 15.—It is the unchangeable policy of the administration to pursue the rebellious Filipino army in Luzon either until its effectiveness is destroyed or until Aguinaldo is compelled to sue for peace without conditions.

The attack begun by General Wheaton which resulted so successfully for the United States troops was the beginning of a more determined campaign which will be carried on without cessation until the authority of the United States in the Philippines shall be undisputed.

The administration has no doubt whatever that it will be possible to crush the insurgents very soon. The plan of vigorous campaign just entered upon is bound to be effective, in the opinion of the war department officers, and it will not be long, they say, before the determined crowding of Aguinaldo's army all along the line will induce the enemy to accept General Otis's terms of unconditional surrender.

The war department received the following cable message from General Otis:

Manila, March 14.

Adjutant General, Washington:

Until yesterday field operations here since capturing Caloocan of minor nature, consisting of driving back small bands of insurgents, with considerable loss to latter. Yesterday General Wheaton, with Twentieth and Twenty-second infantry, the Oregon and Washington troops, section of the Sixth artillery and squadron of the Fourth cavalry attacked large force of the enemy, drove them back and took line of Pasig river, which he now holds. Two improvised gunboats in lake have captured considerable property. Insurgent loss heavy, our own killed and wounded slight, aggregating 35. Mostly slightly wounded. Insurgents made no determined stand.

A well known Shoe Manufacturer at Nyack, N. Y., says he has never been a drinking man, but if by chance he ever did take so much as a glass of beer it would make his head swim and upset his stomach. His stomach was always weak, anyhow, and every now and then he would suffer from a distressing retching in the morning—an attempt to vomit. His brother John, who is in the same business in Newark, frequently said to him: "Dick, why don't you try Ripans Tabules?" Finally Richard said: "Well, buy me some," and John did so—and now there is no happier man in Nyack than Richard. He takes one R·I·P·A·N·S after every meal, and they do him a heap of good.

TO CLOSE POST CANTEENS.

Adjt.-Gen. Corbin's Strict Construction of the New Law.

Washington, D. C., March 15.—The attention of Adjutant General Corbin was called to a statement published in some of the newspapers that the war department would construct the section of the army reorganization act regarding liquor traffic at army posts so as to permit the employment of a civilian by the post exchange to sell intoxicating drinks.

"There is absolutely no truth in the story," he declared with emphasis. "Moreover, there is a very widespread error in the minds of the people as to what has been done heretofore. We have always respected the domestic liquor laws of the state in which a post is situated, even though the post itself is a government reservation. If the state-law had a prohibitory law, for example, we forbade the sale of liquors on the reservation. Now comes along this clause in the army reorganization act, and we shall shut off all of them."

"But these writers say that the new law is defective, and that it is capable of a very liberal construction."

"I don't care anything about that," replied General Corbin. "The plain intent and spirit of the law is that intoxicants shall not be sold on a military reservation, and if I have anything to say about it there shall be no 'monkeying' with 'liberal constructions' or other forms of evasion. It is our business to see that the laws are enforced in their spirit as well as their lettetr, and that ends it."

As the adjutant general is the officer within whose jurisdiction all such subjects fall, that does seem to end the matter.

To Expel Indian Sisters.

Baltimore, Md., March 15.—Five sisters of the American Order of the Sacred Heart have, according to a dispatch from Pinar del Rio, been ordered away from Cuba by Archbishop Chapelle, the papal representative recently appointed to investigate the affairs of the Roman Catholic church in that island.

The news was cabled to General James O'Beirne of New York, who is now in Baltimore. The message came from Rev. J. M. Craft, an Indian missionary priest, who foundel the American order of the sisters and who went to Cuba last November with the five nuns, who are all the daughters of Indian chiefs.

The cablegram, which came in Latin, was thus translated by General O'Beirne:

"Archbishop Chapelle orders us to go away from here on account of the old hatred against the (Indian) sisters. I have written you about it."

"Mr. Craft's reference to the old hatred against the Indian sisters means just this," said the general. "The order is purely American and was established near Fort Pierre on the Dakota border about six years ago. The Cahensley element in the church, or those who are in favor of the European idea in the management of orders and church affairs, antagonized Mr. Craft's work in establishing this new order, and he met with much opposition.

Burglars Tried Torture.

Binghampton, March 15.—Masked burglars forced their way into the house of Patrick Maloney, at West Susquehanna Monday night, and after tying Mrs. Maloney and her daughter with ropes, demanded that all of the money and valuables in the house be produced.

This being refused, the men procured a lighted candle and burned Mrs. Maloney's bare feet.

William Kinney was attracted to the house by the screams and rushed to the scene, but was overpowered and tied to a hook in the wall. The men then obtained $40 in money and escaped.

The burglars are thought to be the same men who robbed and gagged the Rev. Mr. Crydenwise in this city last week, who robbed the Weverly Traction Company's office Monday, and who have committed burglaries in Union, Lestershire, Oswego and this city.

A special force of local and railroad detectives is working on the case, but no clew can be found.

Secret Society Insurance.

New Haven, March 15.—There is a sharp legislative contest going on in this state between Insurance Commissioner Betts, on the one hand, and the Masons and Odd Fellows on the other, over a bill which compels reports by those bodies as fraternal assessment organizations, and as such, in effect, places them under the direct control of the insurance department.

The Masons and Odd Fellows are now the only large fraternal organizations in the state not making returns. They claim that they are perfectly solvent by any practical test, but technically might be declared insolvent by an insurance commissioner, especially owing to the matter of reserves.

The insurance commissioner, on the other hand, asserts that they should not be exempt from the rule applied to fraternal societies, which all, as he asserts, require careful watching, as is proved by the fact that last year forty licenses of such societies were revoked.

Want Mormons to Move on.

Jamestown, N. Y., March 15.—Mormon elders, who have been holding meetings in this city, have begun to attract attention. The women's organizations are especially active in a fight against them. Strong resolutions have been passed by the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the Women's Christian Association. The latter's resolution says:

"We hope to see such a rising of the moral sense of the community as shall compel these Mormon elders to move on, and we pledge ourselves to do all in our power to bring about the desired result."

The elders, it is reported, have made some converts among the working people.

Colored People Indignant.

Cincinnati, Ohio, March 15.—The colored people here, indignant over the treatment of the Eighth regiment when it passed through Nashville, after having been mustered out, have selected a committee to call an indignation meeting.

It is proposed to bring suit against the city of Nashville for the acts of her police in beating the soldiers with their clubs.

CENSUS APPOINTMENTS

Full Information for the Direction of Applicants.

BUT FEW GOOD PLACES NOW

Acting Director Wines Issues a Statement—Useless to Petition the Director for Appointment as Enumerator—Rules Regarding Applications for the Appointments.

Washington, March 14.—The Acting Director of the Census, Mr. Wines, gave out this morning the following statement for the information and benefit of persons who intend to make application for employment in the Census office:

"There are, under the Census act, not more than sixty places provided for above the grade of a clerkship of Class 1, in which the maximum rate of compensation is $1,200 per year. Of these sixty places one-fourth are what may be termed staff positions, which can only be filled by experts, and none other need apply. Applicants for clerkships of higher grade than Class 1 will be expected to enter the lower class and wait the chance of promotion; otherwise promotion in the office as a reward for efficient service would be impossible, and the Director would be deprived of the opportunity to select from his force of clerks those found upon trial to be best fitted for the oversight and command of the large number of men and women to be disciplined. The highest wage will not be paid in the first instance to clerks of Class 1, but they will be required to earn their promotion. All employes of the office receiving more than $600 per year will be required to submit to an educational test. Comparatively few appointments to clerical positions will be made before June, 1900.

"It is useless to forward to the Director applications for appointment as enumerators. The enumerators will be selected by the supervisors. The supervisors, who must under the law be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate, will not be appointed before December of the present year, on the convening of Congress. The place of supervisor is worth $1,000; that of eunmerator about $160. The term employment of an enumerator will not exceed thirty days.

"Special agents will probably not be needed before the enumeration in June, 1900. The number which will be needed thereafter is not now known. The principal, if not the exclusive, demand for special agents will be in the Division of Manufacture. They will be paid not to exceed $6 per day, together with their necessary travelling expenses, and when absent from home an allowance will be made them in lieu of subsistence, not greater than $3 per day. They should possess some business experience and knowledge of the world, and their general grade of qualifications should be as high as that of a good, ordinary commercial traveller for a wholesale house.

"All applications for appointments are docketed, filed and indexed in the office, and will receive consideration in due course of time. Nothing is gained by undue haste in forwarding them. Applications should state the age of the applicant, the degree of his education, the character and duration of his present employment, or the length of time unemployed, the amount of salary or wages paid him in his present or last place of employment, the minimum salary which he is willing to accept in the Census office, the character of position sought and, if qualified to render special service in some particular direction, the nature and evidence of such qualification. All applications should be accompanied by references or recommendations. They should be in the applicant's own hand writing.

"It is believed that the number of applications will prove to be ten or twelve times as great, at least, as the number of clerks needed, and that therefore, a large majority of the applicants are doomed to disappointment. Assuming that the number to be employed in the office at Washington will be approximately 8,000, including laborers, mechanics, messengers and scrub women, this will be at the rate of one employe to every 20,000 of the population in 1890, or, since the number of counties in the United States is slightly in excess of 2,500, a little more than one to a county if distributed on that geographical basis. Regard will be paid to geographical distribution but only within such limits as are consistent with the interests of the work to be done. Political considerations will be wholly subordinate to those of capacity and efficiency on the part of the applicant. Young and vigorous men and women in the prime of life will have the preference over the aged and decrepit, whose poverty may move compassion, but whose practical utility for the purpose of the Census office is on the wane of at an end."

The Peace Conference.

Washington, D. C., March 15.—In consulting Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, as to whether an appointment as one of the British delegates to the czar's disarmament congress would be agreeable to him, the purpose was made known to have the delegates accompanied by army and naval attaches, and by a staff commensurate with the importance of the mission.

These officials doubtless will stand in the position of experts able to show the extent and cost of the great standing armies and navies of the world. Sir Julian's appointment as one of the delegates is practically settled, although the official notification has not yet been given.

Returned from Porto Rico.

New York, March 15.—The United States transport McClellan, Captain Brickley, from San Juan and Ponce, via Santiago March 9, arrived yesterday and proceeded to an anchorage off Liberty island.

The McClellan brought eight cabin passengers and forty-six soldiers on furlough, also the bodies of sixteen soldiers from Santiago.

Among the cabin passengers were Colonel Wylie, Third United States volunteer infantry, Captain R. Bates, 34th Michigan volunteers, and the Rev. Drs. R. N. Adams and M. E. Caldwell.

ORDERED BEEF OVERBOARD.

Testimony Concerning Gen. Gilmore's Action at Ponce.

Chicago, March 15.—In the army-beef investigation to-day Capt. Homer F. Aspenwall, Assistant Quartermaster and acting Commissary of Volunteers, during the Spanish war in command of the transport Manitoba, testified that he took on board at Newport News 1,755 quarters of refrigerated beef. The Manitobia left Newport News on August 5, and arrived off Ponce, Porto Rico, on August 10. She ran aground three miles out, and remained there three days and a half. A representative of Swift & Co. was on the ship in charge of the beef as refrigerator engineer. Upon arriving at Ponce witness reported to Gen. Gilmore the stores he had on ship, telling him he had a large consignment of refrigerated beef. The chief engineer had expressed some fears about the safety of the meat, of the pipes becoming clogged with sand, on account of the grounding of the ship, which might interfere with the operation of the refrigerator plant.

When the witness reported about the meat to Gen. Gilmore, "Gen. Gilmore looked up smiling, and said: "You had better throw it overboard; we have no use for it; we can get all the beef we want here."

The witness continued: "I said that it was the best of beef, and I did not care to take any such course as that unless ordered to. He replied: "If necessary, I will give you an order to that effect.'"

"Was any beef landed there?"

"Not at that time."

Witness said that the ship went from Ponce to Miowa. He reported to Capt. Davidson, the depot quartermaster and the depot commissary, who said he would like to have some of the beef for the troops. The following day a lighter came alongside, and as issue of fresh beef was taken ashore. Witness asked the Commissary about it the next day. The lighter came alongside each day for beef.

The Commissary said that he was delighted with the meat, but he said that some had been taken fifteen miles into the interior, and it did not reach its destination until two o'clock in the afternoon, when it was spoiled. "But," the Commissary said, "that was no fault of the beef." The beef was used there from day to day until the ship left, on August 31, when witness was ordered back to Ponce.

"I made inquiries of different commanders," said the witness, "about the meat while I remained at Ponce, and all that I talked with, with one exception, were well pleased with the beef. Major Birmingham, in command of the general hospital, said it was the best beef he had had. But Col. Foster of the Sixth Illinois, whose regiment was stationed six or seven miles in the interior, said the beef when it reached his command about two o'clock in the afternoon, the first day's issue was spoiled.

End of Camp Wikoff.

New York, March 15.—At the quartermaster's department in the Army building yesterday it was said that Camp Wikoff, at Montauk Point, had been forever abandoned as an army post by the present administration.

"The work of demolition began this morning," said Colonel Kimball. "All government property will be turned in, government sheds and storehouses will be torn down or sold, and the ground cleared and left as bare as it was before army occupation last summer. Headquarters, I believe, did have Montauk Point under consideration for a mustering out camp for troops yet to arrrive from the West Indies, but that is all off."

At the bureau of the general mustering out officer it was said that all volunteer regiments coming north for muster out would proceed direct to their home stations.

Many of the regiments, as now proposed, will be mustered out in Cuba. These will be those volunteer outfits which have no armories or home stations to go to during the work attending their discharge from service. A number of officers detailed for mustering out volunteer troops will sail for Cuba soon.

Mrs. Place Must Die.

Albany, N. Y., March 15.—Dr. Charles L. Dana and Dr. William M. Polk, the experts appointed by Governor Roosevelt to inquire into the sanity of Mrs. Martha Place, who is under sentence of death for the murder of her stepdaughter, Ida Place, in Brooklyn, have reported to the governor that in their expert opinion the woman was sane when she committed the crime. This can mean only one thing in respect to Mrs. Place's fate. It means that the woman will, in accordance with her sentence, be put to death in the electric chair in Sing Sing prison some day next week, probably Monday.

Governor Roosevelt has already defined his position in the matter of granting executive clemency to the woman. He has said that only new facts tending to show innocence or irresponsibility would influence him to interfere with the natural course of justice.

Mrs. Place now fully realizes her awful position and at times her attendants have a difficult task to console her.

To Succeed Lord Herschell.

London, March 15.—Lord Chief Justice Russell will succeed Lord Herschell both in the Venezuelan arbitration tribunal and the Quebec commission. The possibility of Lord Russell's succession was first mentioned on the first of March, but the difficulty in the way of his appointment has been that the work of the queen's bench division of the high court of justice is already congested and the court would greatly miss Lord Russell's expeditious methods.

Improved School System.

One of the most important reports presented to Governor Voorhees since his inauguration is that of the Educational Commission, and it possesses particular local interest because Samuel St. John McCutchen, long recognized as one of the leading educational workers in North Plainfield, is a member of the commission. Further than the part Mr. McCutchen plays in forming the report, Plainfield is also interested in it because State Superintendent of Schools Baxter is a resident of this city and was instrumental in suggesting many of the good points considered by the commission.

One of the most important recommendations of the commissioners is the plan for rural schools, which permits two or three districts to unite and establish graded schools. It will be remembered that this feature was first broached by Superintendent Baxter last fall. It was generally recognized as a splendid idea as aiming to afford aspiring young men and women in the country districts educational advantages that are now obtained only in large towns and cities at expense that acts as a prohibitive to those who live outside of such districts, and are not fortunate enough to possess the wherewithal to pay tuition fees and the other expenses incident to school attendance away from their immediate homes.

The commission also proposes to change the truant sytem in the State. The present Truant law is made inoperative because no provision is made in most cases for paying the truant officers. The new law proposes the payment of these officers and in cities policemen may be detailed to act in this capacity. The law is made clearer as to the committing magistrate for incorrigible children. It is also provided that any district may establish a truant school. These may be either day or boarding schools. To these truant schools incorrigible children may be committed and such children as are now sent to the Reform School and thus classed as criminals. This plan has already been tried in several States and with marked success.

Inasmuch as the question of spending money for school purposes has worked at cross purposes in Plainfield at different times it is interesting to note that the commission provides for a sensible and fair system at arriving at a decision in such matters. It is provided that the president of the Board of Education, the Mayor and the chief financial officer of the city shall constitute what is to be known as the Board of School Estimate. To this body the Board of Education shall submit annually a budget or estimate of the amount deemed to be necessary for the support of schools for the ensuing year, giving the various purposes for which the money is to be used, and the amount thought to be necessary for each of such purposes, and also the amount expected from the State appropriation and the State School tax.

The Borough Election Results.

By the narrow majority of thirteen votes Newton B. Smalley today claims his right to be sworn in as chief executive officer of the borough of North Plainfield, to succeed Mayor John F. Wilson. The outcome of this memorable campaign occasions not a great deal of surprise to those who followed it closely. This is due not to the fact that either side of the contest were half-hearted or discouraged at any point in the campaign, but because it was realized that which ever way the election resulted it would not be an overwhelming victory for the winner. Consequently the thirteen more votes that Mr. Smalley received over Mr. Wilson was accepted as the former's good fortune in a fight that will be recorded in the borough's municipal history as the most aggressive and exciting that has taken place up to the present time.

Considering the intensity of the contest political feality played but a trifling part in the factors that arrayed the voters on either one side or the other. True, party devotion was appealed to with success in some instances, but this influence was small in comparison with the non-partisan ideas that permeated the minds of the voters as a rule.

The result of the election hinged on the view that voters took of Mayor Wilson's administration. And that was guaged entirely by what the Mayor had done—not what he had left undone. Perhaps a man of greater political perspicuity would have shaped his public actions so as to have avoided the things that have arisen to make a Waterloo for the Mayor, but Mr. Wilson is not of that sort. He entered the office to do his duty as the law and his own conscience told him to do it, and he gave no thought to such consequences as he figured in when the polls closed last night.

The victory of Mr. Smalley is to a great extent due to the active, earnest manner in which he prosecuted his canvass for election. He left no stone unturned that might aid him in securing a victory, and in such work he had the aid of several of the borough's most active and influential Republican workers. A less aggressive political worker than Mr. Smalley would doubtless have been the loser in the contest.

Assemblyman Murray has accomplished a creditable act in securing the passage of the trolley extension act repealer by the Assembly. When Mr. Murray introduced this measure every body thought that it would fall by the wayside the same as all other anti-corporation bills do, but it did not. Mr. Murray is a splendid example of where there is a will there is a way.

Now that Admiral Dewey has said that he will not be President, and as he declines to come home to be smothered with the glories and atttractions that such as he deserves at the hands of a grateful Republic, why not set aside June 1st as "Dewey Day," to be celebrated in honor of the Admiral? The idea is bound to be a popular one.

In a New York State town the other day eleven masked men entered an electric light powerhouse and bound and gagged the three engineers, after which they blew open the company's safe and made off with the contents. It was a hard place for the engineers to get such a shock in.

An editor of a Prohibition organ in New York State devotes a column of his valuable space to the denunciation of a banquet where oyster cocktails were served. The Prohibition editor needs to take a course of study in his wife's cook book.

The Senatorial contest in Pennsylvania and Delaware has narrowed down to the point where Quay and Addicks are simply bent on preventing the other fellow from getting it.

An ordinance forbidding expectoration in street cars and public buildings has gone into effect in Newark. The next thing on the programme will probably be a pocket cuspador.

Robert Fitzsimmons, Esq., states that his arm is all right Indeed. We also notice that his tongue is getting in some good licks, too.

JAMES W. BRADBURY, OLDEST EX-SENATOR.

The oldest ex-senator of the United States is James W. Bradbury, of Maine, who has reached the age of 97. Mr. Bradbury was 18 years of age when Maine was admitted to the Union. He talks interestingly of Clay, Webster, Jefferson Davis and other statesmen with whom he was associated during his senatorial career.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Assemblyman Roger Franklin Murray, of Plainfield, who helps Mr. Squire, of Elizabeth, to run the House, is one of the most earnest men in the Assembly. There has not been even one bill introduced in either branch of the Legislature this session that the blond statesman from Union has not studied carefully, and on which he is not prepared to enlighten the other fellows. As a result Mr. Murray can never sit still in his seat and see a bill come up for third reading without having his say about it. And the Plainfield man generally gets a fair share of attention when he stands up

Mr. Murray's habit of taking a hand in every discussion has made him the subject of more than one good natured joke on the floor of the House. One in particular came from Allan Benny, who won a laugh by introducing a resolution giving the Plainfield man the privilege of the floor. Mr. Murray was not the least bit offended, nor was he at all put out when another document was handed in setting forth the statement that it was the sentiment of the House of Assembly that the Secretary of the Navy be requested to name one of the proposed new battleships after the Plainfield representative, Roger Franklin Murray.—Newark Advertiser.

What is said to be one of the best of laugh provokers is the rollicking operatic farce comedy, "A Ragtime Reception," which comes to Music Hall tomorrow night, a funny comedy, filled with songs, dances and laughter. Scotch Plains, March 15.—Now that the lockup is an assured thing, it is hoped that Scotch Plains will soon show the disorderly element, who frequent the village on Sundays drinking and carousing, much to the annoyance of the peaceful residents of the village, that we not only have it but that we know what it is used for. One or two arrests would put quite a damper on the fun.

WHY W. C. T. U. MOVES

RENT OF THEIR PRESENT QUARTERS IS TOO HEAVY.

Their Work, However, Has Been Very Successful During the Past Year—May Stay There if They Get Enough Money

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Will you kindly allow us through your paper to answer the oft-repeated question as to "why the W. C. T. U. is going to move" and to explain the situation that the public may see our position?

There are twelve branches of work, among them the evangelistic with it four services a week; the mother's educational afternoon, and the Loyal Temperance Legion of children, under a salaried superintendent, teaching them the dangers of alcohol and narcotics. Each of these departments should have $5 monthly to begin to do the work designed, but which has been heretofore hindered for lack of funds or supplied by these doing the work.

Out of the 60 cents annual duee which over 250 members contribute, 35 cents goes to carry on the work of county, State and National, leaving 25 cents a member, or $62 50, for the year's work in Plainfield. Besides this, the free-will offerings in subscriptions, well wishes, honorary members, etc., and the contributions at our meetings, make the total receipts less than $350.

Now as to rental: For eight years the W. C. T. U. struggled and carried on its work with little result, because not centrally located. One year ago the large hall, 129 East Front street, where we now are, was secured, entirely owing to the kind generosity of Plainfield friends, who, to help us try the experiment, pledged themselves for the difference in rent. These contributions were for one year only. The committee realizing there were other demands upon Plainfield philanthropists so expressed it in writing, and it was so understood by the gentlemen who came to our assistance.

The twelve months is up. To the majority of us the work proved itself broader and more effectual. The meetings have showed larger attendance and greater interest, but it has been a heavy burden upon the few workers, and fairs, oyster suppers, entertainments, etc., have needed to be held to meet the expenses.

The offer of a hall, even though on a side street, again presented itself and the contrast between $250 and $400 rental appealed to the judgment of the Executive Board and after long consideration it was decided wise to make the change.

Since the decision a number have offered financial aid and even agreed to solicit funds, believing that to go off Front street, when so signally directed to try the experiment, would be a move, which, as they say, would set the work backwards twenty steps or more.

The authorized committee who received the pledges last Spring, has not yet quite finished its work and will answer any further inquiry or receive financial suggestions with the next faw days, which, if the amount of $250 is subscribed, may influence the Executive Board to re-consider their vote about moving.

Very respectfully,
Mrs. S. H. Cahoone,
1126 Watchung ave.
Miss Yates,
128 E. Seventh street.

ANDREW JACKSON.

In these days of great and notable events in our nation's history, we are prone to overlook and forgot the past and those who did much to start our nation on its career of greatness March 15th should be held in reverence by every lover of our country, since it is the birth day of one of our most illusterous Presidents and truest patriots.

On March 15th, 1767, in the State of North Carolina was born Andrew Jackson, a man gifted with fearless courage and a degree of personal magnetism, that made fairly an idol of his friends. Never was a man more bitterly assailed and maligned than Jackson—pulpit and press alike vied with each other in bitter words of this most gifted patriot, but who will dare today to say aught against his honesty of purpose or patriotism.

Whether as war hero or statesman, the same indomnitable will, courage and honesty characterized the life of Gen. Andrew Jackson.

He was as relentless a foe to combined capital as he was to those whom he fought at the battle of New Orleans. It is told that at that memorable battle along came a Tory and protested that the cotton bales which he was using as a barricade, behind which Yankee soldiers were fighting, was his personal property.

"Well," said Jackson, snatching a musket from a soldier, "There is no one better able to defend it than you."

His fear of the encroachments of the money power, lest it would prove a menace to the people's liberty, is a part of nistory. His declaration that if elected President "by the eternal" he should veto the United States bank, brought down on him the curses and maledictions of wealth with all its power, but Jackson never flinched. The people triumphed and the idol of the Democratic party, Andrew Jackson, was elected President of the United States. The blessings of his adminstration are the heritage of the American people.

In the days of political vasillation and tricking and combines of the money power and insatiable appetite of greedy trusts we are prompted to cry out, 'Oh! God how long?"

But I have great faith in the people. There will yet rise up another Jackson and "by the eternal" the people shall rule. All honor to Andrew Jackson's memony. J. E. Martine.

Spring Millinery.
OPENING DAYS
Saturday - Monday - Tuesday
March 18th, 20th, 21st.
Under the Direction of Miss Daly.

This announcement of itself is simply a piece of store news; it conveys no hint of the beauty of the show, gives no inkling of the amount of work accomplished, tells no price story, and yet this Millinery Opening marks an epoch in store history. We've raised this branch of our business to a higher level than ever before, a higher level of excellence in the finished products, a lower level of prices. You are invited to visit the store during these reception days, you are invited to inspect all that we have planned and prepared for your approval, you are invited to make price comparisons. It doesn't matter whether the article is a Fine Pattern Hat or a modest bunch of flowers. Opening days are busy days and we have arranged to have sufficient sales force in attendance. Our trimming department is organized to turn out a large volume of satisfactory work at the shortest notice. HER HEART UNTOUCHED.

Unaccustomed to Mixing Up Love With Business.

The young man with the vertically striped collar took a seat at a table in a remote corner of the restaurant, picked up a bill of fare, looked at it in an absentminded way, and drummed with his fingers on the tablecloth.

"What is your order, sir?"

It was a soft, feminine voice that asked the question.

Without looking up he answered: "Bring me anything.

"Soup?"

"No."

"Fish?"

"No."

"Roast beef?"

"No."

"Roast pork?"

"No."

"Perhaps you will kindly select something yourself?"

He looked up.

"Merciful heaven!" he exclaimed. "Lorena, is that you?"

She was silent.

"Lorena!" he exclaimed in a wild, agitated whisper, "do I find you here, after all these weary months?"

Still she did not reply.

"If you only knew how hard I have tried to find you! If you only knew how bitterly I regretted that rash speech, Lorena, you would forgive me. I have repented of it a million times. I take it all back. Your hair is not red, dear. I was only joking when I said it was. And it made you so angry that you hid from me, did you? You changed your boarding place, threw up your position at Spotcash & Co.'s and hunted up a job as a waiter girl in a lunchery in order to get where you thought I'd never see you, did you? And if I hadn't happened to sit down in this dark corner, where you didn't recognize me till it was too late, I suppose you would have had some other girl come and take my order, would you?"

Still no reply.

"Do you know what I was thinking of when you spoke? I was thinking of you. I was wondering if I was ever going to find you again. You will say I ought to have recognized your voice. I believed you changed your voice when you changed your job. Lorena, don't lay that speech up against me any longer. I tell you I'm awfully sorry for it. Your hair is a beautiful auburn, dear—a beautiful auburn. I'd be willing to fight anybody who says it isn't. Lorena, don't say it's all over between us! I'll be the humblest man in the world if you'll call off your grudge and take back the ring you threw at my feet the last time I saw you. Give up this wretched job and go back to your bookkeeping. I'll haunt this place three times a day, not counting evenings, if you don't. If you hide from me again you'll break my heart."

The girl with the soft voice evidently was not touched by the outreak of love on his part for she simply said "Young man your order please, you are taking up to much time and I don't mix up love affairs with business."

Good Training.

Merchant.—You say you want a job as bookkeeper. Are you an expert at figures?

Applicant—I can do anything with figures that it is possible for mortal man to do.

Merchant—What has been your experience?

Applicant—I edited the high water marks on a daily paper till it busted then I worked as weigher in a coal office for five years, and——

Merchant—No question about your being an expert, sir; it is a question of references now, sir.

Where the Cost Came In.

The Young Man on the Verge was talking with the old man who had been there nineteen years.

"Tell me," asked the former, notebook and pencil in hand, "how much does it cost you and your wife to live?"

The old man who had been there nineteen years turned slowly in his pivot chair and replied: "My friend, the house rent doesn't amount to much——"

"I know that," put in the other, "but how much does it cost you to eat?"

"Well," answered the other, whose wife had attended cooking school in the early days, "I may say that it is not what we eat that costs the money; but what we don't eat."

And the Young Man on the Verge went away to think it over.—Detroit Free Press.

A Mystery.

Jones—"How on earth does Bluffem manage to get credit at that swell tailor's?"

Jones—"But how does he manage to bluff the hotel people?"

Brown—"I suppose they judge him by his clothes."

Bern. Durch eine Dynamitexplosion wurden bei den Arbeiten im Eiger-Tunnel der Jungfraubahn sechs Personen getödtet. Die Explosion ist auf einen unglücklichen Zufall zurückzuführen.—In einer von sämmtlichen Vertretern des Oberlandes im bernischen Großen Rath unterzeichneten motivirten Eingabe an den Regierungsrath wird das Gesuch gestellt, die Regierung möchte dem Projekt einer direkten Schienenverbindung zwischen Berner Oberland und dem Genfersee, das heißt durch das Simmenthal und den Jamont nach Montreux und Vevey, jede mögliche Förderung angedeihen lassen, namentlich auch geeignete Schritte thun, um ein gemeinsames Vorgehen mit dem Kanton Waadt und den dortigen Interessenten zu erzielen.

Basel. Die Burgruinen Baselands gehen rasch ihrem Zerfall entgegen. Namentlich ist das bei den Ruinen Farnsberg und Waldenburg der Fall. Freunde von Alterthümern haben daher einen Fonds für Erhaltung der letzteren Burgruine angelegt.—Im Monat Januar sind in den Gasthöfen von Basel 8654 Fremde abgestiegen.

Graubünden. Die Unternehmer Ronchi und Carlotti haben sich durch Vertrag verpflichtet, den Abbula-Tunnel bis zum 15. Oktober 1902 zu verwenden. Für jede Woche Verspätung ist eine Konventionalbuße von 5000 Francs festgesetzt. Sollte jedoch der Tunnel einen Monat früher fertig werden, so erhält die Unternehmung eine Prämie von 20,000 Francs. Die Baukosten des Tunnels betragen 4,965,000 Francs. Die Eröffnung der Linie bis St. Moritz wird Ende Mai 1903 erfolgen. Abgesehen von den Installationsarbeiten, Maschinen u. s. w., hat die Unternehmung eine Kaution von 250,000 Francs zu leisten und diese nach Vollendung, sammt einem Rücklaß von weiteren 250,000 Francs, zwei Jahre lang stehen zu lassen. Turbinenanlage, maschinelle Einrichtung u. s. w. sind in der Schweiz zu bestellen und am Schlusse auf Verlangen der Rhätischen Bahn gratis zu überlassen.

LOOK PLEASANT.

All men are liars; but some are not found out until after they are married.—Puck.

"But could you bring yourself to marry a woman who smoked cigarettes?" they asked the young man who had insisted that women had a right to smoke if they chose. "No. I have enough people begging my cigarettes now."

There are two kinds of laziness—active and passive. The passively lazy man does nothing, or as near it as circumstances will permit; the actively lazy man shirks the work he ought to do but spends his time doing something else.—Puck.

After a woman has cried once on a man's coat she thinks she has a right to call him by his first name.—Portsmouth Chronicle.

"What is that French officer so excited and angry about?" "Someone, intending to be complimentary, spoke of him as having forged his way to the front."

The Young Partridge—Aren't you afraid of the man behing the gun? The Elder Partridge—Not when he is rigged up in one of those fancy hunting suits.

"I know you have been defeated for constable," said the candidate's wife, as he crawled in at 2:30 A. M., very quietly. "I'd like to know what you know about it," he snapped. "Well, you didn't come tearing up stairs and invite me to salute the next President of the United States."—Philadelphia North American.

Teacher—Miss Street, can you tell me what is most peculiar in the hatching of the cuckoo? Miss Street (doubtfully)—It generally builds its nest in a clock.— Jewelers' Weekly.

Askington—What makes you speak of old Slicksmith as a war artist? Teller—Why, he is slick enough to draw a large pension for no apparent disability.—Puck.

"In one respect every woman is ambidexterous." "How do you make that out?" "She can throw just as well with her left hand as with her right." —Chicago News.

He—So you visited Pompeii? She—Oh, yes. He—How did you like it? She—Well, I must say I was awfully disappointed in the place. Of course, it was beautifully located and all that, but it was dreadfully out of repair.— —Tit-Bits.

"I was sorry to do it," said Mr. Stormington Barnes, "but I was obliged to take notice of such gross neglect of duty. I have discharged the property-man." "He was very careless," remarked Mr. Orestes Van Ham. "He forgot the prompt book twice." "It's worse than that, this time. He has allowed the company to come away without its road map."—Washington Star.

The editor ran his eye critically over the manuscript the young poet had tendered. "It occurs to me," he said, "you use a faulty form of speech when you apostrophize the 'brave old years.' Deaf Mute's Joke.

Jones was sauntering about the academy, and chanced to meet a friend, a deaf mute, who was conversing with a companion in sign language.

Greeting Jones cordially, the deaf mute drew out a note-book and pencil, and, after a brief pencil and paper conversation, introduced his companion by the same means, and shortly after withdrew.

Jones and the stranger discussed the pictures pleasantly for twenty minutes or more, meanwhile covering the backs of sundry envelopes and scraps of paper with their pencilings, when a fourth character in this little drama came upon the scene—a friend of Jones' new-made acquaintance.

"Hullo, George!" said the dumb man to the new-comer, familiarly. "How do you like the pictures this year?"

"By Jove!" exclaimed Jones, in surprise, "can you talk?"

"Of course I can," said the gentleman, equally surprised, as he hastily put away pencil and paper. "Aren't you deaf and dumb?"

"Not by a long way," Jones replied, thrusting into his pocket an envelope nearly covered with pencil-marks; "but I'll kill Dummy next time I see him."

A VICINITY OF RECORDS.

Phenomenal Speed Made by the New York Central Recalls Coincidences.

The phenomenal time record made by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, on the 11th day of September, 1895, recalls an interesting coincidence of dates of special interest.

On the 11th day of September, 1609, Henry Hudson, after making several unsuccessful attempts to discover a northeast passage around the continent, under the direction of the Anglo-Dutch East India Company, entered the Hudson River, terminating his trip at the head of the navigable waters in the vicinity of Albany, which he named "the New Netherlands."

Hudson did not make the rapid transit of 65 1-3 miles per hour, nor is it possible that his sailing record compared favorably with the speed of the Defender or the Valkyrie, but the result of his discoveries was of vastly more importance, as it indicated the route which was destined to be followed in the march of civilization and the development of this continent, and has done more for the advancement of science and the arts than any section of the earth recorded in history.

It was here that the first meeting of the colonial representatives was held, resulting in the preliminary steps for the establishment of the present republican form of government.

It was here that Clinton and his coadjutors, taking advantage of the natural topographical route provided by nature inaugurated the canal system, connecting the waters of the Hudson with the lakes, which was the pioneer movement for inland transportation, and was followed by the more rapid railroad system rendered necessary by the demands of commerce. It was here that the first institute for the development of science and the arts and the promotion of agriculture was incorporated by Stephen Van Rensselaer and others, which is still in existence.

It was here that Dr. Nott provided the first plan in the introduction of the grate bar, by which coal could be successfully used as fuel.

It was here that Littlefield brought into use the first self-feeding, base-burning stove.

It was here that Squire Whipple first reduced to science the art of bridge building, erecting a trapezoidal truss bridge of iron, and presenting formulas for similar structures.

It was here that Professor Henry and Dr. Ten Eyck strung miles of wire around the walls of the Albany Academy, demonstrating the practical use of electricity as a power and in the transmission of messages, which was immediately applied by Prof. Morse by the use of his alphabet.

And it was here, at the West Albany shops of the railroad company, that William Buchanan, superintendent of motive power, planned and constructed the celebrated engine 999, and others of the same style, which have gained an international reputation, and without which the success attending the phenomenal achievement mentioned could not have been accomplished. It is worthy of note that our Dutch ancestors of the Netherlands, to whom we are indebted for so much, have just launched the largest steamship now afloat of the twin screw type. May success attend their enterprise.—Peter Hogan, in Ballston Journal.

Not a Genuine Tramp.

A trap, who appears to be deserving of something much better than his present lot, astonished the town of Westbrook, Me., recently. Thursday he called on the Overseers of the Poor and asked for a permit to spend the night at the city farm and work to pay for his keep. He was given the permit, but on arriving at the farm was told that though he might stay, there was nothing for him to do, whereupon he declined to remain and trudged on. He said he wasn't looking for charity, but work.

Late.

"Be mine," he implored.

"Too late," she answered, in a trembling voice.

He buried his face in his hands. Hope fled from his bosom.

"Too all fired late," the woman repeated. "You might have said that these three hours ago. The idea of waiting until 1 o'clock in the morning." Detroit Tribune.

THE DESERT PEARL.

THE BISKRAN OASIS IS THE KEY TO THE SAHARA DESERT.

The Little Oasis Has 150,000 Trees and a Fructifying River. Its Oriental Town Hall, Fine Casino and Poetic Arabian Names.

The Biskran oasis, with its 150,000 trees, is only about two miles long, and extends in half a dozen little villages by the Oued stream. The Arabs, in their poetic phraseology, style it variously the "Desert Queen," the "Queen of the Oases," and the "Pearl of the Desert." Seen after two days' journey through barren, treeless wastes, with its waving palms and brilliant verdure, it is a sight difficult to rival. Biskra has several fine buildings, of which the town hall, built in the Oriental style, with gleaming cupola and a forest of dainty pillars, is the gem. It cost £6,000, and is cheap at that figure, but, of course, labor here is had for a song.

The Oued Biskra flows through the oasis, and causes much of its prosperity. The chief industry is date raising, and nearly all the inhabitants own a little plot of ground devoted to this purpose, and generally their only source of revenue. Biskra owes much to the Compagnie de l'Oued el R'irh, who bored artesian wells and laid out vast date plantations. They also erected a fine Casino, and constructed a tramway to the celebrated Hamman Salahine, about six miles distant—springs well known to the Romans, whence Biskra was called Ad Piscinam. In consideration of all these benefits the company was granted various privileges. They are to enjoy for ninety nine years the profits arising from the springs and from 300 acres of land, besides a large town plot.

Biskra is practically the "key to the Sahara," and hence ever since the French entered, in 1844, has been an important military station. The lover of Orientalism will find it here in a much purer form than in semi Europeanized Algiers, and can also enjoy an almost perfect climate. The district, however, is not rainless, as is often supposed; on the contrary, in winter there is a fair share of rain, though not so much as in Algiers, where this is the weak point in the climate. Like Algiers, it is beautifully mild, there is no snow, and for the majority of the winter there is brilliant sunshine and a very even temperature. In the summer, however, it is almost uninhabitable. No one dreams of staying there unless military or other duty compels them. The heat is intense, the water noxious, and snakes and scorpions abound, whose bite often proves deadly in an hour. The country at this period is subject to plagues of grasshoppers, the ruination of all verdure and produce. A very annoying malady called "clou de Biskra," Biskra pimple, prevails, which is said to resist most treatment except change of air.

THE TRAMP'S MISTAKE.

He Ignorantly Tackled Buffalo's Strong Man.

Buffalo has a professional strong man, named Bert Bartram, who is a genial sort of a giant, tipping the scales at 210 pounds, while, as is the case with Sandow, his appearance does not give the idea of unusual strength to the casual observer. Bartram was on his way home late last Monday night, and had reached a secluded thoroughfare along his route when a big and burly tramp suddenly stepped from behind a tree and demanded money.

"I haven't a cent," said Bartram.

The tramp took Bartram by the shoulder.

"Now, see here, young feller," he began, "you just—"

He didn't get any further. Bartram took the other by both elbows and tossed him up in the air. Then he stood him on his head and then turned him over his knee and spanked him, afterward tossing him over a seven-foot board fence into a vacant lot. The tramp did not follow Bartram as he proceeded on his homeward way.

A Play Robber Killed.

Orlando Deweiss was out walking with a young lady last night. While passing a dark place he was stopped by a man, who ordered him to throw up his hands. Deweiss responded by pulling a revolver and firing at the supposed highwayman. The ball struck the man, and he fell to the ground. When he was picked up Deweiss was dumfounded and horrorstricken to find the injured man to be his chum, Verge Everly. Everly, in a spirit of fun, had sought to scare Deweiss by playing highwayman. The bullet struck Everly in the breast. He cannot recover.

More than Rev. Mr. Swadener Could Bear.

The Rev. Madison Swadener of Cincinnati Wednesday night found a man emptying the pockets of the coats in the hall. The burglar ordered the Rev. Mr. Swadener to hold up his hands. The Rev. Mr. Swadener knocked the burglar senseless. The Rev. Mr. Swadener then revived his man and kicked him out.

Half an hour later the doorbell rang. The Rev. Mr. Swadener opened the door. There stood the burglar. He had come for his hat. As the preacher turned to it the burglar knocked him down. The Rev. Mr. Swadener then lost his temper for the first time and thrashed the fellow soundly and threw him into the street.—Chicago Tribune.

BEES AS CRIMINALS.

Busy Insects Have Been Known to Rob Well-Stored Hives.

Almost every form and variety of human crime is to be found among animals. Cases of theft are noticed among bees. Buchner, in his "Psychic Life of Animals," speaks of thievish bees which, in order to save themselves the trouble of work, attack well-stocked hives in [illegible] the sentinels and the inhabitants [illegible] the hives and carry off the [illegible]. After repeated enterprises of [illegible], they acquire a taste for [illegible] and violence; they recruit [illegible] companies, which get more and more numerous, and finally they form regular colonies of brigand bees.

But it is a still more curious fact that these brigand bees can be produced artificially by giving working bees a mixture of honey and brandy to drink. The bees soon acquire a taste for this beverage, which has the same disastrous effects upon them as upon men; they lose all desire to work, and finally, when they begin to feel hungry, they attack and plunder the well supplied hives. There is one variety of bees—the Sphecodes—which lives exclusively upon plunder. According to Marchall, this variety is formed of individuals of the Halvetes species, whose organs of nidification were defective, and which have gradually developed into a separate variety, living almost exclusively by plunder. They may thus be said to be an example of innate and organic criminality among insects, and they represent what Prof. Lombroso calls the born criminals, that is, individuals which are led to crime by their own organic constitution.—The Forum.

Instructing the French Country Folk.

In the country districts in France, boards are put up telling people what animals and insects should not be killed and the reason, and also which ones should be exterminated in order to afford protection to the farmer. First on the board is this:

"This board is placed under the protection of the common sense and honesty of the public."

And, of course, after that no boy or man would mar or remove the board. Then follow these instructions:

"Hedgehog lives upon mice, snails and wire worms, animals injurious to agriculture. Don't kill a hedgehog.

"Toad helps agriculture, destroys twenty to thirty insects hourly. Don't kill toads.

"Mole destroys wire worms, larvae and insects injurious to the farmer. No trace of vegetable is ever found in his stomach; does more good than harm. Don't kill moles.

"Cockchafer and its larvae deadly enemy to farmers; lay seventy to one hundred eggs. Kill the cockchafer.

"Birds—Each department of France looses yearly many millions of francs by the injury done by insects. Birds are the only enemy capable of battling with them vigorously; they are great helps to farmers. Children, don't take birds' nests."

And so on the instructions read. Among the animals which need killing on a farm are mice and rats, and the reason they increase in spite of the constant warfare of cats and dogs is because the boys on the farm kill the animals that would destroy the pests if they had a chance.

How Stanton Wrote the Ode.

It was the hottest night of the hottest summer that ever scorched Atlanta!

The great city panted in the sweltering heat, and Frank Stanton tore his hair in desperation at the thought of writing an exposition ode on such a night. But the work had to be done then or never. Time pressed, and after the hard routine of the day the poet tried to pull himself together. Eight o'clock struck, and 9, but not a line had been written. At 10 o'clock Stanton retired to an upper room and sat down to write.

He had hardly jotted down a dozen lines when there was a rush of mosquitoes, and during the next five minutes the fate of the ode hung in the balance. Without coat, vest or collar the half baked poet toiled away, a pencil in one hand and a fan in the other.

The discord of the streets jarred upon his sensitive ear, and rudely disturbed the flow of rhythm. The stirring war songs of angry cats in the back yard floated in through the window, and the writer had to stop until he had dispersed the combatants with a few articles of furniture.

It was a fight against heat and clamor and mosquitoes, but the poet won. At the end of five hours the ode was completed, and the author fell asleep from sheer exhaustion. He gave his copy to the printers the next day without looking at it. When the proof came he shook his head impatiently.

"Take it away!" he said, "I never want to see it again. Let the thing go as it is."

The rest is known to everybody. The ode captured the country.—Atlanta Constitution.

Fads About Food.

It has never been scientifically demonstrated that fish and other phosphoric foods can appreciably improve the brain and mind. Fishermen, for example, and fishmongers, who may be supposed to live largely upon fish, have never shown themselves to be in any measurable degree more intellectual than their neighbors. Indeed, it may be plausibly argued that they are a little less so. The truth is, that that particular food which best agrees with the particular individual, and which best maintains his general health at a high level, is the best for the brain and every other organ of the body, as well as for the whole man. Common experience has long ago formulated the saying that "what is one man's meat is another man's poison." Science now comes forward to tell us exactly the same thing, and to impress upon every one of us the necessity of finding out the diet best suited to ourselves and sticking to it.

A CHICAGO TRIBUTE TO CHICAGO.

Wild, Though Harmless Vagaries Indulged by the Woolly West.

Chicago is responsible for this fad which has got possession of other cities in the length and breadth of our land; we refer to the craze which has given us the "Greater New York" agitation, the "Greater Providence," the "Greater Boston," the "Greater Wichita" and so on, ad infin.

There has never been any talk of a greater Chicago, for the reason, we suppose, that Chicago's greatness has at all times been regarded as superlative. It is this conceded greatness which has set the others to thinking, to planning, to scheming; it has given birth to the impulse which inspires other towns and cities to hump themselves. Chicago is so great that she has power not only to sustain herself but also to provide all the rest of the country with ambition and energy. It has been scientifically demonstrated that enough nervous energy is wasted daily in Chicago to conduct all the business of the world two weeks at a gait more rapid than that pursued by the average business man of St. Louis in the discharge of his duties.

We see the influence of Chicago manifested very clearly in the flutter which has agitated the presidents and trustees of Eastern colleges ever since Chicago University came into existence. Before that happening those Eastern fellows didn't care booh for and didn't say booh to the West; they were sure of the West. But now that Chicago has a university—the university, if you please—mercy, sakes alive! what a shaking up of the old dry bones there is down in Yankeedom! What a scared lot they are! Why, we've had them on the run for the last two years, and we're going to keep them on the run too! What sweet things they say of the West now; how particular they are to visit us, and address our alumni dinners, and dance attendance upon us, and curry favor with us. We wonder whether they really suppose we are such blind idiots as not to see that they are scared, scared almost to death?

The colleges of the country, the business of the country, the art, the literature, the sciences all feel the influence of Chicago and are responding to it. Because Chicago is great, everything associated and identified with her must be great; she is the fountainhead of American spirit, enterprise and energy; she is the leaven that leaveneth the whole lump.—Chicago Record.

Houston's Method of Duelling.

The Knoxville Journal tells this story of General Sam Houston, the famous Texan:

On a certain occasion he happened to give offense to a political opponent, who felt his honor disfigured to such an extent that he sent a challenge to Houston. The bearer of the challenge was received with courtly civility. He handed the written challenge to General Houston, who read it, and, taking up his pen, wrote something across the back of the folded paper and placed it in a pigeonhole of his desk. He then went on to entertain the bearer of the challenge with the pleasant conversation for which he was noted. After a time the man began to grow impatient, and, reminding the general of the challenge, asked him if he was going to reply.

"Oh, yes," said Houston, "I'm going to reply."

"Well, are you going to accept the challenge of my friend?"

"Certainly I will accept it."

"Will you fix to-morrow?"

"No, not to-morrow."

"Next day?"

"No, not the next day, either."

"Well, will you fix a date?"

"No. I am not able to fix a date. You saw me number your friend's note. It is number 49. There are forty-eight other blanked scoundrels ahead of your friend, and I must take them in turn. As soon as I have killed them I will attend to your friend; but he will have to wait until his turn comes."

The bearer of the challenge bowed himself out: but of course his friend's turn never came, and it is not probable that he was anxious for it to come.

Drug Store Philosophy.

"I noticed," said a well-known downtown druggist to his assistant this morning, "that it only took you three minutes to get up a prescription for that woman who just went out. What do you mean by that?"

"It was only a little carbolic acid and water," replied the assistant. "I simply had to pour a few drachms of acid into the bottle and fill it up with water."

"Never mind if you had only to do that. Don't you know that every prescription must take at least twenty minutes to dispense or the customer will think he isn't getting anything for the money? When a prescription is handed you even for salt and water or peppermint you must take it, look at it doubtfully, as if it were very hard to make up. Then you must bring it to me, and we will both read it and shake our heads. After that you go back to the customer and ask him if he or she wants it to-day. If he does, you answer that you will make a special effort. A patient appreciates a prescription that there has been so much trouble over, and when he takes it he derives some benefit from it. But don't you do any more of that three-minute business, my boy, if you want to become a first-class druggist. It won't do. You've got to study human nature."—Rochester Union.

WRECK ON THE LEHIGH

TROUBLESOME ACCIDENT AT BOUND BROOK THIS MORNING.

Fast Freight Broke In Two—Front Section of Train Stopped and was Crashed Into by the Detached Cars.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, March 15—The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company were troubled again with a bad wreck this morning, caused by a fast freight train breaking in two and the first section slowing up and the detached cars crashing into the forward cars. The accident occurred at 1:45 o'clock. A defective coupling was the cause of the break, which occurred on the curve west of the station. As the engineer approached the station he was signaled to slow up and did so. Then the rear end of the train crashed into the forward section.

Five box cars were derailed and badly smashed by the collision. Two of the cars were thrown to one side and crashed into two passenger coaches that stood on a siding during the night. The coaches were also badly wrecked. Both tracks were blockaded temporarily, but the wrecking crew from Jersey City had the west bound track cleared before daylight. The east bound track was cleared before noon. No one was hurt by the accident.

Costly Election Bonfire.

Prior to last evening there stood at the corner of Park place and Somerset street a small summer house that had seen many hard winters. As the building was small and no damage could result no effort was made to put the fire out.

DR. LEWIS ON HISTORY.

CONCLUSIONS THAT THE LATE WAR HAS DEVELOPED.

The Inheritance of Spain Made Her Unfit to Deal With the Colonies—We are Not Burdened as She Is.

Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., delivered an interesting lecture before the Men's Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church last night upon "The Philosophy of History Illustrated in the Spanish-American War and its Results."

The speaker said: "To the thoughtful student few things are more facinating than the study of history. Not until the present century did men catch sight of its real character and deeper meaning. Recorded history begins in unwritten traditions. Within our historic period the first efforts at permanent chronogical history were mainly by centuries, but the last half of the present century has witnessed the gradual evolution of a philosphy of history.

"In history there is a necessary connection of the parts. The different stages interlock. Going backward you will at last find the initial point where created power—human or divine—brought into existence the germ which is being evolved. History is also unceasing in its movements."

Keeping the foregoing principles and definitions in mind the Doctor here introduced a few remarks about Spain, rehearsing her history when she first came into touch with civilization as a possession of the Carthaginians about 264 B. C.

"Of the National crimes of Spain," the speaker said," four stand out in special prominence. First, the expulsion of the Jews, and then the Moors late in the 15th and early in the 16th centuries. Second, the annals of 'the Council of Blood' in the Netherlands. Third, the Inquisition. Fourth, the policy of extermination of cruel oppression, systematically pursued toward the aborigines of America."

Turning to America Dr. Lewis noted the elements out of which our National life was born, carrying the reader through the various vicissitudes of changeful time past the liberation of 3,000 000 slaves.

"No nation ever separates itself from the past. The inheritance of Spain made her unfit to deal with colonies. She refused to grant justice or listen to wisdom. Our birth was entirely unlike hers. The rise of modern literature, in which the Bible played a prominent part, the Reformation, the political struggle for the rights of mankind, the abolition of slavery and the constant discussion of great ethical questions, combined to enrich our National childhood.

"We have not been burdened by Old World monarchies or checked by ecclesiastics. Free speech, colleges and pulpits have kept investigation at its height. This is not self praise. It is but justice to our history, and we shall be helped to meet the demands of these years by a just recognition of what our fathers have been, of what we are, and of what we ought to be."

Death of Edwin E Brown.

Hope for collector and one naming John Gregory for township committeeman. The regular ticket won as follows: Total vote cast, 304; Mayor, Wm. T. West, 299; Councilmen, John N. Meeker, 290; George H. Warner, 166; collector, C. B Trimmer, 253; commissioner of appeals, Henry Krouse, 284

Clark Township.

The election in this township was very quiet but the workers were all out and a large vote for a spring election was polled. The Republicans succeeded in electing Edward Mays for township committeeman over Addison C. Russell by one vote.

Mountainside Borough.

The whole Republican ticket was elected here yesterday with the exception of the Mayor. There was no Democratic ticket in the field and there would have been no Citizens' ticket had the Republicans not thrown down the present Mayor, Joseph W. Cory. Mr Cory thought it wasn't right so he got a Citizens' ticket in the field and beat the Republican candidate, Louis S. Robbins, by a majority of seven votes.

Pastor Was Surprised.

Rev. H. Eyme, pastor of the German Lutheran church, was given a pleasant surprise last evening at his home by his congregation. A general good time was indulged in and the pastor was substantially remembered. During the evening Miss Eyme entertained the guests with music, and appropriate remarks were made by Pastor Eyme.

A Narrow Escape.

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in eight bottles. It has cured me and thank God, I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's Drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. Guaranteed or price refunded.

The Philadelphia Record says that General Fitzhugh Lee will not be a candidate for the United States Senate. General Joe Wheeler, on the contrary, will hang up his sword and represent his Alabama district in the next Congress. Each of these distinguished gentlemen has demonstrated his fitness to serve his countrymen either in the camp or the forum, and each has been enabled to give stalwart help in breaking down forever the last barriers of sectionalism. All parts of their country have equal delight in doing them deserved honor.

At 214 W. Front St.

Next Door to Music Hall.

This advertisement tells of the greatest event ever known. We have purchased the entire stocks of Messrs. Woodhull, Goodale & Bull, of Syracuse, and Quiri & Wilkie, of Amsterdam, N. Y., at a spot cash price, so very much below the real value of the merchandise that a statement of the exact figures would seem marvelous. A great many retail dealers would gladly take this fine stock of clothing off our hands at a good round profit if we desired to sell that way. But having acquired this $15,000 stock at such a ridiculously low figure, we wish to use it to introduce ourselves with our first sale of the season. On account of the way which we have purchased this stock, we will tomorrow and throughout this great sale offer many goods at less than half and less than one-third their usual value.

Assemblyman Murray's Bill is Killed in Committee.

MR. SQUIRE AGAINST IT.

PLAINFIELDER UNABLE TO RALLY ENOUGH VOTES ON HIS SIDE.

Motion to Get it Out of the Committee Was Tabled in the Assembly—Governor Notifies Both Houses That He Will Not Sign Any Laws After the Legislature Adjourns—Some Other Business.

Trenton, March 16.—Assemblyman Murray tried yesterday afternoon to get out of committee his bill to regulate the rates that telephone companies may charge. Mr. Murray was satisfied he had votes enough to carry through his motion. He called for the yeas and nays, but he and his supporters were caught napping by a motion of his Union county colleague and seat mate, Mr. Squire, to table the motion. The motion to table was put to viva voice vote and many of Murray's supporters failed to respond. The result was that the ayes were perceptibly in the majority and the motion to table prevailed.

The House sustained the adverse report of the committee on judiciary on these two bills: House 127, which prohibits the forcible detention or imprisonment of State's witnesses, and House 258, to compel second-class counties to bear the expense of District Courts in cities of such counties.

Mr. Benny gave notice that he would today move to take from the committee on railroads and canals his bill compelling railroads to maintain a fireman as well as an engineer on all yard engines.

A joint meeting of the two Houses was held at noon, and several commissioners of deeds were confirmed.

President Reed, of the Senate, who presided, turned to Speaker Watkins when the meeting was over and said that that would be his last appearance at a joint meeting, as his term expires with this session.

"It may be mine, too, but I hope not," said the Speaker. Mr. Watkins is a candidate for Senator from Gloucester county.

Gov. Voorhees created a stir in the Legislature by having the presiding officer of each chamber announce that he would not consider any bills that were not on his desk before final adjournment.

This is an innovation, as heretofore the Governor has disposed of bills months after the Legislature has adjourned, and has been obliged thereby to shoulder considerable censure that he does not deserve. It frequently happens that a good measure which reaches the Governor has some fatal defect, which could be readily rectified if the Legislature was in session. But in the absence of the lawmakers the bill dies and the Governor is blamed for killing a good measure. Governor Voorhees is determined to put a stop to this, and has given the Legislature ample warning.

Mr. Benny, of Hudson, offered a set of resolutions setting forth the Governor's request and ordering the various committees to report the bills in their possession as rapidly as possible. The resolutions were adopted

The Senate spent considerable time discussing the repeal of the Dunn act, which allows a man to appear before the court for admission to the Bar upon a certificate of five counselors instead of receiving a clerkship in a lawyers office.

It was opposed by Mr. Martin, who thought that the Dunn law, as it now exists, opened the way for worthy young men to study law who could not afford to give up three or four years of their time, as used to be required. Mr. Pitney favored the bill. He said the purpose of spending three or four years in a law office was not merely to demonstrate the candidate's ability, but to give him practical knowledge.

Mr. McDermott also thought the bill a good one. Three years were more than enough to learn legal definitions and draw up papers, but they were not too long to absorb the principles of the law. The Dunn law was well intended, but it did not operate satisfactorily, President Reed said that he understood the Supreme Court intended, if this act passed, to frame a rule to meet cases where young men of exceptional talent present themselves for admission to the Bar without three or four years' previous study. They will be passed, 11 to 10.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Roome, of Washington Park, have returned from a short stay at Lakewood.

ELECTION IS TO STAND.

NO CONTEST TO BE MADE BY THE BOROUGH DEMOCRATS.

A Conference of Democratic Election Officers and Workers Held Last Night and the Situation Carefully Gone Over.

There will be no contest of the result of the election in the borough. That was decided last night in a conference held by the Democratic members of the election boards, the watchers, the challengers and Messrs. French and Trewin, members of the Democratic county executive committee.

The alleged defective ballots that were thought to be invalid, and which if so declared by the courts would mean the re-election of Mayor Wilson, thus changing the result, were discussed by those who attended the conference and it was finally decided that it would be best not to attempt the contest.

Though it was thought that the ballots would be thrown out if taken into the courts it was concluded that they no doubt voiced the sentiments of those who voted them and were therefore representative in a moral view if not in a legal one.

Under these circumstances the members who attended the conference decided that it would be unfair to make a contest though considerable party vantage might be gained by it in outwitting the nominal Republican victory. Therefore Newt. Smalley can rest assured of carrying the Mayoralty honors for the next two years.

SLANDER SUIT IN COURT.

EDWARD NEIL SAYS THAT MRS. NEWMAN ACCUSED HIM OF ROBBERY.

Action Originally Started Two Years Ago—Plaintiff Secured Verdict for $25, but it was Not Enough to Suit Him.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 16—After nearly two years of adjournments, the slander case in which Edward Neal sued Mrs. Anna Newman, formerly Mrs. Anna Sherman, both of Plainfield, for $200, came to trial yesterday before Judge Bartine who took Judge Vail's place in the county court.

The case was tried in the District Court, Elizabeth, in the summer of '97, and a verdict of $25 given for the plaintiff, but, not satisfied with the amount, he appealed it, and the case was only tried yesterday. Judge Bartine reserved his decision indefinitely.

March 19, 1897, Mrs. Newman's house in the West End, Plainfield, was robbed. She awoke in the night and saw the burglar in her room, and Neil claims circulated the report that it was he.

Mrs. Isaac Steenson, a witness, testified yesterday that Mrs. Newman had said to her right after the robbery, "The man who robbed my house looked like Neil and I think it was Neil."

This Mrs. Newman denies saying, and the evidence, Judge Bartine said, hinges on whether she did or not.

Suggestive of the Dutch.

A pleasant event of unusual interest will be the "Holland Supper" to be given in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church tomorrow evening from 6 until 10 o'clock, under the auspices of the Sunday-school. Everything will be carried out in true Holland style, and this will be well worth the price of admission which is 25 cents, including supper. The proceeds will be for the Sunday-school.

Still Another Creditor.

Another attachment was levied upon the goods of Mrs. Nancy Purviance at the freight house Tuesday. It was for Woodhull & Martin and the amount of the claim was $34.25. T. J. Carey and William Carey appraised the goods yesterday, and took out about $150 worth then allowed the car to proceed on its way to Tarrytown, where Mrs. Purviance has goods.

Glee Club Coming.

It has been definitely settled that the benefit concert of the High School Athletic Associations will be held at the Y. M. C. A. Hall Easter Monday night, April 3d. The Rutgers College Glee Club and a recitationist from the college will entertain. The young people of the two associations at the High School are now started in the work of selling the tickets, which will be 35 cents each.

Goldsbury is Gone.

J. C. Golbsbury, the old colored man who the police have been trying to compell to leave town, has gone at last. He obtained the necessary funds to go from one of the local churches but still hung about the city. At last City Judge Runyon sent Roundsman Frederickson after the old man and started him on his way.

MAY BE A DEADLOCK IN BOROUGH COUNCIL

Three Holdover Councilmen Opposed Smalley's Election.

THEY NEED ONE MORE VOTE.

FOUR COULD PREVENT NEW MAYOR FROM DOING ANYTHING.

It is Not Certain That Such a Condition of Affairs Will Result, But it is a Possible Contingency—The Mayor-elect is Said to Be Opposed to Having a Chief Marshal in the Borough

There is a question in the minds of many borough people as to how the new Mayor and Council will act when the time comes for them to take hold of borough matters. It is known that the three hold-over members of the Council were opposed to Mr. Smalley's candidacy, and if they succeed in securing one of the new members to join them the situation may become very interesting in many respects.

For instance, if Mayor Smalley desired to depose Clerk Arnold and appoint another man, the four Councilmen could fail to confirm, if they desire, and still Mr. Arnold would hold over This might be true in the case of the other appointments. The acts of the Mayor and Council will certainly be watched with unusual interest. Another important step, it is said, will be made in the abolishment of what is known as "secret" sessions of the Council. All borough business will be considered in open meeting.

Among the appointments to be made by Mayor-elect Smalley is a chief of the fire department, a street commissioner, marshals, a borough clerk, a corporation counsel and a delinquent tax collector. It is understood that it is not the intention of Mayor Smalley to appoint a chief marshal, that he favors having all marshals on the same footing and that they shall look to either the chairman of the police committee or himself for orders. In this way it is claimed that the efficiency of the force will be increased.

A representative of The Daily Press is informed that there is not likely to be a delinquent tax collector in the borough the coming year for the reason that Collector G. F. Brown is capable of attending to the duties himself in connection with his regular work.

To Arrange For a Sociable.

This evening at the home of I. W. Travell, College place, there will be a committee meeting of the chairmen of the social and reception committees of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Societies, to arrange for a sociable to be held at the close of the Local Union annual meeting next week Thursday evening in the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Travell is superintendent of the social department of the Local Union.

For a Soldiers' Monument.

The joint committee from the Common Council and Sons of Veterans, recently appointed to take steps to provide a soldiers' monument for Plainfield, will meet Saturday evening at 8 o'clock in the ante-room of the Common Council chamber. A full attendance of the committee is desired as the initiatory steps will be taken to start this worthy effort.

Either to Early or too Late.

There must be a warm atmosphere in the News office judging by the following item which appeared yesterday: "Lawrence B. Bromfield, of East Sixth street, has bought a cottage at Sunset Park, Haynes Falls, N. Y., where he has been spending the summer.

Too Much Election Enthusiasm.

Frank Moncton, of the borough, was one of those whose enthusiasm knew no bounds Tuesday evening and he bubbled over too freely. He was arrested by Marshal Schenck, and yesterday Recorder Long gave him his choice between $5 or five days.

Bought a Summer Home.

L. B. Bromfield, of East Sixth street, has just purchased a summer house at Sunset Park, adjoining Twilight Park, at Haines' Falls, New York State. Mr. Bromfield will go there about July 1st and remain until September 1st.

Stricken With Apoplexy.

Mrs. C. P. Cutter, of 409 West Front street, was suddenly stricken last evening with apoplexy and fell to the floor unconscious. Her family and friends are alarmed at her condition, which remains unchanged today.

Memorial Day in Sight.

The Memorial Day detail of G. A. R. Post, No. 73, will meet in Justice E. D. Moffett's office tonight to make arrangements for Memorial Day.

BEDLOE'S BAD HABITS.

HE FORMERLY RESIDED AND WAS WELL-KNOWN IN PLAINFIELD.

When Alfred Bedloe, who once lived and was well-known in Plainfield, died in 1891, he left his estate of $80,000 to Miss Sarah A Stillwell, his landlady's daughter, cutting his own wife and three children off with $1 a piece. When Bedloe lived in Plainfield he was known as a "high-roller."

Efforts to break his will failed, and Mrs. Bedloe and her children are now suing in the Supreme Court in New York before Judge McLean to recover possession of Bedloe's interest in pier No. 49 East River, worth about $2,000 a year, from Miss Stillwell. He deeded it to her before his death, and the contention is that he was not competent to dispose of his property because of overindulgence in stimulants.

Several witnesses have testified that Mr. Bedloe was often under the influence of liquor. Helen Flack, his grandniece, stated that he was intoxicated repeatedly while he lived at Morristown, two summers before he died.

He resided two miles from the village, and it was his habit to go to the village every day, either by riding on a farmer's wagon or walking, and he invariably returned under the influence of liquor. She testified that he was very irritable and disagreeable.

Miss Stillwell denied that Mr. Bedloe was ever intoxicated to her knowledge and said that "he only drank as a gentleman would.

"He told me once," she said, "when he got some money out of a lawsuit his family ran after him like a pack of wolves."

Q. Did you ever hear Mr. Bedloe swear at his family? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you regard that as the behavior of a polished gentleman? A. No; not exactly.

Q. You swore that he was a polished gentleman? A. He swore because of the injustice they had done him.

Q. Did you sympathize with him? A. I did not. I was shocked.

Q. You had no objection to taking "stock" from a man who shocked you so? A. I thought I had a perfect right to do so, because he knew what I was going to do with it.

She testified that Mr. Bedloe told her that he wanted to arrange his property so that his family would not get any of it. The trial is still unfinished.

BOOM FOR PLAINFIELD.

REAL ESTATE NEWS FORESEES GOOD THINGS FOR THIS CITY.

The Great Miss D. Drake Thinks of Publishing His Paper in This City—He Wants to be Where There is Life.

This week's issue of The Real Estate News will say:

"Before our next issue we expect to perfect arrangements to locate The Real Estate News at Plainfield or Westfield. We believe there is to be a great boom in real estate in these towns and we propose to be at the seat of war. Westfield is just ripe for a great boom under the direction of its Board of Trade. Plainfield, a young city, only needs concentrated effort to start at once on the road to prosperity. Plainfield is considered a beautiful residential town. Already considerable manufacturing is done in and near the city. It has up to date merchants who offer first class goods at low prices. When a business man or the citizens of a town or city lose heart because things don't go just as they would like, take another tact, do something to get up steam some way to keep things moving The Real Estate News offers to take a hand in attracting some of the thousands to towns all along the line who are compelled to leave New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City on account of impure water and many discomforts."

HOT CRITICISM OF SQUIER BY MURRAY.

Plainfield Statesman After the Scalp of His Colleague.

THE TOOL OF CORPORATIONS

MURRAY ASKS SOME PERTINENT QUESTIONS ABOUT SQUIER.

Declares That His Career in the Legislature is Two-faced—On One Side and Then on the Other—Has Reported But Three Corporation Bills Referred to Committee of Which He is Chairman.

Assemblyman Murray is taking a prominent part in the affairs at the State House, Trenton, this session of the Legislature. Yesterday he fought for one of his favorite bills, the cheap telephone bill, and tried to bring it out of the grasp of committee on corporations. He failed, his defeat being principally due to his fellow representative from Union county, George A. Squier.

In conversation with a Daily Press reporter this morning before his departure for Trenton, Assemblyman Murray talked of his telephone bill and expressed himself very freely in regard to Squier's opposition.

"The Bell Telephone Company," remarked the Assemblyman, "charges business houses in Trenton for one person on a wire, unlimited service, $36 per year. For the same service in Plainfield they charge $125. For dwellings the charge in Trenton is $24 for unlimited service. The charge in Plainfield for the same service is $60."

"My bill, No. 99," continued the Assemblyman, "makes the charge for unlimited service for business or dwellings $30 a year. I am trying to have my bill reported to the House, but Assemblyman Squier, of Union county, who is chairman of the committee on corporations, has hold of the bill and refuses to allow the committee to report it. Squier was put at the head of this committee because he was friendly to the corporations.

"Did the people elect him to protect the corporations," demanded Mr Murray, "or to protect the interests of the people? His committee has received twenty-one bills and only reported three this year."

"I appeared before the committee on judiciary, Tuesday, against the District Court bill and asked that committee to make an adverse report giving the argument of the effect on Plainfield. The committee reported the bill adversely yesterday, so it is dead. The bill was supported by both Assemblymen Squier and Houston, of this county.

"Squier has a great way of changing color. One day he is for a bill and then, when he sees someone is against the bill, he wants to put the blame on someone else.

"While Squier did not introduce that District Court bill, he has been behind it from the start and has favored it. He has also expressed his opinion that the bill was a good one and should be passed."

Reorganizing Fire Department.

After the Common Council meeting last Monday night a secret session was held at which time the question of reorganizing the fire department was discussed. While the members would give out nothing for publication it was learned that the plan suggested by Chief T. O. Doane for reorganization will probably be adopted to a large degree. There are many excellent suggestions in Mr. Doane's plans and these are looked upon favorably by the Council and Mayor.

Spring Vacation.

The spring vacation at the Plainfield High School this year will fall at Easter time. The spring vacation is always held during the first week in April. April 1st is considered moving day in this city, and it is the custom to have the vacation fall at that time. This year Easter Sunday is the first Sunday in April. Most of the colleges and universities give Easter week regardless of the time when it comes.

JURY DECIDED QUICKLY.

TOOK ONLY THREE MINUTES TO DECIDE RIGHT OF PROPERTY.

Bard Company Proved That They Were Rightful Owners of Goods That Have Been Sought for By a Creditor.

The trial of the right of property in the case of the Bard Company against Augustus L. C. Marsh, plaintiff in execution, was held in Justice Moffett's court yesterday afternoon. Two more trials are to follow, one in which Editor F. W. Runyon is the plaintiff, which will come up this afternoon. The jury, yesterday, was only out three minutes, then returned with a verdict for the claimants.

Marsh secured judgment against the Bard Cycle Company for $75, and levied upon the goods of the Bard Company. G. W. V. Moy, who represented Marsh in the matter, claimed that the two companies were one, and tried to show fraud in their dealings. George W. Wrennick, the president and secretary of the Bard Company, and the vice president of the Bard Cycle Company, was the principal witness.

The Bard Company was duly incorporated and the articles of incorporation were shown to the court and jury. Murphy & Blatz represented the claimants. The jurymen were Harry W. Marshall, J. H. Doane, Nathan C. Pennington, William E. Alpaugh, Peter A. VanFleet and George Kirch.

Y. M. C. A. CYCLE TOURS.

PHYSICAL DIRECTORS DISCUSS THEM AT CONFERENCE.

Plainfield Will Probably Arrange to Hold Several During the Coming Season—Mr. Heywood at Conference.

The first monthly conference of the Y. M. C. A. physical directors of the metropolitan district was held at the 57th street branch, New York, Tuesday afternoon. C. E. A. Heywood, physical director of the local association, was present.

There was a discussion of the method of systematic grading of gymnastics, gotten up by Ehler and Wegener, of Chicago. Mr. Heywood spoke, telling how he had tried the system in Plainfield and found it an excellent thing in foundation but in need of revising. Mr. Heywood spent several months in revising the system so that it would be suitable to the members of the local gymnasium.

An effort will be made by all the physical directors to revise it and settle on a uniform system.

General Secretary Lewis, of the East Side Branch, read a paper on bicycle touring and advised every association giving a series of tours for its own members. He offered to furnish the necessary information as he has been making a thorough study of the subject. Plainfield will probably accept his invitation and arrange one or more tours of several days duration for the coming summer. The matter will be discussed at the meeting of the Y. M. C. A. cyclers, which will be held about April first.

Bible study for gymnasium members was discussed and Mr Heywood offered to furnish the other directors with a system of topics that he had found so successful in the past. The offer was accepted and the subjects will be presented at the conference in April.

Still Talking Election.

There were many quiet celebrations in the borough last evening as a result of Tuesday's election, and Mayor Smalley received many congratulations, as did also many other successful candidates. At the Cracker Barrel Club many congregated and talked the election all over. Many told how the Republicans were successful, while others tried to account for the defeat of Mayor Wilson. Altogether there were many minds and many opinions.

James Hollenbeck was examined as to his sanity Monday evening by Drs. Long and Carman. They declared him undoubtedly insane. A BOROUGH MADE IN A PECULIAR PLIGHT.

A Nice Muddle in Union County's Latest Municipality.

GOVERNOR IS TO BLAME.

SIGNED BOROUGH BILL WHILE TOWNSHIP ELECTION WAS GOING ON.

The Law Took Effect Immediately and as a Result the Citizens Lived in a Township in the Morning and in a Borough in the Afternoon—Questions That Vexes in the Rights of New Officials.

The citizens of New Providence, one of the largest townships in size and the smallest in population in Union county, are confronted by a peculiar state of affairs and, as a result, they do not know just what their municipal standing is.

Some time ago some of the residents who reside within a mile of the Liberty pole in the centre of the village secured the passage of an enabling act through the Legislature providing for a borough form of government in that part of New Providence in which they reside. This bill became a law, the Governor signing it late Tuesday afternoon, when the regular township election for the election of township officers was nearly over. The borough advocates had waited in vain for the Governor acting, and were obliged to go ahead with the township election according to law.

Notwithstanding the fact that word was sent that the bill had become a law, the election went on and yesterday there was much guessing going on. Those on the winning ticket claim that the election holds good, while the friends of the defeated candidates say that the election cannot be legal because some of the successful candidates are residents of the borough, and because of their residence are not qualified to act as township officials, and that to correct this error it will be necessary to hold special elections for both the township and the borough.

They are upheld in this opinion by the fact that the General Borough act of 1897, under which part of New Providence was incorporated as a borough, does not provide for any case where the borough is formed on election day, while a township election is going on.

Township Counsel Corra N. Williams, of Summit, said when told about the state of affairs at New Providence: "The inhabitants of that portion of the township of New Providence included within the borough will now be compelled to have another election to elect officers for the borough of New Providence. That election will be ordered by the Union County Board of Election upon the application of any legal voter residing in the borough.

"The terms of officers to be elected in the borough will be only for the unexpired time between the date of election and the second Tuesday in March next, when under the General Borough Act of 1897 the annual election for borough officers takes place.

"The township officers elected at the township election held yesterday, still continue in office, and exercise their functions both in the township and the borough until the first Monday succeeding the election of officers in the borough at a special election ordered, by the County Board of Elections, when the township officials cease to have authority in the territory embraced within the borough, but continue to exercise their official power within the remainder of the township for the balance of the town."

Pythians Sixteenth Anniversary.

The committee in charge of the affair consists of G. W. Radford, J. W. A. Bauersachs, Frank Putnam, Edgar Chappel and William Johnson, and this committee reported that the affair will be a memorable one. It will be held in the lodge rooms, and the members of Somerset Lodge, of Bound Brook, will be present as invited guests.

HARD TO EXPLAIN.

If this were published anywhere else but in Plainfield, that is, if the statement given below went the rounds of the press, readers in Boston or New Orleans would not believe it. In the very nature of things men and women will not believe that a simple little pill would have any effect on humanity when the subject is in a serious condition. When it has that effect; when the party is a living witness, perhaps a neighbor, Plainfield people at least cannot possibly deny it, particularly so when investigation is courted. Now ask Mrs. R. Wortman, living with her daughter Mrs. S E. Cook of 204 Somerset street, and see if she will not corroborate the following.

"I used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results for severe pain across my back and hips, which no doubt was caused by the kidneys being out of order. It was painful for me to stoop or bend forward and I could not sit ten minutes in one position but had to be constantly changing about It was the same way at night time. I used many different kinds of medicine recommended for kidney troubles but I could not see that any of them benefitted me. Doan's Kidney Pills were procured for me at L W. Randolph's drug store and it is the only remedy I ever used that gave me any relief. I always keep a supply of them on hand and would not think of being without them. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and advise all who suffer from a lame back to give them a fair trial."

A HOT FIGHT IN THE EAST

Wheaton's Troops Drive Filipinos From Pasig Pateros and Taguig.

363 INSURGENT PRISONERS

Four Thousand Rebels Put to Flight—Gen. Otis Says it Was the Greatest Victory Since Feb. 2d—Four Hundred Insurgents Killed in the Fight Which is but the Beginning of the End.

Manila, March 16.—The town of Pasig was captured yesterday after seven hours' desperate fighting. The American troops engaged comprised one battalion of the Twentieth infantry, three companies of the First Washington infantry and two companies of the Second Oregon infantry, with two guns of Scott's battery of the Sixth artillery. The insurgents lost four hundred men in the fight.

The First Washington infantry, commanded by Colonel Whally, crossed the river, clearing the insurgents out of Pateros, and Taguig, occupying, thhe ground to the lake and capturing fifty canoes loaded with supplies for the insurgents and one hundred and fifty prisoners.

The town of Pateros was burned. The Twentieth and Twenty-second infantry occupy the opposite river bank. Taguig was the last place offering resistance to our troops.

The Second Oregon infantry in attacking Pasig was assisted by a gunboat, the Fourth cavalry at the same time flanking the insurgents' trenches at Taguig.

General Otis says that General Wheaton's victory is the greatest that has been achieved since that of February 5. The force of the enemy at Pasig numbered 4,000 men.

Three hundred and sixty-three prisoners were taken. The armored tugs rendered excellent service in the attack on Pasig.

The Spanish officers Zovilla and Ruiz, who were charged with embezzling ten thousand dollars last September, have been convicted of the offence. They were sentenced to six months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $2,500 each.

Otis Reports the Fight.

Washington, D. C., March 16.—The latest information of the war department in regard to the campaign in the Philippines is in the form of this dispatch, received at the office of the adjutant general yesterday.

Manila, March 15.

Adjutant General, Washington:

Three thousand insurgents moved down last night to towns of Pasig and Pateros, on shore of Laguna de Bay, confronting General Wheaton's troops on the Pasig river line; by heavy fighting Wheaton has dislodged and driven them back, taking four hundred prisoners and inflicting heavy loss in killed and wounded; he reports his loss as very moderate; he now occupies the two towns with sufficient force to hold them.

OTIS.

The news of the battle by which the towns of Pasig and Pateros were captured is regarded with great satisfaction by the officers of the war department, and it is freely commented on as another result of the new and more aggressive campaign begun under the direction of General Otis and carried into effect by General Wheaton's brigade.

The satisfaction is greater because of the fact that the losses in the engagement, as in all those that have taken place neretofore, were very unequal.

The opinion prevails that if such heavy damage can be repeatedly inflicted on the insurgents it will not be long before the rebel leaders will be willing to make unconditional terms of surrender.

It is said at the war department that the aggressive character of the campaign will be continued without cessation.

The persistence of the insurgent campaign, it is admitted, is a matter of some little surprise to the army administration, and it would not have been believed that the native army, inferior as it is, according to the standards of the armies of civilized nations, could persist so long against superior fighting skill. The military authorities cannot believe, however, that the repeated overwhelming defeats of the enemy will fail, before long, to have the desired effect.

FAILURES TO CHOOSE SENATORS.

Growing Evidence of the Evils of Election by Legislatures.

Washington, D. C., March 16.—The adjournment of the Delaware legislature without the choice of a United States senator adds another straw to the camel's back. The failures of senatorial elections by state legislatures makes it every year more evident that a change must be made in the method. This year's crop of disgrace and scandal is greater than ever before; but in this progress from bad to worse lies the hope of relief.

The House of Representatives, with only eleven lissenting votes, declared itself last year in favor of the direct election of senators by the people, and of these eleven dissentients four came from Connecticut.

State after state, through its legislature, has recommended the same thing, and all that the reform now awaits is such an arousing of public sentiment as will move the United States Senate itself.

Occurrences such as have marked the contests in the legislatures of California, Utah, Pennsylvania and Delaware, this year, have convinced everybody who has seen them at close range that our constitutional machinery in this particular is sadly defective.

Now Delaware follows Utah's example—closes its legislative doors with one senator short. This means a Senate of eighty-eight members, even if all the other deadlocks are straightened out, which is unlikely.

Wages Advanced Ten Per Cent.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 16.—The Pennsylvania Tube Company, employing several thousand men, has advanced wages ten per cent.

AFFAIRS IN CUBA.

Believed the Assembly Will Dissolve and Thus Avoid Trouble.

Washington, D. C., March 16.—The war department has been informed that the indignation of the people in Havana against the so-called Cuban assembly is at such a pitch it may cause that body to dissolve of its own accord, and General Brooke may not be required to issue his intended order demanding its disbandment immediately.

This is the reason General Brooke did not act as expected. He will await developments before carrying out the orders of this government.

Should by any circumstances the comittee appointed by the so-called Assembly, visit Washington to present the resolutions passed by that body to the President, it will not receive any sort of recognition here. The position of the Administration on such matters is well defined. The State Department took occasion only the other day to issue an official reminder that Cuba and Porto Rico are at present under military law, and that only our military officials there will be recognized.

General Brooke's despatches have shown his belief that the Cuban people will endorse a forcible dispersal of the Assembly, and it is apparnt from what h has telegraphed to the War Department that he contemplates that action unless there is an improvement in the conduct of the Assembly.

Brooke and Gomez Confer.

Havana, March 16.—General Gomez held a two hours conference with Governor General Brooke yesterday. The Junta Patriotica dissolved last night after passing resolutions of adherence to Gomez.

A number of newspaper dealers gathered at the office of a Havana paper which had not criticised the action of the Military Assembly on Saturday in terms sufficiently strong to suit the people, and they requested that today's issue contain an article showing that the paper sided with the people; also notifying the management that they would refuse to sell this paper if the request was not complied with.

A spirit of restlessness, especially during the evenings, is noticeable in the vicinity of Central Park, where the men congregate and talk politics. The police have orders not to allow groups to assemble and are dispersing them. This causes uncomplimentary comment about the force, the people declaring that the police are interfering with their rights and freedom.

Col. Cole Fears Trouble.

New York, March 16.—Among the passengers from Havana on the Vigilancia were Colonel Ashley W. Cole, State Railroad Commissioner, and his wife.

"I have found in Cuba," said Colonel Cole, "a feeling of unrest among all classes except the wealthy, at the continued occupation by the American troops, and at the delay in the forming of the government. American soldiers are dissatisfied and homesick. Let the Cubans have the island, I say.

"I believe General Gomez's removal means trouble. For the American's to attempt to suppress the Assembly by the bayonet would mean further complication. The situation on the island is critical."

To Take a Census of the Cubans

Washington, March 16.—The Administration has decided to take a census of the island of Cuba as complete and careful as that taken in the United States. A census is found necessary to determine who are citizens and qualified electors, before an election is held to establish a representative government. This census will be taken by the military authorities of the United States.

It is known that the $3,000,000 on its way to Cuba will be applied to the soldiers of the Cuban army; matters not whether Gomez be there or not, or whether he accepts the position.

The government will deal with the individuals of the Cuban army, and the money will be paid to the soldiers United States officers.

The payment of the $3,000,000 to the Cuban soldiers will form a basis of the proposed census, as considerable information concerning the Cuban will be taken at that time.

INVENTER HOLLAND GOES ABOARD

He May Interest France in His Submarine Boat.

New York, March 16.—The American liner St. Paul which sailed yesterday for Southampton carried among her passengers two members of the Filipino junta. They are Dr. Jose Losada and Senor Sixto Lopez, Agoncillo's right-hand man.

They are the last two members of the Philipino junta to leave the United States. When Agoncillo made his flying trip to Canada and afterward to England, Dr. Losada was ill in Washington, and Lopez remained to care for him. The other two members of the junta left Washington for Canada some time ago.

Another passenger whose sailing is internationally interesting is John P. Holland, inventor of submarine boats. His wife and child accompany him. He was met at the pier by Captain Zalinski, the expert in high explosives, who is interested in Holland boats. They had a long and earnest conversation. After it Captain Zalinski said that Mr. Holland was going abroad for his health, but admitted that the consultation had some bearing on the possibilities of the purchase, now contemplated by France, of one of the Holland boats. France had one such boat, the Zeda, he said, and was much interested in the submarine boat Holland.

"Other European nations are anxious to secure good submarine boats," said the captain, "since the practical worthlessness of torpedo boats has been demonstrated, and you know a man's inventions are best presented by himself."

When Mr. Holland was speaking in regard to the real objects of his trip, he said:

"My health is impaired and I need a change."

"Will you try to sell the Holland or other similar boats of your invention to France and to other European governments?"

"I am," he replied with a quiet smile, "not going to stay at Southampton. I shall in all probability go to France, and maybe to other countries. I am interested in submarine boats."

BOSS CROKER'S DINNER

Mr. Bryan Wants things Explained before He Attends.

IS IT TO BOOM VAN WYCK?

Tammany's Rank and File Beginning to Revolt Already—The People of the East Side Oppose It, and Norman E. Mack Is Leading the Revolt Up the State—Too Expensive a Luxury.

New York, March 16.—Democratic leaders all over the country are curious to know the real purpose of the Croker-Belmont Jefferson Day dinner, and the list of invited guests, if ever made public, will be read with much interest.

Many rumors about the dinner are in circulation. A rumor has reached Buffalo that Croker is going to start a movement at the dinner for the nomination of Augustus Van Wyck for president in 1900.

Another rumor in circulation in the South and West has it that Mr. Croker is to make his bow at the dinner as the leader of the sound money and expansion wing of the Democratic party. The southern members of Congress are much interested in the movements of the Tammany leader at this time, and they have heard a rumor that Croker wants to make William Sulzer minority leader in the Fifty-sixth Congress. Congressmen Richardson of Tennessee, and Bankhead of Alabama are candidates for the place.

The latter has the support of Joe Bailey, the retiring leader. It is expected that there will be a close fight in the caucus between the two southerners, and the votes of the Tammany congressmen may be enough to decide the contest.

It is understood at the Democratic Club that the list of speakers for the dinner will be revised by Mr. Croker, and that the men who are asked to make speeches will receive a tip to ignore free silver and the Chicago platform.

The following telegraphic correspondence between W. J. Bryan and President Belmont of the Democratic Club has been made public:

Hon. Perry Belmont, Democratic Club, New York:

Invitation received. Remembering that you openly repudiated the Chicago platform in the last campaign, I wish to know before answering, inquire whether you have, since the election, publicly announced your conversion to the principles set forth in that platform.

W. J. BRYAN.

Colonel W. J. Bryan, Lincoln, Neb.:

The invitation extended to you is on behalf of the Democratic Club. Individual opinions have not been considered in issuing invitations to celebrate the birthday of Thomas Jefferson.

PERRY BELMONT.

The dinner committee is in a bad way. Many of the district leaders have mustered up courage enough to tell Croker that the Belshazzar feast is hurting Tammany Hall in the crowded East and West Side districts, where many of the poor have to depend upon charity for coal and simple articles of food.

The proposition to spend fifteen thousand dollars on a dinner does not meet with any favor from the constituents of Senators Ahearn, Plunkitt, Foley, Feathersoh and Sullivan, and in Dock Commissioner Murphy's district there is a big protest.

Curiously enough the dinner does not seem to find much favor with the Tammany office holders. Many of them are frank enough to say so and tell the reason why. They assert that there is hardly a week that they are not taxed for something in their assembly district; that they are forced to belong to their district clubs as well as to the costly Democratic Club and as a result are never out of debt.

"Half of us," said a Tammany man, "have our salaries mortgaged to money brokers. This dinner will cost each of us about twenty dollars, and this is a big sum to many. We are compelled to spend both time and money at the Democratic Club and all agree that Mr. Croker is the most expensive leader for the boys we have ever had.

Outside of Tammany Hall there is also dissension. The letters of William J. Bryan and Chairman Jones declining to attend the dinner unless Tammany should declare for the Chicago platform, is not nearly so disturbing to Mr. Croker and his friends as the evident intention of Democrats up the state to boycott the affair.

While the dinner committee has decided to invite former Governor Hill, it is known that the statesman of Wolfert's Roost will not attend, and from remarks which he made last Sunday to a prominent Brooklyn Democrat the inference has been drawn that he will prevent the attendance of many men notable throughout the state.

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 16.—The snow bound train on the Cheyenne and Northern, at Wheatland, has been abandoned by the company officials who will rescue the passengers with sleds.

An effort was made at rescue with a Union Pacific rotary plow. It cut out a mile of ice and snow yesterday, but was recalled because of another storm.

John Oakley of Aberdeen, S. D., William Pettigrew of Douglas, Wyo., and John Owen of Wheatland, Wyo., passengers, arrived here last night. They walked ten miles in snow shoes to meet one of the relief trains and then boarded a light engine. They are in a pitiful condition.

Oakley's feet were frozen while walking from the imprisoned train and all have swollen limbs and are emaciated from lack of proper food. They report that the other passengers are sick from the meagre diet of the last two weeks.

In Aid of Spanish Prisoners.

Madrid, March 16.—Premier Silvela has declared that he is making diplomatic arrangements with the United States government, through the French ambassador, stating that the Americans are obliged to release the Spanish prisoners in the Philippines according to the terms of the treaty, and adding that if the Americans are unable to carry out their engagements they have no right to hinder the Spaniards from ransoming their countrymen.

ROAST BEEF WAS BOILED.

Evidence that Gen. Grant Violated the Law.

Chicago, March 16.—Dr. John B. Shaw of Joliet, Ill., surgeon of the Third Illinois volunteers, testified before the army beef inquiry court yesterday that on the voyage from Newport News to Porto Rico canned roast beef was issued and there was a great deal of complaint about it.

It was stringy, pulpy and nauseating and did not seem to nourish the men. Much diarrhoea followed the use of it. The witness attributed the sickness to ptomaine poisoning. He believed that ptomaines would develop in the hot sun in five or six minutes after a can was opened. If the meat were properly sterilized ptomaines would not develop.

While in Porto Rico twenty-five miles from Ponce, the matter of rations was taken out of the regiment's hands to a great extent. General Grant seemed to know more about it than anybody else.

"He cannot violate the law?"

"He did."

"Did he issue orders?"

"He issued whatever he saw fit."

"The law requires the surgeon to supervise the cooking of that which is issued. Did you interest yourself to ascertain what was being issued to the enlisted men?"

"We saw what was issued and took it because we could not get anything else. We had canned roast beef nearly all the while, and the men refused to eat it. It was ordered condemned and we buried a lot of it. One of the men said if we didn't bury it it would bury us. A board of survey was ordered, but the witness never heard anything more about it.

"As to the refrigerator beef, very little of it was used, at least three-fourths of it would have to be cut off. I do not think any chemicals had been used on the meat. It was simply spoiled. The meat had undoubtedly been acted upon by the heat, which had softened it. The fat and grease and gelatine had all intermingled with the fibre."

William J. Wilson, former West Park Commissioner and founder of the Wilson Packing Company, which supplied the British army with canned beef during the first Zulu war, where the temperature was hotter than in Cuba or Porto Rico, may go before the court of inquiry before it leaves Chicago. The Wilson Company went out of existence in 1885, and it has no successor, according to its founder.

"There never was such an article as canned roast beef for commercial purposes," said Mr. Wilson yesterday. "It is possible to can it, but too expensive to make it practicable. Every bit of beef that is sold under the label of canned roast beef is nothing but boiled meat. Canned roast beef is a trade lie and that is all you can say for it.

"During the whole of the Zulu war the Wilson Packing Company shipped thousands of dollars' worth of canned beef to the English army, in the hottest country in the world. Out of all that quantity we never received a protest from the British government about the beef spoiling. Some of it was kept in the tropics for months and eaten and there was no cause for complaint. It was not the same kind of canned beef that was furnished to the American troops last year. This beef the American troops complained of, as I understand it, was in round cans. It was not what is known as compressed beef. It was simply boiled beef."

School Furniture Trust.

New York, March 16.—In the American School Furniture Company, incorporated recently with a capital stock of ten million dollars, manufacturers of at least ninety-five per cent. of the output of school furniture are interested. The combination will put an end to the competition of the last ten years. The firms included are in Grand Rapids, Detroit, Buffalo, Cleveland, Richmond, Burlington and many other places in the West.

G. A. Reed, vice president of the Grand Rapids Company, has been the prime mover. G. W. Perkins, president of the Grand Rapids Company, is president of the combination. It was said by one of the trade that the object was to centralize business and raise prices. Prices have already advanced, he said 25 per cent., and a similar advance is to be made on April 1.

Two important firms and a half dozen smaller ones, now independent, will soon be absorbed, it is believed.

Judge Hilton Ill.

New York, March 16.—The fact of Judge Hilton's illness and its seriousness was revealed in the reference hearing on the debts of his son, Albert B. Hilton, in connection with a dry goods venture.

Mr. Hilton told the referee yesterday that his father, to whom he owed $4,250,000, was too ill to attend a hearing.

Judge Hilton has been ill ever since his return to the city from Saratoga last October. Lately his illness has increased to such a serious extent that only his physician, private secretary and trained nurse are allowed in his room, and sometimes his secretary is kept out.

Knit Goods Men Confer.

New York, March 16.—More than one hundred knit goods manufacturers met in the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday to consider the advisability of forming a combination.

Many are said to be opposed to it. A Philadelphia lawyer named Baker, who was chiefly instrumental in getting up the meeting, said that the proposition is to issue $25,000,000 preferred seven per cent. stock and $30,000,000 common stock.

It is figured that a saving of $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 would be effected in turning out $50,000,000 worth of goods.

Soldiers Killed at Santiago.

Washington, D. C., March 16.—The following notice was given to the press yesterday by Adjutant General Corbin:

"The secretary of war requests that parents and friends of soldiers who were killed around Santiago or who have since died in Cuba desiring their remains sent home send their home addresses to the quartermaster general of the United States army, Washington, D. C., the remains upon arrival in this country will be sent by express to the address given. Otherwise the remains will be interred at Arlington."

MILES VS. WHEELER

DISOBEDIENCE IS ALLEGED

Young, Wood and Roosevelt Included in the List of Officers Who, According to the General Commanding, Acted Contrary to Orders—A Tempest Likely.

Washington, D. C., March 16.—Within the last day or two charges have been made that the secretary of war and the adjutant general are trying to prevent General Wheeler getting a commission in the army because he is a friend of Miles.

These stories are both untrue and foolish. The war department is not circulating reports about General Wheeler's gallantry or his record in the war with Spain.

On the other hand it was General Miles himself who first made the charge that General Wheeler fought the battle of Las Guasimas against the orders of General Shafter.

When General Miles was before the war investigating commission he directly charged General Wheeler, General Young, Colonel Wood and Lieutenant Colonel Roosevelt with disobeying orders by precipitating the fight at Las Guasimas and thus causing all the suffering and subsequent trouble to the United States troops by opening the battle before Santiago before the stores and medical supplies were unloaded from the transports.

Although great publicity has been given to General Miles's charges in regard to the refrigerated beef, his charges that the officers named violated orders have not been so widely made public.

In fact, his testimony before the war board in this regard has never been published in full, and the publication of it now will no doubt as greatly surprise the friends of the officers named as it did the war board when the testimony was first given.

Although General Miles does not name Governor Roosevelt in his testimony, he does say that the command under General Wheeler, General Young and Colonel Wood was the one which disobeyed orders.

Governor Roosevelt was then lieutenant colonel of the Rough Riders, under Colonel Wood (now General Wood) and of course is included in those accused by General Miles.

General Miles was asked by General Beaver of the board certain questions in regard to the condition of the troops after they landed at Baiquiri; what food, raiment, shelter and ammunition were supplied; the character and facilities for transportation and the condition of the roads.

After these questions had been answered by General Miles, General Beaver continued:

"Was the amount of transportation available equal to the demands made upon it for the supply of the troops—the proper supply of them?"

General Miles—No, sir.

"Was that occasioned by the lack of transportation itself or the inability of handling it on the roads?"

General Miles—Well, I can only tell you what the reports were as made to me in regard to that.

"Yes. You had no personal observation especially in regard to them?"

General Miles then began his narration of the conditions and made the charges of disobedience referred to. The following is a verbatim report of his testimony:

"I saw the condition of affairs and then inquired as to the condition or causes of the conditions. I received reports from the officers. General Shafter reported to me that he had started to disembark at Baiquiri and directed General Lawton to move in advance on Siboney, and that his orders were that he should remain there, put his division in position until troops, transportation and supplies could be landed, and give his men and animals two or three days' rest to straighten out, as is always done in an expedition moving against an enemy.

"General Lawton reported to me that while he was doing this the command of General Wheeler, General Young and Colonel Wood moved through his camp. General Lawton reported that he had received information from General Chaffee that there was a scheme on hand to leave him in the lurch and have a fight. And the next morning he heard firing at some distance away supposing it was some of his advance guard of Cubans having a fight with the Spaniards. But he learned that these men—General Wheeler, General Young and Colonel Wood—had gone out regardless of orders which had been received for them to remain in this place until they were prepared to go—this in direct violation of former orders—and very soon a message came down urging that reinforcements be sent there.

"The order, had it been obeyed and not been disregarded, would have enabled them to unload stores properly and load their wagons, and the men would have probably carried three days' rations and moved into the enemy's country better equipped, and with all their allowance of tentage, which was an important matter."

Thus, it will be seen that General Miles openly charged these officers with violation of orders and bringing about subsequent suffering to the soldiers. These charges were the first intimation that the war department had of any such thing, and the friends of General Wheeler can blame General Miles for starting any report, which is now being circulated against the gallant little Alabamian for disobeying orders and thereby not deserving a position in the regular army.

The charges of General Miles will also be of interest to the friends of Gov. Roosevelt.

Telephone Rate Reduced.

New Haven, Conn., March 16.—The Southern New England Telephone Co. officially announces a reduction of rate for single wire business service from $120 to $100 a year, affecting the cities of New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport and Waterbury.

Sunday Train Bill Passed.

New Haven, Conn., March 16.—The Senate, by a vote of 20 to 4, has passed the bill giving the railroad commission power to authorize Sunday trains.

RED CROSS WORK IN CUBA.

Operation Interrupted by the War to be Resumed.

Washington, D. C., March 16.—Miss Clara Barton and the executive committee of the national Red Cross announce that they are to undertake at once the completion of the work of relief in Cuba, begun a year ago, but since interrupted by hostilities between Spain and the United States.

The service is to be auxiliary to other relief work by the government and purely of a hospital nature, to shelter the homeless and care for the sick. Incidentally it is proposed to establish in the city of Havana a hospital for civilians, designed especially as an institution where Americans who are taken seriously ill may receive that care and attention which they would receive in a similar institution at home. The character of the work is fully set forth in the following letter from the president to Miss Barton.

Dear Madam—The president of the United States, being desirous of furthering to the fullest extent relief work in Cuba, is pleased at the prompt offer of services by the Red Cross, which he accepts. He will be glad to have the Red Cross, acting as auxiliary to the relief service of the war department, take up the establishment of hospital institutions as proposed in the following plan submitted to Major General J. R. Brooke, military governor of Cuba and approved by him:

"At the call of the president, under the direction of the secretary of war, and in direct co-operation with the United States authorities in Cuba and the war department to establish institutions of a hospital character in places where needed, sheltering the homeless, caring for the sick and helpless, and incidentally encouraging the people to help themselves, leaving the other forms of relief to the government, unless requested to assist.

The work of the Red Cross to include the establishment and maintenance (until self supporting), of a modern American hospital in Havana, designed for civilians, and especially as an institution where Americans can go and receive that care and attention which they could get in a similar institution at home.

Under this plan the special mission of the Red Cross will be to assist in sheltering the homeless and to care for the sick among the inhabitants of Cuba, with the resources already at its disposal, or which may be contributed. The operations of the Red Cross will be under the supervision and protection of the military government established in Cuba.

Higher Wages in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 16.—The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company of East Pittsburg has advanced wages in the copper and riveting departments fifteen and twenty per cent. Over two hundred men will be benefited.

The employes of the Monongahela furnace company, part of the National Tube Company, will have their wages advanced ten per cent dating from the 16th of this month.

The stockholders of the Keystone Tumbler Company of Rochester, Pa., yesterday voted to dispose of their property to the proposed flint glass combination.

Missouri Insurance Laws.

Jefferson City, Mo., March 16.—The Senate has passed two important insurance bills. One places fire insurance companies doing business in St. Louis and Kansas City under the state anti-trust law. This does away with boards of underwriters in these cities.

The other bill requires mutual life insurance companies to file annual statements showing the individual salaries of officials, the gross and net earnings an dinvestments. Forfeiture of license is the penalty for not doing so.

Yale's Next President.

New Haven, Conn., March 16.—The Yale Alumni Weekly says that alumni sentiment in Chicago, Cincinnati, Dayton, O., St. Louis, Washington, New York, Boston, Hartford, Waterbury and other Yale centers, to which places one of its editors has just made a trip, demands the following three things of Yale's next president:

First, that his reputation be a national one; second, that he be a Yale man; and third, that he be a young man. Governor Roosevelt is a Yale man.

Indian Trouble Feared.

Price, Utah, March 16.—Reports from White Rocks Agency are that Indian leaders there are restless and serious trouble is anticipated by Agent Myton.

The Indians behind the agitation are old men and were identified with the Meeker massacre. They say if Washington does not pay for their lands in Colorado they will go back there.

Gov. Roosevelt to Go West.

Albany, N. Y., March 16.—Governor Roosevelt will leave on April 8 on the second trip outside of the state since his inauguration. His first trip was to Washington.

He will be the guest of the Hamilton Club of Chicago, on April 9 and 10. On his return he will stop at Ann Arbor, Mich., and deliver an aldress.

Nancy Guilford Very Ill.

Bridgeport, Conn., March 16.—The condition of Dr. Nancy Guilford, who is awaiting trial on the charge of killing Emma Gill of Southington, is alarming. She is suffering from a bad attack of nervousness brought on by worry.

Upon the recommendation of all Physician Banks, Sheriff Hawley engaged a trained nurse for the prisoner.

American Money in Germany.

Chicago, March 1 —The American Trust and Savings Bank of this city, having on its accounts this week a credit balance in Germany of one million dollars, loaned it out this week on that market at four and one-half per cent.

This is a better rate than could be secured in Chicago, as four per cent. is the best figure now paid for call loans.

The Easiest Way

To rent your house if it is in prospect of remaining vacant for the next twelve months is to step into or send to The Daily Press office a small advertisement for the Cent-a-word Column.

The Cost Is Trifling

When you consider the profitable results that may come from such publicity. Thousands of Plainfield people have tried it and found that the plan

Works and Pays Well.

Mr. Arnold Not at Fault.

Mayor Wilson, when Borough Clerk Arnold was directed to give the printing of the borough report to David J. Carney, you lost your fight right there and then. When the Courier-News Saturday called the attention of borough voters to the discrepancy in the bid made by the Courier-News for the work,—($38 for 800 copies,) and the price paid to Carney,—$60—it set enough people in the borough thinking to accomplish your defeat. It is little things like these that make office holders and unmake them.—News.

For one who was directly interested in the printing of the borough report the editor of the News exhibits a lamentable lack of knowledge of the circumatances of the award. The facts are these: Councilman McLaughlin called on Mr. Arnold and informed him that Mr. Carney intended to bid on the printing of his report. Mr. Arnold declared that as it was his report and that he ought to control it, he did not intend to allow Mr. Carney to bid on it. He said that he should ask for bids from both The Press and the News, but from no one else, as he believed the job should be done in either one of the local newspaper offices. Thereupon, exercising his power as chairman of the committee on printing and stationery, Mr. McLaughlin took the report out of the hands of Borough Clerk Arnold and stated that he would see to the printing of it himself.

When the proprietor of The Daily Press was informed that Mr. Carney was to bid on the job, and in view of the anxiety that Mr. McLaughlin exercised that the latter should have that privilege, he decided that it was a foregone conclusion that Mr. Carney was to receive the award irrespective of the bids. Therefore The Press did not bid on the job. As stated by the News, that paper's bid was the lowest, but Mr. Carney got the job. The reader can draw his own conclusion.

But so far as Mr. Arnold is concerned he is entirely free from any fault in the matter.

Do Not Delay Too Long.

It was expected that the City Fathers would deal with the question of the reorganization of the Plainfield fire department at the meeting of the Council Monday evening, but they did not. The ordinance, it is said, was not complete. There will be no action taken until the meeting of the Council the first Monday evening in April.

For several months the volunteer firemen of this city have been waiting for the Council to take action. Monday night the Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company decided to disband in a month, all the other companies having taken practically the same action already.

It is not a real disbandment that the firemen propose. The companies were organized by the Council and cannot be disbanded without the authority of that body. The members can, however, stop doing fire duty and resign as individuals from the various companies. According to the action taken by the companies they intend to stop doing duty on May 1st.

While careful consideration of the new ordinance is but right, let there be no delay beyond that necessary in the presentation and passing of the new ordinance. The present volunteers are all exempt now and cannot be expected to continue in the present temporary arrangements for very long. The reorganization of the department is needed. Let it, therefore, come as soon as possible.

ATTACHES OF THE CHINESE LEGATION.

Among the popular places in Washington is the Chinese legation on reception days. The hospitable manners of Minister Wu Ting Fang and his wife have made them many friends. There are about fifty attaches of the legation, all living under the same roof with the minister and his family. Most of them are socially inclined.

The Newark Advertiser sensibly remarks that "it is a poor rule that doesn't work both ways. Some politicians in New Brunswick got an act galloped through the Legislature the other day compelling a redistricting of New Brunswick into wards. There was a good show of justice in the bill because the wards were unequally divided. After the bill became a law, however, the discovery was made that it would, after the next census, compel a readjustment of wards in Trenton, where the same conditions prevail. This did not suit the politicians of the same party stripe at Trenton, so another bill was promptly introduced to exempt Trenton from the future operation of the law. While the Legislature has been engrossed in this peanut politics, too, measures of prime importance to the State have been left lying neglected in committee, with little chance of ever seeing the light."

The bill passed by the Assembly making the legal rate of interest five per cent. is in danger of defeat in the Senate in a rather inglorious but very usual manner, if the following pointed comment from the Newark News is true:

It is reported that the bill to make the legal rate of interest five per cent. is to be quietly strangled in the Senate committee to which it was referred. The bill was introduced by Assemblyman Cooper, of Somerset and is understood to be favored by Senator Reed, of that county, who is also president of the Senate. It would be rather mortifying for President Reed to be compelled to confess that he cannot influence a committee appointed by himself to report a bill which he desire to see passed, and all the more so when his colleague in the House not only succeeded in having the bill reported, but in having it passed by a practically unanimous vote.

It looks now as if there will be no legislation for the State supervision of Building and Loan associations this year. The Guenther bill has been killed. Assemblyman Bell's bill is held in the Senate, where Senator Ketcham has a substitute taking in the principal features of the Guenther bill. There is a wide range of opinion on State supervision and no dozen men think alike on the subject. The different factions in the Building and Loan Associations are getting bitter in their fight, and the agitation for legislation is likely to break up in a row.

The little State of Delaware now proposes to enter into competition with New Jersey in offering the hospitality of subservient legislation to the promoters and organizers of illegal and extortionate trusts. This leads The World to pertinently ask: Why is not Delaware satisfied with its record? Has it not Addicks? Has it not the whipping-post? Did it not imprison the Single-Taxers in its jails? Is not the scandal of its Senatorial deadlock enough? Is there no limit to its desire for unsavory notoriety?

Assemblyman Murray yesterday introduced a bill that is designed to aid Plainfield in coping with a paid fire department along the lines suggested by Chief Doane. It authorizes municipalities to assess and raise any sum not exceeding one-fourth of one per cent. of assessed valuation for the maintenance of the fire department.

In response to an enthusiastic admirer Colonel William J. Bryan says that he never advocated Government ownership of the railroads, and that 1900 is too far off for us to determine who will be most available at that time for President.

Again the racetrack gamblers, through their counsel, are fighting against the anti-gambling amendment. Are they in earnest? Do they mean to rehabilitate the racetrack, if they get the chance?—Elizabeth Journal.

Did the editor of The Journal ever hear of the racetrack gamblers being in business for their health.

There is no reason why Mayor-elect Smalley should not enjoy the sobriquet of "Lucky Thirteen."

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The Plainfield Common Council has taken up the sidewalk craze and has started to sidewalk the suburbs to the city line all around. When the work now laid out is finished Plainfield will have a belt of sidewalks completely encircling the town.—Newark Advertiser.

* * * * * *

Twenty little children have addressed a petition to the Legislature asking that a law be passed prohibiting the exhibition on women's hats and bonnets of the bodies or plumage of song birds There is already a State law prohibiting the killing of these birds, but for obvious reasons it is not often enforced. The Legislators no doubt would be willing to do what they could toward making that statute more vital, but to ask them to make many Jerseywomen outlaws is to force a question upon them that few would care to meet squarely. Put a query to a woman as to whether she thinks it right to slaughter birds that her beauty may be adorned, and she will say no; ask her to surrender the dear privilege of crowning her charms with a plumage for which no adequate substitute has yet been found, and she will give the same answer. The abstract and the concrete questions are different to her; so are the man who shoots the birds and the woman who wears them.—Paterson Press.

DOES COFFEE AGREE WITH YOU?

If not, drink Grain-O—made from pure grains. A lady writes: "The first time I made Grain-O I did not like it but after using it for one week nothing would induce me to go back to coffee." It nourishes and feeds the system. The children can drink it freely with great benefit. It is the strengthening substance of pure grains. THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, March 16.—Some of the boys in the borough had a big time Tuesday night, but their fun may lead the seniors trouble. There were four of them in the gang, and they stole a set of carriage wheels from Isaac J. Stites and ran them up on the porch of the Chinamen who keep the laundry, then left them far away from Mr. Stites' shop. They also pelted Samuel B. Merrill, and elderly man, with stones, and annoyed other people with their "fun." Justice Warden has been seen, and this morning it was said that warrants would be issued for the boys' arrest.

George Schenck's seven months old daughter, Ethel, died suddenly yesterday morning after a few hour's illness. She was taken, Sunday night, with convulsions and later was found to be suffering with meningitis. The little child was bright and lively, and ordinarily was quite well. The funeral will be held tomorrow.

A reception was given to Corporal John Fisher by William G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., last night in Apgar's Hall. Guests were present from Plainfield, Bound Brook and Somerville, and they made Fisher feel that his services to his country were appreciated by some people, anyway.

At the school meeting next Tuesday night three school trustees will be elected to succeed Lewis Titsworth, Harry Gaskill and Fred Wilcox, whose terms expire. The meeting will be held in the Whittier building.

There is not much moving about in the borough this spring, and so real estate is not booming. A few families are changing about, but the majority of those moving are people coming in from other places.

Samuel B. Merrill has rented the house on North avenue belonging to Mrs. Cyrus Boice, of Plainfield.

The Milkman Revenged.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I desire to publicly thank those Democratic friends of mine who have stood by me ever since my fraudulent arrest for incurring the displeasure of the officials of the borough of North Plainfield. When it comes to ordering a policeman to hide under a stoop on a dark night and arrest a man the moment he stops for not tieing his horse, threatening to discharge him unless he does, it is high time for the people to call a halt. Words can but feebly express my thanks. We have worked together until the last vestage of authority has been wrested from all those that had any hand in the matter.

OPENING DAYS

Saturday - Monday - Tuesday
March 18th, 20th, 21st.

Under the Direction of Miss Daly.

This announcement of itself is simply a piece of store news; it conveys no hint of the beauty of the show, gives no inkling of the amount of work accomplished, tells no price story, and yet this Millinery Opening marks an epoch in store history. We've raised this branch of our business to a higher level than ever before, a higher level of excellence in the finished products, a lower level of prices. You are invited to visit the store during these reception days, you are invited to inspect all that we have planned and prepared for your approval, you are invited to make price comparisons. It doesn't matter whether the article is a Fine Pattern Hat or a modest bunch of flowers. Every item in this brightly adorned Millinery Department is for sale and it must sell on its own honest merit. Opening days are busy days and we have arranged to have sufficient sales force in attendance. Our trimming department is organized to turn out a large volume of satisfactory work at the shortest notice. Much more might be said, but if you'll favor us with a call we'll let the stock talk, it will tell you more in ten minutes than we could say in an hour and say it more convincingly, too.

Dress Goods Fresh Arrivals They will more than hold their own. They ought not to stay long at these prices, as it will make buying brisk. A pretty lot 36 inch all wool Scotch Suiting, just the thing for satisfactory wear; the price is surprisingly low for the goods—25c the yard. Ten different effects. A little early for Grenadines, but the price will quickly close out this lot. They are 38 inches wide, twelve different designs, value 49c, our price 25c yard. That lot of Black Jacquard Suiting that we place on sale this morning will find many buyers. They are 38 inches wide, strictly all-wool, neat effects, 29c the yard, easily worth 50c. 36 inch Black Mohair Skirting Sicilian, regular 30c quality, 19c yard.

A Silk Season Silks for waists—silks for skirts in fancy and plain, black and colors, good silks and best of all at bargain prices. We place on the counter this morning a beautiful assortment of fine Taffeta Silks in all shades 79c yard.

A GENUINE GEORGIA BARBECUE.

The Only Proper Place for It is the Woods and by a Brook.

The barbecue gets its name from the method of cooking the meats which form its principal substance. It is a pagan feast; its home is in the woods, by some clear running brook, and when found upon its native heath such modern conveniences as knives and forks, tables and chairs, are not known. One of the exposition spots which the Northerners were sure to seek out was the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building, where, at all hours of the day, the good cheer was dispensed. The shed was rather a rough place, for the barbecue with modern conveniences and delicacies would lose its flavor. The chinaware was old ironstone variety, known principally for its thickness. You got knives and forks, it is true, and paper napkins, but the table at which you sat was innocent of linen.

You ordered a dinner. There was brought before you a half-dozen kinds of meats, steaming hot, the aroma of which is pleasing to the appetite if you have one to start on; and if you have none, it is sure to create one for you. Then there is a mysterious dish which they call stew, and pickles and bread and butter, and a cup of not too good coffee is furnished "on the side." The stew is a concoction of many vegetebles, and, for some reason, not altogether clear to its maker, bears the mysterious name of Brunswick. It is a necessary adjunct of the dinner, and when it is made sufficiently hot by pungent peppers, it is indeed a rare appetizer.

The roasting pit is filled with live coals at daybreak. By 7 o'clock the ground is hot through for several feet, then more coals are put on, and the carcases are pierced through with clean hickory poles and laid across the pit. Their cooking refutes the old phrase that a watched pot never boils, because the meats are carefully tended during the entire time; for to make them crisp and tender without burning they must be turned every fifteen or twenty minutes.—Harper's Weekly.

The Sultan and His Harem.

A distinguished lady who has the entree to the harem assures me, says a correspondent of the Fortnightly Review, that its present inmates dress more or less in European fashion, but almost invariably in the costliest conceivable tea gowns from Paris and Vienna. They wear magnificent diamonds and other jewels, and appear to lead a very happy life.

It must not for a moment be concluded that because a woman is an inmate of the Serai she does not possess a legal husband of her own. Many of the ladies are the wives of Pashas, and, like our own Court ladies, have only a stated period of waiting in each year. But the majority of the married denisens of this world within a world, be they mistresses or maids, have husbands holding some palace appointment, and apartments and families within its walls. The harem ladies have a fair share of liberty. In the regulation yashmak and feridje they can go out driving and paying visits whenever they choose, and they haunt the bazaars, the Grande Rue de Pera, and other public promenades. They have, moreover, many entertainments among themselves. There is a very pretty theater in the gardens of the palace, where operas and ballets are frequently given for their entertainment. In summer they swarm up the Bosporus to the Sweet Waters of Asia, and in spring and autumn to the Sweet Waters of Europe; but they are never seen on foot. As to the Sultan himself, his life is of the simplest and most arduous. He rises at 6 o'clock and works with his secretaries until noon, when he breakfasts. After this he takes a drive or a row on the lake within his vast park. When he returns he gives audiences. At 8 o'clock he dines; sometimes alone, not infrequently in company of one of the ambassadors. Very often, in the evenings, he plays duets on the piano with his younger children. He is very fond of light music, and his favorite score is that of "La Fille de Mme. Angot." He dresses like an ordinary European gentleman, always wearing a frock coat, the breast of which on great occasions is richly embroidered and blazing with decorations.

He is the first Sultan who has done away with the diamond aigrettes, formerly attached to the imperial turban or fez. The President of the United States is no more informal than the Sultan in his manner of receiving guests. He places his visitor beside him on the sofa, and himself lights the cigarette he offers him. As the Padishah is supposed to speak no language but Turkish and Arabic, his Majesty, who is a perfect French scholar, carries on conversation through a dragoman.

English Tarts and American Pie.

Mr. Kipling's scientific characterization of a certain area of the American continent as the New England pie belt was good wit, and yet when you meet the English pie in a life and death struggle you wonder how Mr. Kipling can see the funny side of anything. I don't wish to traduce, to bring the pallor of humiliation to the cheek of the English pie, which indeed is respectable and built to stay by you, but I must say that the pie of the genus Britannicum is not to my mind the ideal pie. I happened to be in England during the annual sway of the plum tart, and on one occasion shyly broke the pallid crust of one of this species. It was a desolate, sour experience akin to the condition in which you work your famished way through a lifeless hunk of English bread. On such occasions of gastronomic craving and depression I resolutely tightened my own pie belt another hole and made desert of my glowing and savory memories of Parisian pastry. As their pie, so a people. Quoth Mr. Beecher once in an interview I was trying to conduct with him at the dinner table of the lamented Grand Pacific: "Pie, sir, goes with civilization. Where there is no civilization there is no pie." But there is pie and pie.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

THE CHURCH OF ROME

In a Protestant Journal He Is Forced to Admire Its Virility and Grandeur. The Result of Bismarck's Opposition.

The Christian Advocate contains the following article, written by Rev. H. K. Carroll, a Methodist minister, lately arrived from Porto Rico. His admiration for the Church of Rome contrasts wonderfully with those who write about the church in non-Catholic periodicals:

"The Roman Catholic church has more profoundly affected human affairs doubtless than any other church which has borne the Christian name. Men do not admit its claims or approve its record or agree with its systems of doctrine and ecclesiastical control, but they cannot withhold a certain veneration for the fullness of its years, the universality of its dominion and the persistency with which it lives through assaults. No other church was ever able to assemble so large and imposing a body of prelates as met in the Vatican council. No other church compares with it in reach of influence over the masses of mankind. No other church could endure the losses it has suffered and have a name to live. Its history challenges admiration from the mere fact that it crosses so many centuries, goes so far back toward the dim and distant day when he who was given to the world as its King gave his name to the world as the Saviour of men. Whatever men may think of it, however earnestly they may assail it, whatever combinations may be made for its overthrow, all must agree that it seems sublimely indifferent.

"It is evidently not to be crushed by any forces yet discovered. Kings who have measured arms with it have in the end gone to Canossa, and but recently a man whose name was a synonym of strength in Europe went to his grave after a memorable conflict with the powers at Rome in which he was not successful. The Iron Chancellor of the German empire carried on a 'kulturkampf' remarkable for its severity. He did not wield the sword against it.

"We have come to regard bloody persecutions as the harbinger of increase instead of the agent of extinction. He used purely civil and legal means and sought by a parliament under a constitutional government to undermine the power of the church and make it subservient to his wishes. He suppressed many of its religious orders and compelled their members to leave the country. He laid the heavy hand of government on bishop and priest on the basis of state control over a church enjoying state support. It is true that he had a political end to gain, and it is said that he gained it, but the church has emerged from what was pronounced a duel to the death without the scars of wounds.

"Bismarck knew how to be the friend afterward of the organization which he had treated as a foe, and by a gradual process the series of repressive laws which he had called into existence was repealed, and the church long since came into full possession of its old time liberty. The Catholic church can claim, according to the census of 1895, 11,000,000 souls in Prussia, or about 34 per cent of the population."

Colonel Daniel Morris of Atlantic City before he died made a will leaving a fortune to Catholic institutions as follows: To Bishop McFaul, $90,000 for charitable purposes and $40,000 to found a home for the aged. To St. Michael's Orphan asylum for boys, at Hopewell, which he built and to which he gave $50,000 during his lifetime, is left $25,000. St. Joseph's Home, Beverly, gets $10,000; St. Mary's Orphan asylum, New Brunswick, $5,000, and St. Francis' hospital, Trenton, $5,000. The testator also left $5,000 to establish a scholarship for the diocese, $10,000 to the Little Sisters of the Poor of Philadelphia, and $32,000 more is divided among nine Catholic hospitals and orphan asylums in Philadelphia.

Two Heroines.

A dispatch from Syracuse announcing the departure of Sisters Flaviana and Bonaventure of the Order of St. Francis for Molokai's leper settlement stated that one of these heroines was a native of Syracuse and the other of Louisville. A correspondent informs us that this statement is not entirely accurate. Sister Flaviana is a native born American of German parentage. Her father and mother reside in Syracuse. Sister Bonaventure is a native of Rheine, province of Westphalia. She came to this country nine years ago and entered St. Anthony's convent in Syracuse in 1893. She is a cousin of Very Rev. A. B. Oechtering, rector and dean of Mishawaka, Ind.—Standard and Times.

The Nineteenth Century Catechism.

"The Catholic paper," said a distinguished Milwaukee Jesuit the other day, "is the catechism of the nineteenth century. To keep posted regarding the church and her doctrines as they are discussed today, to have before you a ready refutation of the lies and slanders constantly floating about, you must take a Catholic paper. What does your family at home talk of and discuss? What they read. Get them a Catholic paper, that they may be able to view and discuss intelligently the questions of the day as they are related to religion."

Pope Leo Offers a Prize.

The pope has set apart the sum of $4,000, which is to be given to the winner in an international prize competition of artists for a new picture for the Vatican. The subject selected by his holiness is a painting of the holy family. The contest will be an international one, and the prize will be awarded in 1901.

CHURCH AND STATE UNITED.

A Few Things That Seem to Lack Consistency.

When Catholics ask for their rights and privileges under the government, the cry is raised that they seek to form a closer union between church and state. All sorts of danger and demoralization are predicted if their request be granted. The Catholic Indian contract schools were just that sort of a menace in the eyes of our Protestant brethren, so likewise is the proposed chapel at West Point. The utter divorce of church and state seems to them to be the panacea for all our national ills.

Yet we find a Protestant chapel at West Point erected and supported by the government. It has a Protestant chaplain, whose salary comes out of the national treasury. There is no suggestion of a union between church and state in this fact. The schools on the Indian reservations are exclusively Protestant schools. They are supported out of the money raised by general taxation. But there is no thought in the Protestant mind of a union of church and state. It is only when the Catholics secure or seek any concession that the enthusiasm for an absolute divorce between the church and the state develops.

On July 22 General H. C. Corbin, adjutant general of the army, issued three orders giving permission to a Protestant missionary society known as the Army and Navy Christian commission to extend its operations to Porto Rico and instructing the quartermasters' and the commissary departments to furnish transportation for tents, etc. A permit was also given to its agents to visit the military prisons near Portsmouth and to deliver pamphlets and other documents to the Spanish sailors confined there. Now, if the adjutant general had granted such permits to a Catholic missionary society every bigot and small fry politician would be up in arms protesting against such an outrage. The incident would be branded as another evidence of sectarian aggregation, and the speedy union of church and state would be at once predicted.

The Army and Navy Christian commission is a sectarian body. It is a Protestant body. Yet it is carried about by the government, at government expense, and it is permitted to engage in missionary or proselytizing work within the lines of the army operations. Secretary Alger should ask Judge McKenna's opinion as to the legality of the relationship.—Boston Republic.

AUXILIARY FOR CHICAGO.

Father McGavick Raised to the Purple to Assist Archbishop Feehan.

The elevation of Rev. Alexander J. McGavick, pastor of St. John's church, to the bishopric and his appointment as assistant to Archbishop Feehan of the diocese of Chicago were received with gratification by his parishioners.

The other day he was called to the archiepiscopal residence and notified that he had been made bishop of Marcopolis in partibus infidelium and made auxiliary bishop of Chicago.

Father McGavick has been a Chicagoan ever since his priesthood began. Born at Fox Lake and educated at Kankakee, he was 11 years ago appointed assistant pastor at All Saints' church. With the exception of two years spent in Denver on account of his health he remained at All Saints' until his appointment as pastor of St. John's in July, 1897.

A brother, Rev. John E. McGavick, is assistant pastor at St. Elizabeth's church. The aged mother of the new bishop lives at 6539 Evans avenue, Chicago.

Night at the Vatican.

At night very little military watch is maintained at the Vatican. There is only a Swiss guard at the door of the papal apartments; the gendarmes in the courtyard of San Damaso, at the foot of the staircase leading to Leo XIII's quarters; a detachment of firemen and a Swiss guard at the famous bronze door. The watch is perhaps more strictly maintained outside by the Italian police all along the Vatican walls.

By an arrangement between the police and the papal authorities a window next the papal apartments is kept open during the day and closed at night, but with a lighted lamp behind it. The shutting of the window in the day or the putting out of the light at night means that something unusual has happened and that help is needed. In case of the illness of the pope this singular sign would mean that he is dead. An Italian sentinel is continually watching the window. However, this did not prevent the mistake of General Della Rocca, undersecretary of state at the home office in the Crispi cabinet in 1878, who announced in the house the death of Pius IX five hours before it took place.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Holy Season of Lent.

The season of Lent was instituted by the apostles in memory of the 40 days of our Lord's fasting. It extends from Ash Wednesday to Easter Sunday. In sacred scripture the number 40 is always of pain and affliction. The rain in the deluge lasted 40 days. The Israelites were 40 years in exile. The fasting of Moses and Elias was 40 days. The siege of Jerusalem lasted 40 days. This season is the special time set aside by the church to attend more particularly to our spiritual needs. During this time the church also calls upon her children to meditate on the great mystery of the passion of our Saviour and takes us step by step through this awful drama.

The Basis of Good Manners.

The basis of all manners lies in the gentleness, the self control, the unselfishness, which a good mother teaches her children, if she can, in a log cabin or a mining camp; the uprightness, the conscientiousness, the self respect which can meet queen or clown without being overcome by either.—Catholic Universe.

CHAPTER I.

The stagecoach was invisible in a cloud of its own dust as it lurched and rolled along the alkali flats down the valley, and Sancho, the ranchkeeper, could not make out whether any passengers were on top or not. He had brought a fine binocular to bear just as soon as the shrill voice of Pedro, a swarthy little scamp of a half breed, announced the dust cloud sailing over the clump of willows below the bend.

Pedro was not the youngster's original name, and, so far as could be determined by ecclesiastical records, owing to the omission of the customary church ceremonies he bore none that the chaplain at old Camp Cooke would admit to be Christian. Itinerant prospectors and occasional soldiers, however, had suggested a change from the original—or aboriginal—title, which was heathenish in the last degree, to the much briefer one of Pedro as fitting accompaniment to that of the illustrious head of the establishment, and Lieutenant Blake, an infantry sub with cavalry aspirations which had led him to seek arduous duties in this arid land, had comprehensively damned the pretensions of the place to being a "dinner ranch" by declaring that a shop that held Sancho and Pedro and didn't have game was unworthy of patronage.

Sancho had additional reasons for disapproving of Blake. That fine binocular, to begin with, bore the brand of Uncle Sam, for which reason it was never in evidence when an officer or soldier happened along. It had been abstracted from Blake's signal kit when he was scouting the Dragoon mountains and swapped for the vilest liquor under the sun at Sancho's, of course, and the value of the glass, not of the whisky, was stopped against the long lieutenant's pay, leaving him, as he ruefully put it, "short enough at the end of the month."

Somebody told Blake he would find his binocular at Sancho's, and Blake instituted inquiries after his own peculiar fashion the very next time he happened along that way.

"Here, you Castilian castaway," said he as he alighted at Sancho's door, "I am told you have stolen property in the shape of my signal glass! Hand it over instanter!"

And Sancho, bowing with the grace of a grandee of Spain, having assured the senor teniente that everything within his gates was at his service, without money and without price, had promptly fetched from an adjoining room a battered old double barreled lorgnette that looked as though it might have been dropped in the desert by Kearny or Fauntleroy or some of the dragoons who made the burning march before the Gadsden purchase of 1853 made us possessors of more desert sand and desolate range than we have ever known what to do with.

"This thing came out of the ark," said Blake, rightfully wrathful. "What I want is the signal glass that deserter sold you for whisky last Christmas."

Whereat Sancho called on all the saints in the Spanish calendar to bear witness to his innocence and bade the teniente search the premises.

"He's got it in that bedroom yonder," whispered old Sergeant Feeney, "and I know it, sir," and Blake, striding to the door in response to the half challenge, half invitation, of the gravely courteous cutthroat owner, stopped short at the threshold, stared, whipped off his scouting hat and, bowing low, said, "I beg your pardon, senora, senorita; I did not know," and retired in much disorder.

"Why didn't you tell me your family had come, you disreputable old rip," demanded he two minutes later, "or is that, too—stolen property?"

"It is the wife of my brother and his daughter," responded the ranchman, with unruffled suavity.

Nothing could equal Sancho's equanimity in the presence of those he desired to placate, nothing exceed the frenzy of his wrath when angered by those whom he could harm without fear of reprisals. Blake was backed by a troop of horse and the conviction that Sancho was an unmitigated rascal; therefore were his palpable allusions to be accepted as mere pleasantries or deprecated as unmerited injustice.

Blake had blackened the character of the ranch cuisine, even if he had been unequal to the task of blackening that of the owner. Blake had declared Sancho's homestead to be a den of thieves and the repast tendered the stage passengers a Barmecide feast, the purport of which was duly reported to Sancho, who "allowed" he would ultimately carve his opinion of Blake on that officer's elongated carcass, and until he could find opportunity so to do it behooved him to lull the suspicions of the prospective victim by elaborate courtesy of manner, and of this is the Spaniard or his Mexican half brother consummate master.

Blake left without a glimpse of his glass, but not without another of "the daughter of my brother," but recently arrived, and that peep made him desirous of a third. Riding away, he waved his hand.

"Adios, Sancho! Hasta otra vista!" he had hailed, but his gaze sought the little window in the adobe wall where a pair of dark, languorous eyes peered out from between the parted curtains and a dusky face dodged out of view the instant it saw it was seen.

What Sancho said in answer is not recorded, but now he was watching the coming of the stage from Yuma. Some one had warned him Lieutenant Blake would return that way, ordered back to the old post, to the north, as witness before an important court martial.

Those were later termed "the days of the empire" in Arizona. Perhaps 5,000 souls were counted within its borders at the time our story opens, not counting the soulless Apaches. Arizona had the customary territorial equipment of a governor and certain other officials. Nine men out of the dozen Americans in the only approach to a town it then possessed—Tucson—would have said "Damfino" if asked who was the secretary, but all men knew the sheriff. The grave, cigarro smoking, serape shrouded caballeros who rode at will through the plaza and ogled dark eyed maidens peeping from their barred windows could harbor no interest in the question of who was president of the United States, but the name of the post commander at Grant, Lowell or Crittenden was a household word, and in the eyes of the populace the second lieutenant commanding the paymaster's escort was illimitably "a bigger man" than the thrice distinguished soldier and citizen whose sole monument up to that time was the flagstaff at the adobe corral and barracks sacred to his name.

Mr. Blake had never been in such a God forsaken country or community before, but there was something in the utter isolation, the far stretching waste of shimmering sand, the desolate mountain ranges sharply outlined, hostile and forbidding, the springless, streamless, verdureless plains of this stricken land, that harmonized with the somewhat savage and cynical humor in which he had sought service in the most intolerable clime then open to the troops of Uncle Sam. Blake had been jilted and took it bitterly to heart. Wearing the willow himself, he cherished it as the only green and growing thing in the Gila valley, whereas had he sought sympathy he would have found other young gentlemen similarly decorated, and therefore as content as he to spend the months or possibly years of their imbittered life just as far from the madding crowd and, as Blake cynically put it, "as near hell."

Blake was a man of distinction, as relatives went, and those were days when friends at court had more to do with a fellow's sphere of duty—very much more—than had the regimental commander or even the adjutant general. Blake took Arizona in preference to a tour in the signal office at Washington. He wanted to get as far away from the national capital and the favorite haunt of "the army and navy forever" as he possibly could. It was the most natural thing in the world to him that he should ask for duty in the land of deserts, centipeds, rattlesnakes and Apaches. He put it on the ground of a serious bronchial trouble which could be cured only in a dry climate, but the war office knew as well as the navy department that it was an affair of the heart and not of the throat.

He wasn't the first man by any manner of means to fall in love with Madeleine Torrance, the prettiest girl and most unprincipled flirt that ever wore the navy button or tormented a sailor father. Blake sought the roughest duty, that of escorting inspectors, staff officers or paymasters on their wearisome trips through the wilderness, and no one denied him. The cavalry was short of officers, and he got assigned to Sanford's troop, and the biggest surprise that had come since his commission met him one day at Gila Bend when that same old red stage, a relic of California days, emerged from the dust cloud of its own manufacture and a quiet youth in pepper and salt and sand colored costume looked up from behind a pair of green goggles and said, "Hello, Blake!"

It was the voice, not the face, that the tall trooper recognized.

"Well—of—all—the—why, what in the name of Pegasus brings you here, Loring? I thought you had graduated into the engineers."

"Fact," said the newcomer sententiously.

"Well, what's an engineer doing in Arizona? I'd as soon look to see an archbishop."

"Scouting," said the dust colored man. "Where's dinner?"

"In the shack yonder, if your stomach's copper lined. Better come over to my camp and take pot luck there."

Which Loring gladly did and then went on his dusty way, leaving Blake with something to think of besides his own woes. Within half a year of his graduation from West Point the young engineer, one of the stars of his class, had been ordered to report to the general commanding the division of the Pacific and was set to work on a military map in that general's office. Loring found all maps of Arizona to be vague and incomplete and was ordered forthwith to go to the territory and gather in the needed data. That he, too, should be lassiorn never for a moment occurred to his comrade of the line. Had such facts been confessed among the exiles of those days many a comradeship of the far frontier would have been strengthened.

That the girl who duped Gerald Blake should have been known to her who had captivated Mr. Loring was suspected by neither officer at the time, and that despite the efforts and the resolution of both men both women were destined to reappear upon the stage and temporarily, at least, reassume their sway was something neither soldier would have admitted possible. Yet stranger things had happened, and stranger still were destined to happen, and the first step in the drama was taken within the fortnight of this chance meeting at Gila Bend.

Sancho, studying the coming stage with Blake's binocular until it dived into the arroyo 500 yards to the west, handed that costly instrument to the silent, dumpy, dark skinned woman who stood patiently at his side and said briefly "Dos," at which she vanished, and after restoring the glass to its hiding place in her bedroom was heard uplifting a shrill, raucous voice at the back of the house ordering dinner to be ready for two. When the vehicle came rattling up to the door, Sancho stood at his threshold, the old lorgnette in hand, bowing profoundly as two travelers, officers of the army apparently, emerged in their dusters and stiffly alighted.

"Have any letters or dispatches been left here for me?" asked in quiet tone the elder of the two, limping slightly as he advanced, leaving to his comrade the responsibility of seeing that none of their luggage had been jolted out of the rickety vehicle.

One or two hangers on came languidly yet inquisitively within earshot. For answer the ranchkeeper, with another elaborate bow, produced a bulky official envelope. The officer glanced at the superscription, said, "This is for me," strode within the adobe walled corral, halted under a screen of brown canvas and there tore open the packet.

Several personal letters fell to the ground, but he paid at first little heed to them. Rapidly his eyes ran over a sheet of closely written matter; then he turned to the silent and ceremonious ranchman.

"When did this come?" he asked.

"At sunset yesterday, senor comandante."

"Where's the courier?"

"He returned before dawn today."

The loungers drew still nearer as the senior calmly turned to his companion, who, having assured himself that their impedimenta were all safe, came with quick, springy step to join him.

"Where do you suppose Blake and his detachment to be at this moment, Loring?"

"Perhaps 30 miles ahead, sir, over toward Maricopa. Do you need him, colonel?"

"Yes, and at once. Our bird has flown. In other words, Nevins has skipped."

All Ready for the BICYCLE SEASON OF '99.

We have taken a little more time this year than usual in the selection of our Wheels, but we feel it has been well spent. We decided some time ago not to confine ourselves to the sale of one particular bicycle, but to select the lines of two of the best manufacturers of high grade wheels in this country, and endeavor to sell them at a price within reach of all. We succeeded in our purpose and will open the season tomorrow morning with four of the greatest Bicycle bargains New York has ever seen. Here they are:—

"The Stormer," $35.

NO DIVORCES THERE.

In South Carolina Divorces Are Never Granted.

The law in South Carolina makes divorces in that State impossible. The doctrine of the indissolubility of the marriage tie has been the undeviating creed of South Carolina for years and years.

It has been said that in no State of the Union is it so easy to get married; no license required; no publishing of banns; yet when married there is no getting unmarried. Literally, it is "till death do us part" that the contracts holds.

No ceremony is necessary further than for a man and woman to declare themselves husband and wife. Of course, the demands of society have established the custom of a ceremony, performed by clergyman, trial justice or probate judge, and the sentiment would be that there was no marriage without this observance.

Yet there is a case on record where a considerable estate was brought into litigation. Collaternal relatives claimed the property from the children of the late possessors on the ground that they, the late possessors, had never gone through the marriage ceremony, therefore, the children were not legitimate. The court sustained the claim of the children as legal—that in the eyes of the law the man and woman were husband and wife and that their children were ligitimate,

This decision may suggest that the laws of South Carolina are so lax that much evil would necessarily ensue; to any such abuse the indissolubility of the marriage tie is a sufficient antidote.

The New Testament cause for divorce is admitted to be in South Carolina a sufficient ground for legal separation. Very few individuals take advantage of it. Cruelty entitles a woman to leave a man, take her children, prove that he is unfit to rear them, and claim alimony. But this is not divorce.

In no case can one legally marry again, unless one or the other is dead. If a man finds the worse of his marriage more than he can bear he usually quietly leaves the wife, not ventilating her faults.

Occasionally he will go to another State, live there long enough to claim citizenship and then sue for a divorce. Even in these exceptional cases the South Carolina Standard is not always expurgated. Several instances are well known of the husband and wife after the divorce is secured, coming back to one another and resuming their old relations.

It is noticeable in cases of divorce in other States, that one of the couple, either husband or wife, is usually not a native of South Carolina.

GENESIS OF WEDDING CUSTOMS.

Ceremonies of Early Rome and England Handed Down.

When in ancient or imperial Rome a maiden was wedded according to confarreatio she always carried three ears of wheat in her hand, and over her head was broken a simple cake of far and mola salza as a presage of plenty and an ample abundance of the good things of life.

In this primitive custom, then, we see the germ from which grew the elaborate plum loaves and daintily beribboned boxes of luscious ripeness that form so conspicuous a feature of the marriage feasts to-day.

The bridal wreath of an early English bride was likewise fashioned of bearded (and sometimes gilded) wheaten spikes, while on her return from church, corn and other cereals were showered upon her, and then carefully gathered up and consumed by the wedding guests.

In this also we recognize a rude ancestor of a modern fashion, that of sending a newly married pair off in a small blizzard of hard, snowy rice.

In course of time, however, the golden grain was ground and made into large, thin, dry biscuits, that were gaily shattered above the blushing maid's flowing locks and then distributed among the bystanders. To this day, too, in some portions of Highland, Scotland, it is still customary for the best man and first bridesmaid to break an oatmeal cake over a young wife as she passes over the threshold of the first house after the marriage ceremony.

This bannock is then partaken of by all the assembled friends and washed down with the Skotch whiskey in which they drink the health of the bride and bridegroom and of their respective clans.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Awaited the Signal.

When Dr. Dewitt, of the army, was stationed at a post on the Mexican frontier, his Mexican friends determined to do him honor. Accordingly they arranged a great ball. Dr. and Mrs. Dewitt were invited, and they were, indeed, the guests of honor. The ball began early, and the surgeon and his wife danced in the first set. They danced in nearly every set, in fact, for politeness forbade refusal, and after a few hours of it they began to be very tired.

Time wore on, and still the dance went on. It went on all night. Finally Dr. Dewitt called one of the men aside and asked him when in heaven's name the thing was going to be over.

"Oh, senior," said the Mexican, "we have been waiting these many hours for you to give the signal for the last dance."

Too Much.

The Duchess of Northumberland is the possessor of a shawl which was once owned by Charles X of France, and which cost 1,000,000 francs. It is manufactured from the fur of a species of Persian cat.

Where the Locomotives Are.

One hundred and nine thousand locomotives are at present running on the earth. Europe has 63,000, America, 40,000; Asia, 3,300; Australia, 2,000, and Africa, 700.

In a Fix.

The Boss—Why didn't you come to work yesterday?

The Clerk—Oh, I was so sick all day I couldn't get out of bed.

The Boss—Then why didn't you let me know you couldn't come?

The Clerk—Didn't have anybody to send—in fact, I had to get up and go out for a doctor myself.

A HOT FIGHT NEAR PASIG

CAPTURE OF A FORTIFIED TOWN BY THE 20TH REGULARS.

Seventeen American Soldiers Wounded —Loss of the Filipinos Heavy—Volunteers in the Trenches Fired Upon.

Manilla, March 16, 3:55 p. m.—The strongly fortified village of Caita, northwest of Pasig, was captured today, after a desperate fight, by the Twentieth Regular Infantry. The Americans had seventeen men injured. The Filipinos loss was heavy.

The insurgents at the outposts and in the trenches beyond Caloocan fired several volleys last night upan the Montana and Kansas Volunteers and a part of the Fourth regulars, desiring, it is supposed, to discover whether the American line had been thinned by the movement of Gen. Wheaton's command.

The Americans in the trenches replied warmly to the fire. H. Y. Beecher of Company A of the Montana regiment was killed in the engagement.

A battalion of the Twentieth Regular Infantry routed a small band of Filipinos on the Laguna Road, and some sharpshooters who were firing from a house over which a French flag was flying were dislodged.

Charles Sminck, of East Front street, has returned to his business in New York, after being confined to the house for sometime by illness.

It is not hard to guess why Theodore Premble, the lunchman at Hansen Hotel on East Front street, is wearing a broad smile. It's twins. Mother and children are doing well.

HOWELL DECLINES AN HONOR.

Thinks It Not Appropriate Just Now to Give Him a Banquet.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, March 16—Congressman B. F. Howell has written a letter to J. Edgar Powelson, president of the New Brunswick Board of Trade, disapproving of the proposed banquet in recognition of his services in securing the passage of an act by Congress providing for a $100,000 Federal postoffice building for New Brunswick.

In his letter Mr. Howell states that such a dinner would be out of place, as there was absolutely nothing in the work he did to make it necessary or appropriate that any public recognition be made of it.

—Iona Council met last night and adopted three candidates. The work was done by the team under the adoption ceremony in its amplified form. Two propositions for membership were received

Manager George E. Fuller, of the Y. M. C. A basket ball team is trying to secure a game with the team from the Eastern District of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. Plainfield has played against that team in the latter's gymnasium, and now Mr. Fuller wants the Brooklyn boys to play a return game here. No date has yet been fixed but it is probable that the match will be played here sometime during April.

The basket ball team of the Girls' Athletic Association of the Plainfield High School, will go to East Orange tomorrow afternoon for another game. Manager Walter L. Long, of the team, has arranged a match with the East Orange High School team to be played in the latter's gymnasium. A return game will probably be played in this city Easter week. The same team that represented the High School at Montclair will go to East Orange.

A Letter From Mr. Carney.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The News claims the credit for the defeat of Mayor Wilson on account of being refused the printing of the annual borough report. No one denies that The News did its best to accomplish that end and it resorted to unusually low methods in its endeavor. The News might tell that it bid $12 on a similar report under the Hegeman regime and the printing was awarded to me at $35. The News' cunning is uncovered when it is understoood that there is not enough type of one kind in their office to set up the job entire.

A Narrow Escape.

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in eight bottles. It has cured me and thank God, I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's Drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. Guaranteed or price refunded.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The musical farce comedy, "A Ragtime Reception," which will be seen at Music Hall tonight, is said to be a rollicking jingling comedy played in ragtime, replete with sparkling music, beautiful costumes, side splitting comedy lines and situations, and interpreted by a company of fun provoking comedians, delightful singers and handsome girls. It is entirely clean and up to date in every particular, no expense having been spared by Manager John M. Cooke to make it one of the highest classed farce comedy organizations before the public at the present time. Among the most prominent of the actors and actresses that help to keep the waves of merriment and melody in constant motion are: Gus. Pixley, Frank Seidin, Chas. Phillips, Gilbert Gardner, Gertrude Fort, Ray and Middleton and others to the number of twenty-two.

* * * * *

Miss Anna Northend Benjamin, who is booked to deliver her famous lecture on "Tampa, Key West and Cuba During the Spanish-American War," in Plainfield Wednesday night, March 22d, has just returned from a successful New England tour, where she entertained large and enthusiastic audiences. One of the most crowded houses was in Boston, Tuesday night, Miss Benjamin's hearers upon that occasion being composed of the flower of Boston's "culture." The lady has a special "knack" of giving graphic descriptions of war scenes, another manner of delivery, splendid elocutionary powers and magnetic presence are embraced by means of impressive stereopticon views. Miss Benjamin is a plucky American woman, a native of Salem, Mass., whose daring enterprise impelled her to venture to the front in the face of manifold dangers and privations. Her name will go down in history as distinguishing the first woman who, after having been with the United States Army in Tampa and Key West, succeeded in setting foot on Cuban soil after the surrender of Santiago. The New York Tribune and other dailies pay her rare tribute and her lecture is one which holds her audience by reason of its extreme cleverness. The prospects are that Stillman Music Hall will be filled to hear this distinguished young woman.

RELIGION 1500 YEARS AGO.

An Interesting Paper Read by Miss Helen Andrews.

The fourth paper before the Branch Alliance of All Souls' church was read Monday afternoon by Miss Helen Andrews. Her subject was "Arius." She gave an outline of the religious state of the world at his time, 1500 years ago, and explained his protest against existing faiths. There followed an elucidation of the difference between the Arians and their opponents up to the time of the Council of Nicaea when the Arians were out voted and the Athanasian party and creed took shape. Then came a brief description of Arius, who was a man of great ability, winning personality, and fine face and figure.

The paper was followed by a discussion in which it was brought out that, though Arius might be called a fore-runner of Unitarianism, he was more nearly allied to the orthodox party as he protested against their creed in one point only.

The Kensington's Fine Cuisine.

The dinner that is being served at the new Hotel Kensington is winning the praise of all who have been guests of Mine Host Staats. The cuisine is the equal of any of the seventy-five cent and dollar dinners served in the best hotels and restaurants in New York. The attendance and service in the dining room is also very pleasant and is a detail that is appreciated by the guests. By maintaining such an excellent table there is no reason why the Kensington should not become one of the most prosperous hotels in the State. Already it has attracted a patronage that is very gratifying to Mr. Staats.

IN PLAINFIELD'S HISTORY.

At 214 W. Front St.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Next Door to Music Hall.

This advertisement tells of the greatest event ever known. We have purchased the entire stocks of Messrs. Woodhull, Goodale & Bull, of Syracuse, and Quiri & Wilkie, of Amsterdam, N. Y., at a spot cash price, so very much below the real value of the merchandise that a statement of the exact figures would seem marvelous. A great many retail dealers would gladly take this fine stock of clothing off our hands at a good round profit if we desired to sell that way. But having acquired this $15,000 stock at such a ridiculously low figure, we wish to use it to introduce ourselves with our first sale of the season. On account of the way which we have purchased this stock, we will tomorrow and throughout this great sale offer many goods at less than half and less than one-third their usual value.

SENATOR REED PLEADS FOR SMALL BORROWERS

Five Per Cent. Interest Bill Discussed by the Senate.

STANDS SHOW OF PASSING.

AN ATTEMPT MADE TO KILL IT WAS DEFEATED.

The Somerset County Representative Took the Floor and Made a Strong Argument in Favor of the Bill, Claiming That it Would Give Equality Between Large and Small Borrowers

(Special to The Daily Press)

Trenton, March 17—The ethics of finance in relation to the payment of interest on money borrowed was discussed in all its phases in the Senate yesterday morning, when the Cooper Five Per Cent. Interest bill came up on second reading.

President Reed left the chair to defend the bill when Senator Stokes offered an amendment reducing the rate to four per cent. Mr. Reed said the adoption of such an amendment would kill the bill, and he asked that it be defeated.

It was defeated by a vote of 11 to 8, and now it is expected the bill will pass in its original form, with a maximum rate of five per cent.

Senator Stokes denied that the amendment was introduced for the purpose of killing the bill, and said his idea was that if five per cent. was advantageous four would be more so.

President Reed denied any intent of impugning the motion of the introducer of the amendment, but still insisted that it would kill the bill. He said:

"You might as well say, speaking for the lender, that if six per cent. were good seven per cent. was better. But the fact is that the Senate is not legislating for either class, but for the public at large.

"It is a question of the greatest good for the greatest number, and five per cent. is the ratio which seems to conserve the interest of all the people best. Every bank and every money lender was against this bill. Government bonds sell as low as three per cent. and command a premium. The tendency is downward for every one except the small borrower.

"The claim that money would desert us if we reduced the rate to five per cent., while a six per cent. rate prevails in New York and Pennsylvania, is a fallacy. Since 1858 Pennsylvania has had a six per cent. rate, but history does not tells us that money sought investment there to the demoralization of New Jersey, while New Jersey was charging seven per cent.

"The fact is that capital will be sufficiently protected. The ones who need the protection here asked are the farmers."

"Won't the Somerset farmers prefer four per cent.?" asked Mr. Stokes.

"Perhaps they would," replied President Reed, "but it would be unfair to the lenders. We are legislating for both classes. Rich men now borrow at four and five per cent. It is only the middle class business men who borrow from the banks that have to pay six per cent. Banks are paying big dividends on their capital. The average earning in the State is about ten per cent. A bank in my town paid eighteen per cent."

Mr. Stokes said this was on capital, not on surplus, if there was such a case.

Mr. McDermott said the banks were amply protected at Washington. Money was the power there. He referred to the scandals attending United States Senatorial elections, alluding to the Ohio Legislature as "for sale," and said that "a thief" was in the canvass before the Pennsylvania Legislature and that money had been used in California and Delaware.

"The whole thing," he said, "is a stench in the nostrils of the honest people of the Nation, and it is a question whether this popular Government is to be a failure. The money power of the country, if not of the world, is in the hands of about twelve men. They can run the price of money up from 1 to 100 per cent. at will. Legislation cannot remedy the matter. It is a question of supply and demand."

Mr. McDermott went into a history of the finance and usury laws, dating back to the Middle Ages, and wound up by declaring that men would charge for money what they could get. He did not think the borrower would benefit with a 4 per cent. rate of interest, but, on the contrary, would find it harder to borrow money.

Mr. Martin vigorously opposed the amendment. He said the farmers car-

AGED WOMEN IS INSANE

Mental Condition of Mrs. Martha Russell, of Westfield, Enquired Into and She is Declared to be of Unsound Mind.

Yesterday morning, before a commission consisting of P. H. Gillhooly, Dr. Cooper, of Westfield and M. F. Scudder and a twelve man jury, inquiry was made in the mental condition of Mrs. Martha Russell, of Westfield, who is at present an inmate of the Brookside sanitarium in North Plainfield.

The action was brought to determine whether Mrs. Russell was a fit person to handle her property, which consisted of some $6,000 in cash and bonds. P. Hamilton Gillhooly acted as judge in the proceedings. Testimony was given by Dr. J. H. Cooley, of this city, keeper of the Sanitarium, who said in his opinion Mrs. Russell was not in her right mind. She was given to hallucinations, and often thought persons wanted to kill her.

Testimony was also given by Albert L. Russell, Mrs. Russell's nephew. He told of a number of acts which showed her to be unfit to care for herself. He also said she was eighty two years of age. Mrs. Russell's sister also testified. The jury, after being out a few minutes, returned with a verdict in accordance with the evidence, and was dismissed.

The Court of Chancery, under whose sanction the hearing was held, will now appoint a guardian to look after Mrs. Russell's property, and to see that she is given proper care for the rest of her life. She will probably remain at the sanitarium.

WONDER THAT HE LIVES.

STRANGE MISHAP THAT BEFELL A CENTRAL ENGINEER.

Fell From the Cab While the Locomotive was at Full Speed and Still Lives—Accident Near Bound Brook.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, March 17—Judd Janson, an engine driver on the New Jersey Central, who runs the passenger train which leaves Jersey City at midnight for Somerville, fell from his engine while it was going at a full rate of speed near Bound Brook at 1 o'clock yesterday morning.

Lou Gordon, the fireman, who was at work outside of the cab, observed that the engine failed to whistle as it approached dangerous crossings. He climbed to the cab and found Janson missing. He stopped the engine and the train and backed down the track in search of the lost engineer.

Janson was found sitting along the track near Bound Brook in a dazed condition. He was badly cut and bruised about the head and face, and his wrists were sprained. He said he had made a misstep in climbing into the cab, and a lurch of the engine precipitated him down an embankment. He is now at his home in this place suffering from his injuries.

MARKED DECREASE IN CRIME.

Fewer Prisoner in Union County Jail Than for Thirty Years.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 17—There are only thirty prisoners now in the Union county jail, the lowest number confined in that institution in thirty years. Of these there are nearly twenty whose terms will expire within another week.

The decrease in crime in Union county has been noteworthy during the past year. Since the first of January few arrests have been made in Elizabeth, and most of these have been trival offences. In the same period there has been only one committeed to jail from Rahway.

Arranging for C. E Sociable.

The social and reception committees of the Local Union Christian Endeavor met at the home of I. W. Travell on College place last night, and made full arrangements for the sociable which is to take place at the close of the annual meeting of the Union Thursday evening. A pleasant evening was enjoyed by all and following the transaction of business refreshments were served. The annual meeting will be held in the First Presbyterian church.

WILL LEAVE LEAGUE AND GO IT ALONE

Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Will Withdraw from Cycling League.

ONE OF THE ORGANIZERS.

THE Y. M. C. A. CYCLING LEAGUE WILL PROBABLY DISBAND

Plainfield and Summit Will Conduct their Runs on an Independent Basis Hereafter—Trouble in the League After Passaic and Paterson Joined—The League is Now Four Years Old.

The days of the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League of Northern New Jersey are probably numbered. The New Brunswick Association went out last year. Plainfield and Summit have both announced that they will go it alone this season while Somerville is not anxious to continue its membership. The other associations included are not agreed as to what they want to do. Plainfield was instrumental in the forming of the league and is now playing an important part in the movement that will probably end in the disbandment of that organization.

The league was organized four years ago at a meeting held in the Westfield Y. M. C. A., when J. C. Whiting was secretary. The meeting was called at the request of Thomas A. Cuming and Rev. Mr. McPhie, then physical director here. The associations represented were Plainfield, Westfield, Elizabeth, Orange and Summit. Newark joined shortly after.

Runs were held every two weeks to the homes of the different associations and proved a great success at first. Gradually the membership was increased, Passaic and Patterson joining two years ago. Since the last named associations joined, there has been trouble. They were too far away for Plainfield and neighboring associations to visit. Passaic and Patterson felt left out in the cold.

Last year the league was divided into two sections in an attempt to get round the trouble but it was not successful. Toward the last of the season, the Plainfield association practically gave up any attempt to attend the runs.

Bicycling will be part of the athletic department of the Plainfield Y.M.C.A. this season as usual but the runs will be conducted entirely independent of any league. Arrangements will be made with several of the neighboring associations for the interchange of courtesies. The associations will visit each other when they please, giving notice in advance so that the home association can provide entertainment if it so wishes.

Summit will follow a similar plan and the old league will be allowed to live or die as it wishes.

THE RAILS SPREAD.

Troublesome Accident on the Street Railway Yesterday Afternoon.

One of the Plainfield Street Railway Company's cars jumped the track on Woodland avenue late yesterday and three hours and thirty-five minutes were consumed in placing the car back again. The cause for the jump was the spreading of the rails. The mud in the vicinity is quite deep and the car began to settle, which made it very difficult to get the car on the tracks. The feat was accomplished, however, and the trouble has been remedied.

Editor Runyon Beaten.

The second trial of the right of property in the Bard Company case lasted only a short time yesterday afternoon. It was the case of the Bard Company, claimiant, against F. W. Runyon, plaintiff in execution. The defendant failed to appear, so the evidence was quickly put before the jury and they retired, bringing in a verdict for the claimant. The jury men were John R. Phillips, Andrew Huff, James B. Clarkson, Ralph Saums and Josiah S Smith.

The Borough's New School Building.

Judging by present appearances the borough public school may not be ready for use this spring. The work is progressing quite favorably, but unless the building is perfectly dry it would hardly be fit for children and teachers to occupy it.

HOT WALKING FOR CAKE.

LIVELY TIME AT WASHINGTON HALL LAST NIGHT.

Four Colored Couples Made an Exciting Contest—The Youngsters Won Verdict—Maggie Bell Was There Too.

The cakewalkers outdid themselves, the audience tumbled over itself in its enthusiasm to applaud, and altogether the cakewalk in Washington Hall, last evening, was a very "warm" one. The cakewalk was, of course, the event of the evening, but there was also a gathering of dusky belles and their beaux for a dance before and after the walk.

Quite a concourse of white folks happened in about 11 o'clock, the hour set for the walk. It was not held until nearly midnight. The excitement of it all made up for the delay, however.

Now cake walks are frequent but not so the good old fashioned kind that bring the spectators up standing with the excitement. There were four couples entered who walked under the direction of Ernest Bray, the master of ceremonies.

There were Andrew Oby and Mrs. Charles Carr. Oby had the step down to perfection, but his partner was slow on the start. In the second round she improved and they walked well. Bert Brown and Miss Adelaide Lewis, two small children, were the winners, however. She was light and graceful and full of life. Brown performed all sorts of funny stunts with a warmth and vigor that immensely tickled the crowd.

Maggie Belle Jackson appeared in an elaborate creation of pink and white, with a crown of sparkling stones surmounting her black, flowing locks. Her partner was Will Wilson, alias "Skinny," a dapper chap from New York. Their poses were sufficiently striking to satisfy the crowd, but, when it came to real walking, they couldn't hold the pace set by the little couple. The other couple was Miss Nora McCray and Harry Thomas.

The first prize, a cake, was awarded to the youngster. Mrs. Carr and Oby took second, and Maggie Belle and her gallant third. The awards were made according to the sense of the spectators as expressed by their applause.

Howard Grobes was manager of the whole affair. Wm. Grobes and Louis Peterson were the floor managers.

WAS IT A JOKE?

Walter Hetfield, Jr., Wonders Why the Bromo Seltzer Was Sent Him.

Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., son of Councilman Hetfield, has been the object of what have been a serious joke, resembling somewhat the famous Mollineaux poisoning case in New York. In this morning's mail Mr. Hetfield received a package and upon opening it he found it contained a bromo seltzer bottle with the label intact. When he opened the bottle he found some sort of a powder resembling the genuine bromo seltzer. From appearances the bottle had been used and was refilled with this powder. There were also several grains of corn mixed in with the powder, all of which made Mr. Hetfield very suspicious. The package was wrapped with a paper, placed inside of a small box and then several pieces of paper wrapped on the outside.

EIGHTEEN NEW JUNIORS.

Last evening at the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr.O.U.A.M., eighteen candidates were initiated, the highest number ever put through in one evening. There were fifteen propositions received at the meeting and initiation will take place in two weeks. The Council numbers nearly 300 members and is growing rapidly. It is now one of the most prosperous and wide-awake Councils in the State.

A HEARTLESS MOTHER DESERTED HER BABY.

Last November the Child Was Left to Its Fate by the Parents.

MOTHER IN COURT TODAY.

THE BABY LEFT WITH A WOMAN WHO HAD FOURTEEN CHILDREN.

Lizzie Childs, the Mother, Arrested in Red Bank and Brought to This City—The Baby Put in Her Arms in Court This Morning But She Received it Without Any Expression of Love.

First father, then mother disappeared and the little dusky skinned babe was thrown upon the mercies of world to perish or survive as circumstances willed. A tender-hearted woman cared for the deserted infant and saved its life. This morning the young mother, Lizzie Childs, alias Mrs. Howard Bassie, was brought to justice and compelled to provide and for her child.

Last November a young colored couple came to the home of Stephen Coleman, of Paradise alley, and wanted a room. After they had lived there several weeks a child was born. A week later the man, who gave his name as Howard Bossie left and did not return. A week after his disappearance the mother walked out of the house one afternoon, leaving the child asleep on the sofa. Her board was paid in full up to that time.

That was the last Mrs. Coleman saw of Lizzie Childs until this morning. The child woke up toward evening and began to cry. All the evening the sobs of the baby continued until the heart of Mrs. Coleman could stand it no longer, and, although ill at the time, she took the baby under her charge. Mrs. Coleman already has fourteen children and has a hard time to get along. Since that time Mrs. Coleman has cared constantly for the deserted child and her husband has borne uncomplainingly the addition to the family.

December 20th the Colemans decided that there was little chance of the parents returning, and so they reported the matter to Overseer of the Poor Hanson. Warrants were issued by City Judge Runyon for the arrest of father and mother on the charge of desertion.

A week ago Bassie was arrested in Middletown, N. J., where his employer furnished bail for Bassie's appearance before the City Judge Monday morning. For some time Hanson has been looking for traces of Lizzie Childs. At last he found her in Red Bank. Yesterday afternoon Chief Grant went to Red Bank where his warrant was indorsed by Justice Childs and arrested Lizzie Childs and brought her to Plainfield.

This morning in the City Court she declared that she had made arrangements with a woman in Plainfield to care for the child, but that the latter had evidently backed out of the agreement at the last moment. She expressed a willingness to take the child, but showed no particular feeling on the subject. Mrs. Coleman gave her the baby and with tears in her eyes and trembling voice she told the mother what an inhuman thing she had done and begged her to care for the little one in the future and not leave it again to die.

The Judge released the prisoner if she would agree to care for the child and she departed for Red Bank by the first train.

POPULAR ENGINEER LEAD.

A sad event among the railroad employes of the New Jersey Central is the death of Engineer Champion. He was the driver of Engine No 172 which takes the train to Easton, stopping at Plainfield at 8:16 a. m. He was in the employ of the Central for nearly thirty years and was a general favorite. Recently he was taken down with pneumonia and lived just five days. The funeral services were held last evening from the late home in New York, and interment took place today. Out of respect for the departed, Engine No. 172 is now draped in mourning.

Seton's Hall's President Dead.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

South Orange, March 17.—The Rev. Dr. Joseph J. Synnott, president of Seton Hall College, died yesterday afternoon from nervous prostration, which was aggravated by other ills. Dr Synnott was born in New York in 1863. He became president of the college about five months ago, when Bishop Wigger, then president, found the position too arduous. Dr. Synnott had been a professor in the college for ten years prior to that time.

MAKING GOOD STREETS

STREET COMMISSIONER HAS FIVE GANGS OF MEN AT WORK.

An Effort Being Made to Get Several of the Streets Repaired Before the Regular Summer Work is Started.

Street Commissioner Gavett has been taking advantage of the fine weather recently to hurry up the work that will have to be done on the streets this spring before the regular summer work is begun. Today there are five gangs of men out, one on West Front street, beyond Clinton avenue, another on Plainfield avenue, another on East Front street, between Leland avenue and the city line, one cleaning the gutters on Plainfield avenue, and the fifth gang patching up the streets in other parts of the city.

West Front street, from Clinton avenue to the city line, has been a mudhole all winter, and Mr. Gavett has heard many complaints about it. His men today are filling up the holes with stone, and making it as hard and dry as possible.

Plainfield avenue is nearly done, so is East Front street. Within the past few days 300 tons of stone have been used in patching up the streets. The last rain did considerable damage and hindered the work, too. The frost this morning interfered with the scraping, which is being done on the macadamized streets, but that work will be resumed as soon as the weather moderates.

SIX CENTS JUDGMENT.

VERDICT DECLARED TWO YEARS AGO, EXECUTION JUST ISSUED.

It is in the Action of Jim Babbitt Against Lawrence Paoli—Plaintiff Alleged to Have Been Run Down by Latter.

Justice Nash issued an execution this morning for one of the smallest amounts of damages ever awarded a plaintiff in a damage suit, the sum of 6 cents. The execution is against L. Paoli, the Italian fruit dealer, at the instigation of James Babbitt, the colored night watchman.

In the summer of 1897 Babbitt and Paoli collided one night on the corner of Park avenue and Front street, Babbitt on a wheel, Paoli in a wagon. Babbitt came out worst in the encounter, and his bicycle was badly wrecked. As the men blamed each other they were unable to settle the difficulty out of court.

Babbitt sued for $50, and the case was tried in the fall of 1897. The jury awarded Babbitt 6 cents damages and the costs of the court, amounting to about $6. Paoli declared he would not pay even the 6 cents, so the matter has dragged along until now, when Babbitt has begun to take action to compel the defendant to pay up. Altogether the amount Paoli will have to pay is about $9. As the case was one in tort, Justice Nash can send Paoli to the county jail unless he pays, and the Justice says he will do it, too.

A HEBREW MARRIAGE.

Ceremony Celebrated in the West Front Street Synagogue.

A wedding in the Jewish circles took place last evening in the synagogue, 204 West Front street, at 9:15 o'clock, when Miss Yetta Sena and Max Michelson, both of this city, were united in marriage, according to the ceremony of the Jews, by Rabbi Fine. There were fully one hundred relatives and friends present to see the ceremony. Prior to the wedding the guests assembled and enjoyed a dance, which is the custom, after which the bride and groom and their attendants appeared. Those who stood up with the bride and groom were Miss Lizzie Jacob, Miss Anna Minch, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Sena.

After the marriage congratulations were offered to the happy couple. An adjournment was then made to 129 Somerset street, the home of the bride's brother, where a reception was held and supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Michelson received many elegant gifts from their friends. They will reside on Richmond street. The groom is an employe at the carpet works, and he and his wife have a host of friends who wish them well.

Wedding Anniversary.

Marshal and Mrs. Frank Winn, of 93 Manning avenue, celebrated the seventh anniversary of their marriage last evening in a very pleasant manner. There were a number of relatives and friends present who congratulated the the celebrants and wished them many happy returns of the day. Sociability was the feature of the evening and at a late hour supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Winn received a number of useful and handsome presents as reminders of the event.

MR. SMALLEY TAKES THE MAYOR'S OATH.

The Borough's New Executive Sworn in This Morning.

TO BEGIN DUTIES MONDAY.

MAYOR WILSON ADMINISTERED THE OATH OF OFFICE.

President of the Senate Reed and a Daily Press Reporter Were the Only Witnesses of the Ceremony—New Mayor Gives the "Glad Hand" and Hopes That There Will be no Hard Feelings.

It is now Mayor Smalley, of the borough, although he does not assume command of that municipality until next Monday. One of the closing incidents in the administration of Mayor Wilson was enacted this morning at 10 o'clock in his office, when he administed the oath of office to Mr. Smalley. There were present, in addition to the two Mayors, Senator Charles A. Reed and a representative of The Daily Press.

Mayor Wilson administered the oath in his customary dignified manner and Mayor-elect Smalley responded in a clear firm voice, giving his word that he would serve the borough to the best of his ability.

Following the taking of the oath of office there was a pleasant feature. The Mayor elect extended the "glad hand" to the retiring Mayor in a most happy manner. He said that in the campaign just passed there were many unpleasant features, but he had the kindest feeling for his opponent and he invited most cordially his friendship and good-will, and if at any time he had any suggestions to make along any line whatsoever he would be pleased to receive and profit thereby. He said that he hoped they would always be friends, and that no ill-feeling would exist, and there would not if he had anything to do with it.

In reply Mayor Wilson expressed himself as agreeing with Mayor Smalley and thanked him most heartily for his kindly words, and Mr. Smalley in return thanked Mr. Wilson for his kind expression.

The borough keys were then turned over to Mayor Smalley and Monday next he will assume full command of his official position. Mayor Smalley will administer the oath of office to the other new officials Monday after he takes charge.

Cadmus, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Radford and Mr. and Mrs. William H. Shotwell.

A Christening.

THE OLD WAY.

We say the old way, but really it is a very common one at present time and many dyspeptics and physicians as well, consider the first step to take in attempting to cure indigestion is to diet, either by selecting certain foods and rejecting others or to greatly diminish the quantity usually taken, in other words, the starvation plan is by many supposed to be the first essential.

The almost certain failure of the starvation cure for dyspepsia has been proven time and again, but still the moment dyspepsia makes its appearance a course of dieting is at once advised.

All this is radically wrong. It is foolish and unscientific to recommend dieting or starvation to a man suffering from dyspepsia, because indigestion itself starves every organ and every nerve and every fibre in the body.

What the dyspeptic wants is abundant nutrition, which means plenty of good, wholesome, well cooked food and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it. This is exactly the purpose for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted and this is the method by which they cure the worst cases of dyspepsia, in other words the patient eats plenty of wholesome food and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest it for him. In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. One of these tablets will digest 3,000 grains of meat or eggs.

Your druggist will tell you that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the purest and safest remedy for stomach troubles and every trial makes one more friend for this excellent preparation. Sold at 50cts. for full sized package at all drug stores.

IMPORTANT ADVANCE

Filipinos Driven from Cainta by One Battalion.

CLOSING IN ON THE REBELS

Manila, March 17.—The capture of Cainta marks a decided advance on the part of the American forces from Manila toward the eastern side of the island of Luzon. The town is in a northeasterly direction from Pasig, which our troops already held, and is situated near the northern shore of the Laguna de Bay, about as far beyond Pasig as that place is distant from Manila.

A battalion of the Twentieth infantry yesterday made an attack upon the village of Cainta and after a hard fight drove the enemy out and captured the place.

The American loss was two men killed and thirteen wounded. The insurgent loss was heavy.

Major Roberts of the Twentieth infantry, with Companies F, C, L and G, advanced north from Pasig to the open fields six hundred yards from Cainta, when suddenly the enemy opened a heavy fire from the trenches.

For three hours there was the hottest kind of fighting, Companies F and C flanking the town from the church to the woods and Companies L and G attacking the enemy's front.

The enemy was finally compelled to give way, and after setting fire to the village, retreated to Taytay. Major Rogers's troops continued their advance, crossing a small river and capturing and burning Taytay from which the enemy was driven.

The four companies of the Twentieth infantry then returned to Pasig. Signal Lieutenant Kilbourn communicated the news of the capture of Cainta by wire from the front.

The insurgents at the outposts and in the trenches beyond Caloocan fired several volleys last night upon the Montana and Kansas volunteers and a part of the Fourth regulars, desiring, it is supposed, to discover whether the American line had been thinned by the movement of General Wheaton's command.

The Americans in the trenches replied warmly to the fire. H. Y. Beecher of Company A of the Montana regiment was killed during the engagement.

A battalion of the Twentieth regular infantry routed a small band of Filipinos on the Laguna road, and some sharpshooters who were firing from a house over which a French flag was flying, were dislodged.

AMBASSADOR CHOATE'S SPEECH.

Favorable Comment of London Newspapers on the American's Speech.

London, March 17.—The afternoon newspapers contain complimentary references to the speech delivered by Mr. Joseph Choate, the United States ambassador, at the banquet of the Association of the Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom.

The St. James Gazette says: "The main fact emphasized in the tone, as much as i nthe words of Mr. Choate's words, which he quoted, is that Brother Jonathan has become conscious of his imperial destiny, that he is going out to see the world, and that he believes his best friend, companion and guide in the new adventure will be found in the mother country."

The Westminster Gazette, pointing out Mr. Choate's remark, "although we are friends we shall not cease to be rivals," says: "We shall be all the better friends if this warning is kept in mind. The real danger of the situation is that its sentimental aspect may be so strongly insisted upon that when differences on material points arise there may be an inevitable reaction."

Ambassador Choate made his first public appearance in England at the dinner of the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom in London Wednesday evening. He dwelt upon the cordial relations which now exist between the United States and Great Britain, and, after mentioning the trade interests of the two countries, said:

"I beg that you will not mistake my meaning. I do not believe that, although friends, we shall ever cease to be rivals. In the future, as in the past, we on our side and you on yours will still press every advantage that can fairly be taken, but it shall be a generous and loyal rivalry, and all questions, disputes and controversies arising shall be settled by peaceful means, by negotiations, by arbitration, by and and every possible means except war."

He referred to the happy outcome of the Venezuelan imbroglio; the "satisfactory dispelling of the cloud between Russia and England over the Newchwang Railway extension loan by means of peaceful diplomacy," and, after paying tributes to the late Baron Herschell and to Rudyard Kipling, concluded as follows:

"Gentlemen, we are almost one people. What I say is, let our voices always be lifted together for the cause of human progress and the advance of civilization, and, my word for it, if that can always be followed, why, then, law, order, peace and freedom, which are the nurses of commerce the world over, will prevail, and the cause of humanity will be advanced.

Drowned in a Trolly Car.

Worcester, Mass., March 17.—A car on the Millbury division of the Worcester and Suburban railway ran off the track at McGowan's bridge and plunged into the Blackstone river on Wednesday evening. Three occupants of the car were penned up in the vestibuled conveyance and drowned before help could be rendered. A fourth passenger, Geo. Pluff of Brahamville, was severely injured, but may live.

The drowned were: Michael Shea, motorman, twenty-six, loved formerly in Northampton; Frederick White of Whitinsville, conductor, twenty-six, single; Morris Welsh of Milbury, motorman, twenty-one, single.

MRS. PLACE MUST DIE.

She Must Die in the Week Beginnig Next Monday.

Sing Sing, N. Y., March 17.—Mrs. Martha M. Place, who will be the first woman to suffer capital punishment in this state since execution by electricity was introduced, received in her cell in Sing Sing prison yesterday the news that Governor Roosevelt had declined to interfere in her behalf, either by pardon or by commutation of sentence. Mrs. Place was convicted in July last of the murder of her stepdaughter, in Brooklyn, on February 7 of last year, at which time she attempted to kill her husband also. The court of appeals unanimously affirmed the judgment of the lower court.

The only hope for the woman's life rested on an application for executive clemency, based on the ground of alleged insanity, although it was possible that she might take an appeal to the United States supreme court, which might give her a short stay. The result of her examination by insanity experts showed that she was sane. Upon official notice from Albany it was communicated to Mrs. Place yesterday.

After days of suspense the condemned woman shook with apprehension when Warden Sage entered her cell shortly after nine o'clock. His words to her were:

"Mrs. Place, I am sorry to say that I have come to you again with bad news. The physicians who were designated for the examination into your mental condition have made their report to the governor. On the strength of that report he declines to interfere."

The woman's fortitude was sufficient to keep her from breaking down when Warden Sage made the announcement. She trembled, but did not cry out.

"Do you wish me to send for Dr. Cole, your spiritual adviser, to come from Yonkers?" asked the warden.

Mrs. Place signified that she did desire such action, and also that messages be sent to her brother and her lawyer. Warden Sage then left the cell.

Mrs. Place also asked that her brother, Peter Garretson, of New Brunswick, N. J., be sent for. She told the warden that she would have her lawyer take her case to the United States supreme court.

The execution of the condemned woman's sentence must take place in the week beginning on Monday next. The day on which she must die had not been appointed when inquiry was made at the prison yesterday, nor had it been determined whether or not the woman would first be removed to the cells near the death chamber, where a man in a similar case would await his death.

Governor Roosevelt, in his refusal to interfere with the sentence of the court, says:

"No more painful case can come before a governor than an appeal to arrest the course of justice in order to save a woman from capital punishment, when that woman's guilt has been clearly established and when there are no circumstances whatever to mitigate the crime. If there were any reasonable doubt of the guilt, if there were any other basis whatsoever for interference with the course of justice in this case, I should so interfere. But there is no ground for interference. The accused was condemned as guilty of murder in the first degree, after full and fair trial, although, as all men know, a jury in such a case is always reluctant to give a verdict against a woman if any justification whatsoever exists for withholding it. This verdict was then reviewed at great length by the court of appeals and was affirmed without a dissenting voice, though this court always scrutinizes with the most zealous care such a case, desiring that the benefit of every doubt shall be given to the accused. I wrote to the district attorney and to the judge who tried the case to learn whether they thought there was any ground for executive clemency. They both answered that there was none whatever and that the case was one of peculiar outrage.

Mr. Hobart's Boom.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—The friends of the administration scoff at the published stories that Mr. Hobart's fate for a vice presidential nomination is being settled at Thomasville. A prominent Republican said yesterday:

"Much has been said about the rule not to renominate a vice president a second term. I believe, however, that Mr. Hobart will be an exception to this rule, and that he will be renominated with Mr. McKinley. Mr. Hobart will add no little strength to the ticket. The business element of the country has great faith in him, for it will be remembered that in his letter of acceptance, published several weeks before Mr. McKinley's, Mr. Hobart declared himself, without reservation or evasion, for the gold standard.

"Moreover, Mr. Hobart represents New Jersey, which is always in the doubtful column on presidential elections. Mr. Hobart has presided with satisfaction to both parties in the Senate."

The Bismarck Interment

Friedrichsruhe, March 17.—Emperor William arrived here at 11.25 yesterday morning to attend the interment of the remains of Prince and Princess Bismarck in the new mausoleum.

On the emperor's arrival the cortege started for the mausoleum. The coffin containing the remains of Princess Bismarck was borne at the head of the procession. It was followed by Prince Bismarck's coffin, behind which walked Emperor William, with Prince Herbert Bismarck on his left hand. Then came the members of the family.

The procession passed between the ranks of fifteen hundred torch bearers, a military band playing a funeral march.

The mausoleum was reached at noon and the ceremony of interment was performed.

Alger in Canada.

Montreal, March 17.—R. A. Alger, secretary of war in President McKinley's cabinet, has arrived in this city from Washington, and is the guest of Sir William Van Horne, president of the Canadian Pacific Railroad.

Mr. Alger and Sir William are directors of the Laurentide Pulp Mills Company, and they will go to Grand Mere to-day to inspect the extensive plant there.

Mr. Alger will visit Ottawa before returning to the United States.

NEW TRUSTS REPORTED

Bicycle, Ship-Yard, Wagon and Other Large Combinations.

BIG INTERESTS AT STAKE

No Cheap Wheel to be a Factor in the Bicycle Trade—New Ships and Their Operation on the The Lakes—A Light-Fixtures Trust.

New York, March 17.—Although the plans for the merging of the largest of the companies engaged in the manufacture of bicycles are not finished, they will be within a short time, and a new corporation will come into existence, with a capital of about fifty million dollars, which is expected by the promoters to make all the high grade wheels that are made in this country.

A. G. Spaulding has been the mover in the enterprise, and with him are associated Colonel A. A. Pope, and the other large manufacturers in the east, while the western end of the combination is led by R. P. Gormully.

Mr. Spaulding has secured the American rights of some English and French patents, and as most of the patents covering wheels will be in the possession of the members of the trust they expect to be able to control the industry, in spite of the fact that the makers of wheels are numbered by hundreds.

The object of the combination is stated to be for the protection of makers and riders of wheels. The promoters say that with the business in the hands of the trust, the prices of wheels will not vary from day to day. The minor and frequently useless changes which have been made each year in order to bring out a new model will be unnecessary. The cheap wheel will not be a factor in the business, for a large company can make its wheels cheaper than a small one, and when a standard wheel is adopted and maintained, bicycle riders will be under no obligations to buy a new one each year, having no more reason for doing so than a driver would for buying a new wagon each year.

The certificate of incorporation under the laws of New Jersey of the combination of ship yards located on the great lakes was filed yesterday morning in Jersey City. The new company has a capital of thirty million dollars, divided in shares between James B. Dill of New York city and Frederick W. Kline and W. T. Coleman Carpenter of Jersey City.

J. H. Hoyt of Cleveland, who signed the certificate as counsel, represents the syndicate in Ohio.

The combination is said to include all of the shipyards on the great lakes excepting the Union Dry Dock Company of Buffalo and the Devidson yard at Bay City, Michigan.

The objects of the company, as set forth in the papers, are to construct, equip and manage ships and transportation lines. The powers are broad and the company begins business with its capital of thirty million dollars paid up in cash.

An effort is being made to bring wagon manufacturing concerns in Watertown, Binghampton, Syracuse, Cortland, Geneva, Homer and Waterloo under one management. A meeting was held at Syracuse last week, when the proposition was favorably discussed. About twenty-five firms are interested. A great combination, to include all the important concerns of the country, is being promoted from Detroit, and it is said that the movement in this state is in harmony with the plan.

Twenty-five of the largest gas and electric light fixture manufacturing plants in Cleveland and in Providence are negotiating for consolidation. Their headquarters are to be in New York. Details are being arranged today and will be given out to-morrow.

WHITECAPS KILL SIX NEGROES.

Three Others Fatally Shot by Palmetto, Ga., Mob.

Palmetto, Ga., March 17.—Six negroes were killed and three others fatally shot by a party of masked Whitecaps here at about one o'clock yesterday morning.

A mob of fully two hundred masked men entered the town, rode up to a building where the negroes were imprisoned, and called on the guards, with threats and curses, to turn over the nine negroes who were held there for trial on charges of arson.

The guards were overpowered without difficulty, and with a rush the Whitecaps made for the prisoners, who were awakened by the noise on the outside.

The nine negroes were shot down while they were calling for mercy. Six of them were killed outright, and the others will die.

The greatest excitement prevails in the town. Armed citizens are patrolling the streets, fearing an outbreak on the part of the negroes of the county, who are threatening to avenge the blood of their race.

The people are in a frenzy, and a riot on the part of the negroes is believed to be dangerously near.

The nine negroes were held for the burning of the town which took place last January.

Governor Candler has been called on for troops to be sent here at once. Dispatches from Atlanta say that two hundred militiamen will take charge of this town at once.

The trouble arose originally over the enforcement of the prohibition law. Almost every male negro in town carried a bottle of whiskey and a glass and sold drinks to whoever wanted them. This led to their arrest, when they threatened to burn the town. Later, fires began to occur with alarming regularity, with the result of nine arrests and finally the tragedy of yesterday.

Iron Workers' Wages Increased.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 17.—Notice has been issued to the three thousand employes of the Pencoyd Iron Works at West Manayunk, a suburb of this city, that an advance and readjustment of wages will be made in all departments of the plant on March 27. The works are running full time in all departments, and in some departments double time is necessary to fill the orders.

A workingman living on Maple street, Camden, N. J., relates how he passed through a crisis which he justly terms "terrible." "I don't believe that any one ever suffered more than I did for two years," he declares. "I would start for work in the morning and would feel so bad that I would quit at 9 o'clock and go home. My heart would beat so fast that I thought I would die. I had given up all hopes of ever getting well. I never had a day go over my head without that terrible feeling and dread of dying. I spent a considerable sum of money doctoring. My friends all remarked how bad I looked and made all kinds of suggestions. Some said change doctors, others said go away for a change, but one friend who had been sick with the same thing, said he was completely cured by the use of Ripans Tabules. This encouraged me and I made up my mind to try them. I did so, and after using them two months I have not had an attack. My heart seems to be O. K., and I have not lost a day's work since I began to use the Tabules. I feel in fact I might say well; still I take one Tabule now and then. I don't believe I would have been here to-day if I had not used this medicine. I am willing to tell any one what Ripans Tabules have done for me if they will write to me."

A new style packet containing THE RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

TO OFFSET CROKER'S DINNER.

One at $3 a Plate Which Mr. Bryan of Nebraska Will Attend.

New York, March 17.—William Jennings Bryan, who ran for president in 1896, announced yesterday that he would attend the three dollar dinner which will be given in New York on April 13.

The resignation of Oliver H. P. Belmont from the committee on invitations and speakers of Richard Croker's "ten dollars a plate dinner" and the decision of some Bryan men to have "a real Jeffersonian dinner to cost not more than three dollars a plate" left many Democrats in this city in doubt yesterday as to where they should dine on April 13.

To the three dollar dinner Bryan, Governor Pingree of Michigan, Mayor Jones of Toledo and others from different states have been invited, but the Croker dinner, according to the announcement, is to be for state Democrats alone.

In explanation of why he refused to assist in getting up the feast, Mr. Belmont made this statement:

"My reason for resigning was that the excessive advertising in advance of the date of the dinner and the magnitude of its size gave the right to everyone to suppose that it was to be a reunion of all prominent Democrats, local, state and national. The announcement that only state Democrats were to be invited immediately gave it another aspect, and I considered it bad policy and ill advised, and resigned on that account. I trust that the last departure that I have read of in the papers inviting Democrats outside of the state may tend to make the proposed dinner a success."

But if Mr. Belmont has decided not to have anything to do with the Croker dinner, there are others who have injected themselves into the preparation of it. The miscellaneous section of the Central Federated Union sent a committee to see Mr. Croker the other day to ask that only union waiters be employed at the Jefferson day dinner. The waiters submitted a list of eighty union men to the steward of the dinner yesterday and they were assured of the stewards distinguished consideration.

The cheaper dinner was decided upon last Sunday at a meeting of the Central Labor Union. The small cost of the dinner, it was asserted, would be more in accord with Jeffersonian principles than Mr. Croker's dinner.

The Bryan men are at the back of the movement. They distrust Croker and believe that he will try and force the party back to sound financial principles.

They regard Tammany as at heart opposed to the Chicago platform, and think that in the speeches at the ten dollar dinner the leading issues will be adroitly dodged. They don't want dodging.

Mr. Richard Croker, when asked yesterday what he thought of the rival to his Jefferson day dinner, said that he hoped it would be a success. "Banquets," Mr. Croker said, "are a good thing for the poor man. Every banquet helps the poor, and every time one is held the butcher, the baker and the groceryman profit by it." Then Mr. Croker smiled.

When he was asked what he thought about Mr. Belmont's resignation Mr. Croker replied:

"Oh, Mr. Belmont found that he could not attend to his duties, so he resigned. There are lots of men who have not time to do work they would like to do."

William Jennings Bryan was invited to attend the Croker ten dollar dinner by Perry Belmont. His reply was a telegram asking Mr. Belmont if he adhered to the principles set forth in the Chicago platform.

Mr. Belmont telegraphed back, dodging the question. Mr. Bryan then de-

Editor Joseph Medill Dead.

Chicago, March 17.—Word was received here yesterday from San Antonio, Tex., that Joseph Medill, proprietor of the Chicago Tribune, died there early in the morning.

Joseph Medill was born at St. Johns, N. B., in 1832. He removed to Ohio when a boy, practiced law for a short time in Masillon, and then began his newspaper career as editor of the Whig and Free Soil paper in Cleveland.

In 1855 he purchased an interest in the Chicago Tribune. Mr. Medill took an active part in the foundation of the Republican party.

After the great Chicago fire of October, 1871, it was felt that partisan politics should be set aside, and an agreement was reached between the Democratic and Republican leaders by which what was known as the "fireproof ticket" was prepared to be voted for at the pending city election. Mr. Medill was elected mayor on this ticket.

He was appointed by General Grant a member of the civil service commission. On several occasions his name was suggested as a representative of the United States at Paris or London, but he declined all such offers.

Dominion Parliament Opened.

Montreal, March 17.—The session of the Dominion Parliament, which opened at Ottawa yesterday afternoon, promises to be a lively one. The opposition have been hard at work for some time preparing for their attack upon the men who sit on the treasury benches. Several important subjects will come up which will evoke criticism and censure from the Conservative opposition, not the least of which will be the action of the Canadian ministers before the joint high commission, recently adjourned at Washington. Sir Charles Tupper claims that the commission has been an utter failure so far as the Canadian end of it is concerned, and says that this failure has been wholly due to the action of the Canadian delegates.

The ministers, on the other hand, assert that there has been no failure yet, that the commission has only adjourned for a time, and that there is every chance of arriving at an amicable arrangement on the resumption of negotiations.

Czar Expects an Heir.

London, March 17.—The young Empress of Russia has been strictly following the method prescribed by Professor Schenck and an heir to the throne is expected in the month of May.

Her majesty leads the quietest of lives and spends all her time with her husband and children.

LONDON THINKS END NEAR

Cardinal Rampolla Believed to Have the Best Chance of Succeeding Leo XIII. in the Chair of St. Peter—His Career in the Church.

Rome, March 17.—The Messagero says the pope shows signs of increasing weakness and that his physicians are very watchful.

Pope Believed to be Dying

London, March 17.—It is generally believed here that Pope Leo XIII is slowly dying and that his end may occur at any time.

His successor, it is thought, will be Cardinal Rampolla, who, besides being one of the greatest churchmen of Italy, is of illustrious secular rank. He is the Marquis del Tindaro, and his house claims to be of as long and as ancient descent as that of the Colonna.

The cardinal is fifty-six years of age and his first office was that of assistant secretary for Church Matters to Pius IX, in 1869. In 1875 he was attached to the Papal Embassy at Madrid, where he became such a favorite with the Spanish royal family that he was created archbishop and appointed nuncio to Spain.

It was through his influence that the pope was elected arbitrator in the Carolines dispute.

The present pope gave Cardinal Rampolla the red hat in 1887, and five years later the Emperor of Germany decorated him with the order of the Black Eagle.

THE NEW ARMY REGISTER.

Interesting Features in the Military Records Shown.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—The new army register will be published in a few days. Some advance copies have been received at the war department, where it has been looked over with considerable interest.

This register, while for the regular army entirely, will have a list of the general and staff officers appointed during the Spanish war, together with their records during the war. It will not show any previous records such as that of General Wheeler was a graduate at West Point, and that General Lee and others of the late Confederacy served in the Confederate army.

An interesting feature of the register is that the volunteer service of the regular officers is given, and there is a jump from 1866 and 1867 to 1898 in that service, a lapse of more than 30 years.

An interesting point is that several men in the regular army declined volunteer appointments. At the head of the list of these is Adjutant General Corbin.

The register shows that on August 13, 1898, he was appointed a major general of volunteers and declined.

THE VENEZUELAN ARBITRATION.

Oral Arguments to be Begun in Paris About May 25 Next.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—Chief Justice Fuller and Justice Brewer of the supreme court will leave the United States for Paris, so as to arrive there about May 25 next, at which time the oral arguments on the British Venezuelan arbitration case will be heard. The hearing is expected to cover three months, after which the court is expected to devote about the same time to consideration of the question, giving a decision probably in the month of November.

Ex-President Harrison and ex-Secretary of the Navy Tracy will probably go to Paris at the same time, as they are the leading counsel for Venezuela. Their brief has been presented. It covers about eight hundred printed pages, in marked contrast to the brevity of the British brief, of Sir Richard Webster, covering only fifty-five pages the conclusion of the brief being as follows:

"Venezuela, with great respect, but with great confidence, now submits to this high tribunal the very serious issues involved. She does this in the happy belief that in the short but brilliant history of arbitration tribunals, this one will find a conspicuous place, and will recommend to other nations the use of this great agency of peace.

The Five Per Cent. Jersey Interest Bill.

Trenton, N. J., March 17.—The five per cent. interest bill, which passed the House some days ago, was the subject of an extended debate in the Senate yesterday, when the measure came up on second reading.

Mr. Stokes, Republican of Cumberland, offered an amendment making the legal rate four per cent.

President Reed, who was on the floor, with Senator W. W. Johnson in the chair, opposed the amendment, and charged that it was offered with a view to killing the bill. Mr. Stokes denied this.

President Reed said that five per cent. was the rate that should be established. The tendency, he said, was downward, so far as interest rates were concerned. He said that government bonds were readily sold at three per cent. Farmers and others who have to borrow money from banks are now about the only ones who have to pay six per cent.

The Stokes amendment was lost.

The bill then took its place on the calendar for a third reading. The concensus of opinion seems to be that the prospects of the bill passing are more than even.

Carter Harrison Renominated.

Chicago, March 17.—The Democratic city convention renominated Carter H. Harrison. His associates on the ticket will be Adam Ortseifen, for city treasurer; Andrew J. Ryan, for city attorney; and William Loeffler, the present incumbent, for city clerk.

The platform adopted avoids national issues, and the mayor will stand on his record against the Allen bill and other street railway legislation.

BRINGING TROOPS FROM CUBA.

Two Reasons for Hurrying Their Return to This Country.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—The advent of the yellow fever danger season is going to hasten the departure of the volunteers from Cuba and the disbandment of the regiments for a double reason, first, to get them out of the Cuban germ laden atmosphere and second to get them into our southern states before the quarantine laws become operative.

The health authorities at Savannah, when the bulk of the troops are brought to pass a brief period in acclimation camps before being mustered out, have notified the authorities in Washington that a strict quarantine will be put in force with the first days of April. This means that the men who come over from Cuba must get into camp by the end of the present month, if they would avoid being held in quarantine, with all the delays, discomfort and expense incident thereto.

General Corbin said yesterday that every effort would be made to expedite the removal of the troops from Cuba and get them into port before the fatal date. Those who arrive after the Savannah quarantine becomes effective will have to be taken to some northern port and encamped in that section before being mustered out. This would be doubly unfortunate, he thought. It would be dangerous to the health of the troops, no matter how complete the precautions taken, to move them so directly from a climate like Cuba's to a northern latitude, especially in the midst of a changeful spring season. Further than that it would mean a very considerable expense to the soldiers themselves, as they would have to be supplied with an outfit of overcoats and blankets, the cost of which would be charged against their pay account.

It is understood that there are fourteen regiments, or parts of regiments still to be disposed of in the coming sixteen days.

MR. SHERMAN NO BETTER.

The Chicago Sent to Bring the Ex-Secretary Home.

St. Pierre, Island of Martinique, March 17.—The condition of Former Secretary of State Sherman, who is a passenger on the American line steamer Paris, now making a tour of the West Indian islands, was no better last night. He has pneumonia.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—Secretary Long has ordered the cruiser Chicago to go from Havana to Kingston, Jamaica, to take on board ex-Secretary John Sherman, who is ill with pneumonia, and bring him to Hampton Roads, Va.

Mr. Sherman left New York on the American line steamship Paris for the special West Indian trip of the vessel.

The Chicago left Hampton Roads on Monday for Havana, convoying the transport Meade, which is carrying the three million dollars in gold and silver to pay the Cuban troops. She is expected to reach Havana to-day.

The Paris is on her way from Fort De France, Martinique, and will reach Ponce, Porto Rico, to-day. She is scheduled to arrive at Kingston on March 20. The Chicago will therefore have time to coal and get to Kingston by the time the Paris reaches that port.

On the arrival of the Chicago at Hampton Roads Mr. Sherman will be transferred to a steamship which will take him to Washington.

The Paris will be in the West Indies for two weeks yet, and as there are several hundred excursionists aboard it would be impossible for the Paris to proceed home on Mr. Sherman's account alone.

Mrs. Sherman is in Washington convalescing from a recent paralytic stroke. She does not know that Mr. Sherman is ill. In his telegram to the president Mr. Hoyt did not say anything about Mr. Shermans condition.

Bureau of American Republics.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—It is announced that General Russell Hastings of New York, who was selected for director of the bureau of American Republics some time ago, will take charge the first of April, relieving Frederick Emory, who has been acting director since the death of Joseph P. Smith. General Hastings is an Ohio man and a great friend of President McKinley, having served in the same regiment with the president during the civil war.

General Hastings has been spending the winter in Bermuda, recovering from an accident he sustained while attending the inauguration ceremonies.

Mr. Emory, the acting director, was a protege of ex-Secretary Bayard, and has always been a rabid free trader. While occupying a position in the state department under Bayard, he wrote letters favoring free trade and singing the praises of Cleveland's policy to the newspapers.

It has always been a wonder why he was ever given charge of the bureau of American republics, or kept in the state department, when he should have gone out with Cleveland and the other free traders.

Mr. Depew House Hunting.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—Senator Depew is in Washington on a house hunting expedition with his niece, Miss Paulding. The senator expects to take a couple of days looking at residences with a view of renting one for his senatorial term and having it made ready for next fall.

Mr. Depew says he has decided to go housekeeping and wants a large house as he expects to entertain extensively. His nieces will be with him.

The senator has been looking at the Pomeroy annex at the Arlington, occupied by ex-Secretary Bliss, and later by Senator Hanna.

It is possible that he may lease it. It faces Lafayette square and the White House and is a part of the Arlington.

Senator Depew says that he has no intention of going to Thomasville.

An Insurance Bill Defeated.

Hartford Conn., March 17.—The Connecticut House of Representatives has without division rejected the bill that was drafted by the insurance department to compel fraternal insurance organizations to render annual reports to the insurance commissioner.

The bill particularl ynamed the Masons and Odd Fellows.

The Cost Is Trifling

When you consider the profitable results that may come from such publicity. Thousands of Plainfield people have tried it and found that the plan

Works and Pays Well.

The Borough Printing Award.

Councilman McLaughlin feels that The Daily Press has done him an injustice in the editorial last evening regarding the printing of the borough clerk's report. Mr. McLaughlin says that the article caused a reflection on his honesty, inasmuch as he understood it to infer that the profits on the contract might have been shared by him.

No such thought entered the mind of the writer. So far as Mr. McLaughlin's honesty is concerned, his official acts are entirely free from any such stigma, and The Daily Press takes pleasure in disabusing the minds of any who might have been influenced, as Mr. McLaughlin seems to think they were.

We believe, however, that the News was honestly entitled to the award of the contract that Mr Carney received, even though the bid of the News was less than the work could be done for with a profit, but as for Mr. McLaughlin profiting in any financial way out of the deal, this was entirely out of our mind in calling attention to the facts.

The Case of Mrs. Place.

As long as it is law that murderers shall pay the penalty of their crime by losing their own lives, Governor Roosevelt has acted both wisely and justly in declining to interfere with the course of the law in the case of Mrs. Martha Place. Mrs. Place's crime was one of the most horrible ever committed in New York State, but because she is a woman it is no reason why the law should not be the same for her that it is for man. We are opposed to the death penalty and believe that it should be abolished, but as chief executive of the State Governor Roosevelt did only what he should have done in allowing Mrs. Place to be punished the same as a man would be if he had committed such an offense. If the Governor had extended clemency to Mrs. Place he could not have honestly or consistently refused or declined to do the same for every other criminal of the same stripe.

In announcing that no bills will be signed after the Legislature has adjourned Governor Voorhees has given a warning to Senators and Assemblymen that earns commendation for the chief executive. If followed out rigorously the rule will prevent the enaction of much pernicious legislation that generally goes through in the last hours of the Legislature every year. In the hurly-burly times of adjournment many bad measures have become laws when their real intent was discovered too late to remedy; and as well many good measures were necessarily vetoed by the Governor because of technical errrors made by the Legislature under the same circumstances. The Governor's new rule will urge the Legislature to be more careful in its work.

After having seen improved streets practically ruined in Plainfield time and again by being torn up to allow connections to be made with underground conduits of various kinds, and the thoroughfares never put in good condition again by the disturbers, Assemblyman Murray has introduced a bill in the Legislature which provides that streets paved or repaved with asphalt, belgian block or macadam shall not be disturbed for a period of five years, unless express permision is granted by resolution of the governing body of the city.

Assemblyman Murray's new law in reference to the pay of election officials has caused trouble in Atlantic City. The officers formerly received $3 for every eight hours they worked, but on registration day and election day, netting them about $20 or $30 Under the new law they receive $3 for registration day and only $7 for election day, no matter if they work the entire 24 hours Upon presenting their bills today Comptroller Heston would not honor them, stating that they were excessive.

Assemblyman Murray made another attempt yesterday to get his bill reducing telephone rates out of the clutches of the corporations committee. Mr. Squire, of Union, a member of the committee, said that Mr. Murray had given the committee information about the cost of electricity and the expense of conducting a telephone business, which, he said, he had got from an expert. The committee wanted to hear that expert. Mr. Murray's motion was defeated.

The sword for Admiral Sampson, which was voted by the Legislature, is to be made in Philadelphia, and will be of a handsome design of nickel scabbard, with gold ornaments, and will cost the State $2,000. The sword will not be completed before the Legislature adjourns and the plans for the presentation are not known at present, nor can they be known until Admiral Sampson's movements are ascertained from the Washington authorities.

The Daily Press has just completed arrangements whereby it will, commencing next week, greatly increase the amount of reading matter printed in the woman's department. The matter that has been secured is copyrighted and is written and illustrated by the best women writers of the day. The Daily Press has always been popular with the fair sex, and these new features will undoubtedly find appreciative readers among the women.

Every year the trusts are depriving the people of New Jersey of more money unjustly than all the racetracks did when they were in their prime in this little commonwealth. Yet we have put the blackest possible ban on the racetracks and on the other hand encourage the incorporation and thrift of the detestable and disreputable trusts. The course of human events works strangely in New Jersey.

The Trenton Evening Times editor, who is an observing gentleman as well as a good newspaperman, has the following to say of The Daily Press:

The Daily Press of Plainfield felicitates itself upon a rapid increase in circulation. The Press merits the success that is its. Here's hoping there will be more of it.

As a general rule there are no political lessons to be learned from the spring local elections. The elections that were held Tuesday were conducted throughout the State almost entirely on local issues distinct from political considerations.

Governor Pingree is said to have stopped looking after his potato crop long enough to pull a few wires that may bring a Presidential nomination in 1900. Nothing less than the Presidency will suit the Michigan statesman now.

Unless a majority of the Borough Council should decline to confirm Mayor-elect Smalley's nomination, W. Warren Rowley will probably be the next Borough Clerk.

Mr. Croker's automobile company is to be capitalized at $8,000,000. We suppose that it will be divided about equally—half air and half money.

"Doing a Woman's Work Drove Him to Suicide." An yet there are those who say the new woman does no harm.

Mr. Kipling is reported well enough to sit up and read the New York newspapers. He must be a strong man then.

Ex-Congressman "Jerry" Simpson is engaged in writing a book entitled "If the Devil Came to Congress."

Cheaper gas seems to have been blown out in the chambers of the State Legislature.

We hear no regrets because the Legislature is to adjourn.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Paterson finds the silk trade booming, Newark sees leather goods in demand at better prices. Elizabeth is enjoying increased trade in shipping, pottery is doing well in Trenton and the building trades have a happy outlook for spring and summer. Any one who growls now should be led out of the State—New York Press.

Morristown soon will have direct rail connection with Paterson, when both cities will receive a benefit from the interior traffic. As the residents of Union county, between Elizabeth and Plainfield, divide their trade with these cities, so it may be expected that the people of the dozen small villages in Morris and Passaic will use the new railroad to the advantage of the more populous centres.—New York Press.

If the constituents of Senator Reed and Assemblyman Cooper are desirous of having the five per cent. bill passed they should write letters to their representatives at Trenton urging its passage. Senator Reed has been trying to get the bill reported, but the committee on Revisions of Laws has still got possession of it. If the farmers who have wanted this bill so long, really desire to have it passed, they should send down numerous petitions. The committee seem to think there is no demand for the measure.—Unionist Gazette.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

An amusing story is told of a well-known young man residing in this city, who recently made a visit to Philadelphia on business. While there he acted a little strange. A policeman arrested him and he was detained over night in the city jail. The next morning, through friends, the unfortunate fellow was released and allowed to come home. He says that the next time he visits the Quaker City he will be careful how he acts.

A Nebraska soldier writing home from Manila says: "One of the boys here got a box from home. He was tickled to death, and said: 'I knew I'd get something from home—something that's good to eat.' When he opened the box, behold ten nice boxes of canned salmon and ten cans of corned beef. Jewhiz. He took every can and threw them in the river. At home he was fond of canned salmon and corned beef, so his folks thought that would be a good thing for him. They little knew how much of that stuff a soldier gets in the army. Every other meal is salmon, rice, corned beef or beans."

There is already some local interest among politicians in the census appointments, all of which will be made by January 1, 1900. There is not much money in census-taking for those who do the work, the average enumerator receiving about $100 all told for the part he takes in compiling decennial statistics. But those who simply look wise and boss the job make a very good thing out of it. The real plums are attached to the bureau in Washington, where hundreds of clerkships will be given out which pay all the way from $1,200 to $3,000 a year. As there is to be no Civil Service test these berths will go largely, if not altogether, to Republicans. It is a curious fact that only two censuses have been taken under Democratic auspices—those of 1820 and 1850 respectfully—although that party had control of the Government most of the time prior to 1861.

Applauds Assemblyman Murray.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Can any one doubt the utter pliancy of the present Republican Legislature of this State to corporate interests, after the vote in the House when Mr. Murray moved to relieve the committee from further consideration of his bill fixing telephone charges? His motion was promptly voted down in deference to the dictation of monopoly bosses. It is stated by a member of the Assembly that out of some twenty-three bills referred to Mr. Squires' committee, only three have come to light. They were smothered in the interest of corporations. The various committees were named and made by the Speaker for the very purposes that they are filling. These committees are but graveyards in which to bury the bills that do not suit the greedy capitalists. The tools of corporations may laugh at Mr. Murray's efforts to right these wrongs, but that his intentions are honest and on the side of the whole people, none will dare deny. A day is not far distant when the people will vote.

Spring Millinery.

OPENING DAYS
Saturday - Monday - Tuesday
March 18th, 20th, 21st.
Under the Direction of Miss Daly.

This announcement of itself is simply a piece of store news; it conveys no hint of the beauty of the show, gives no inkling of the amount of work accomplished, tells no price story, and yet this Millinery Opening marks an epoch in store history. We've raised this branch of our business to a higher level than ever before, a higher level of excellence in the finished products, a lower level of prices. You are invited to visit the store during these reception days, you are invited to inspect all that we have planned and prepared for your approval, you are invited to make price comparisons. It doesn't matter whether the article is a Fine Pattern Hat or a modest bunch of flowers. Every item in this brightly adorned Millinery Department is for sale and it must sell on its own honest merit. Opening days are busy days and we have arranged to have sufficient sales force in attendance. Our trimming department is organized to turn out a large volume of satisfactory work at the shortest notice. Much more might be said, but if you'll favor us with a call we'll let the stock talk, it will tell you more in ten minutes than we could say in an hour and say it more convincingly, too.

Dress Goods Fresh Arrivals They will more than hold their own. They ought not to stay long at these prices, as it will make buying brisk. A pretty lot 36 inch all wool Scotch Suiting, just the thing for satisfactory wear; the price is surprisingly low for the goods—25c the yard. Ten different effects. A little early for Grenadines, but the price will quickly close out this lot. They are 38 inches wide, twelve different designs, value 49c. our price 25c yard. THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text—I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.—John x; 11. March 19.

1. The misconduct of the scribes and Pharisees, who ought to have been the faithful shepherds of the people, brings to mind the words by the prophets, notably in Jer. xxiii and Ezek. xxxiv. Unfaithfulness and unbelief seem to prevail in all ages in the professing people of God. By the gate of Eden, with its sword and sacrifice; by the gate and door and veil of the tabernacle He taught the people the only way of access to Himself. He now reminds them of it and says that all other ways are invented by those who would rob God of His honor.

2. The true shepherd accepts God's way and knows no other. Like Noah building the ark or Moses the tabernacle, he has no suggestions to make but simply obeys God implicity. He does not appoint himself to office, but God calls him and appoints him, as He did Moses and Joshua and Samuel. Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel, the apostles and all who are willing to be wholly subject to Him.

3. His voice is recognized as the voice of one in authority, and He is followed and trusted. He said to Moses, Thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name (Ex. xxxxiii, 17). Through Isaiah He said, "Fear not, for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name, thou art mine" (Isa. xliii, 1).

4. A great many people who bear His name and seem to be doing His work do not understand this, for they complain of not being able to accomplish what they wish nor get where they desire to go. There must be a misunderstanding somewhere, for when we follow where He leads all should be easy, and when He goes before He will not leave obstacles in the way of those whom He leads.

5. Sheep must be wiser than people, for, while sheep will not follow a stranger, many who call themselves Christians follow those who do not follow Christ and yet think they are in the right way. They do not seem to know the difference between His voice and that of strangers. His word is His voice. It is true from the beginning and forever settled in heaven (Ps. cxix, 89).

6. "They understand not." It seems a comparatively simple parable in the light of the prophecies we have referred to, but it was all dark to them, for they were more full of tradition than of His Word, the Scriptures. It is even so now, and a Bible study to those unaccustomed to it is something very strange. How sadly He says even to his disciples, Do ye not yet understand? How is it that ye do not understand? (Math. xvi, 9, 11).

7. Now He says plainly, "I am the door of the sheep." The gate of the garden of Eden, the gate and door and veil of the tabernacle, the door of Noah's ark, the entrance to the city of refuge, where all typical of Him who is the way and the only way. There is none other name given under heaven among men whereby we may be saved (Acts iv, 18). Christ told men to look unto Him and they would be saved. Christ is God, and when we receive Christ we receive God. The Son has left on record that blessed truth, "Him that cometh unto Me I will in nowise cast out" (John, vi, 37).

8. All before Him or beside Him were thieves and robbers. I take it that the expression "All that ever came before me" had the same thought as in Ex. xx, 3, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." The first thief and robber was satan, who tried to take Adam and Eve away from God.

9. Again He says that He is the door, and He speaks of safety and plenty. Not only is He the door, but He is also our salvation and our food. He said, 'He that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me" (John vi, 57). Any one may enter in and find in Him salvation and rest and peace and plenty.

10. He desires to give life and life abundantly, while the thief seeks only to destroy. The father of all the thieves is called the adversary, who goeth about seeking whom he may devour (I Pet. v, 8). Christ is our life. When we receive Him, we have life, and when we let Him fill us with Himself we have abundance of life.

11. He says, "I am the Good Shepherd." Elsewhere He says, or rather is spoken of as the Great Shepherd and the Chief Shepherd (Heb. xiii, 20, 21; I Pet. v, 4). As the Good Shepherd He gave His life for us that He may save us. As the Great Shepherd He works in us the things which are pleasing to God. As the Chief Shepherd He will reward us at His coming for the service we have permitted Him to accomplish in us.

12. The hireling thinks more of his own life than the welfare of the sheep. He is not one with the Good Shepherd, though professedly serving Him. This and the next verse are fully set forth in those chapters in Jeremiah and Ezekiel, already referred to. Let each answer for himself as pastor, teacher or Christian worker, Am I one with the Good Shepherd in self renouncing and self denying labor, seeking nothing for myself, but only the welfare of those with whom He brings me in contact?

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 19. "Self Mastery"—Text, I Cor. ix, 24-27.

"Every man that striveth for mastery is temperate in all things."

Even prizefighters when in training are kept under rigid rules as to food, drink, exercise and sleep. All athletes know that temperateness and regularity are essential to strength.

No less is true in the Christian life. The body has the greatest influence on the spirit life. No man can be gluttonous, slovenly, lascivious, drunken and still be pure in heart and mind. One may be diseased in body, weak and physically wrecked, and yet triumphant in soul. The man is a spirit in a material body. The important question is, Which is master? If the bodily appetites and passions rule, then the man is slave to worse than beastly powers. He grows earthly, sensual, devilish. If the spirit rules, then the body in obeying the higher reason comes to its highest freedom and ease and efficiency. Every appetite of body is recognized as right in its place and as indicating a need to be satisfied at the proper time and in the proper way. But all are to be kept in bounds and all powers of body are to be used to serve the highest interests of the soul. Pleasure will come in the gratification of each appetite, but no power of body is to be used just for the purpose of feeling the pleasure in its exercise and with no higher end in view. Sleep is for rest and must have its time and limits. It is not to be indulged at all times nor as a gratification of the feeling of indolence.

The spirit is to be master and to make all powers work for its perfect development. Patience, endurance, self repression, self urging, watchfulness, prudence, courage, will all be needed.

Right Rev. Frederick Temple, archbishop of Canterbury, says: "I am a total abstainer because I believe that this is the most effective mode of bringing about sobriety in the community in general. I believe I can do more as a total abstainer in that direction than I could if I were to be ever so carefully moderate in consuming alcoholic drinks."

In the United States there are 232,000 saloons, which cost their supporters $1,000,000 annually. Is the benefit derived from them worth what it costs?

Every one must and does settle the question of what shall be his practice in regard to alcoholic drinks. Shall he use them or abstain? To let them alone is safe. Health does not require their use. Their continued use may injure health, and in case of many diseases the chances are much lessened for recovery when the patient has used alcoholic drinks.

The saloon is a popular institution for various reasons. Some people want the liquors sold there. Others want the companionship and the pleasant surroundings. Multitudes of young men in the cities have cheerless lodgings, and find the warmth, luxurious furnishings, music and company which they crave after the work of the day better supplied by the saloons than any other place. They are too poor in many cases to join a club. Libraries and reading rooms are few, and have no facilities for social life. The saloon meets a felt need of many who have no desire for vice, but seek congenial society. With no special prejudice against alcoholic liquors and with no special taste for them, they are drawn to the saloon by its social attractions and drink because it is the custom and is the way in which the accommodations are paid for.

The man who runs the saloon does not wish to make men worse. He wants to get a living and do it in the easiest way. Often he has no trade, and does not find it easy to get a situation in any business. He is in the saloon for the money he can get. If prudent, he is often a total abstainer. Many liquor dealers never drink beer or spirits. They know better than to do it. It is the money they are after.

All that the saloon supplies can be better furnished in other ways. Arbitrary use of force will not in a free country settle the problem presented. It is not the question of the reform of men who drink and abuse their families and become an expense to the public. It is not altogether the question of the saloon as a school of vice. All these points are involved, but the strength of the hold of the saloon on society lies in the fact that it meets a social want grounded in a real need which is not supplied in any other manner. The saloon is the poor man's club. It is the best form yet found, but not the best that can be found. All it gives should be found without its evil features.

The reform movements of past years have relied upon total abstinence pledges, reform clubs with formal meetings, debates, and occasionally poorly furnished reading rooms, to counteract the saloon influence. Prohibitory laws are the favorite device of others. Good as far as they go, none of these means or all of them combined have checked the evil. Something more than wearing a piece of ribbon is needed, something more than talk. What can be done?

Pleasant meeting places for those having no home surroundings are the prime necessity. Music and beauty in furnishings and freedom for social conversation and recreation must be had. Refreshments at low prices and of proper kinds must be furnished. No attempt at charity or compulsion must be in the plan. The ordinary man who frequents the saloon has no need of charity. He treats others. He is independent and pays his way. If you wish to abolish the saloon, you must enlist him in the scheme of replacing it with something better. Charity schemes will not do.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 19—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC—Self mastery.—I Cor. ix, 24-27.

Paul here illustrates the Christian life by a foot race and a boxing contest. In order to win the race at the Isthmian games one had to carefully train himself for the contest, and this necessitated many self denials, "temperance in all things." To win the boxing contest one must not only feign heavy blows, but actually strike them. There must be no fighting "as one who beateth the air," but as one who "strikes under the eyes." This is the negative and positive side of the Christian life. We must deny ourselves, but that is not all. We must be in active operation against evil within and without us. There are things we must not do and things that we must do. The successful contestant in either of these contests had first to master himself before he mastered others. To do so he had to deny himself of many things in training and had also to learn to do certain things efficiently. The Christian who will master the duties of the Christian life and win the eternal crown of reward must be governed by these same principles. He must first of all master himself. He must be willing to deny himself of everything that will weaken his power over himself or will threaten to rule him if he does not rule or destroy it.

Christianity teaches self mastery. It praises and eulogizes the man who is able to control himself. It points out the absolute necessity of self control if we are to win the race and the battle of the Christian life. Nor does it ignore or try to conceal the fact that self mastery demands self denial, temperance in all things. It emphasizes this fact and illustrates it. Paul here declares that he keeps his body under—that he brings his physical desires under—perfect control; that he bruises it, leads it about as a slave and smites it under the eyes. This language is of course only figurative. Self torture never produces self mastery. It weakens the body rather than strengthens it. Constant self denying labor for others is undoubtedly the idea in the mind of the apostle. Thus he kept his body under and made it conduce to his growth in power and in grace.

Self mastery is a Christian grace much needed today. It is needed not only in reference to sobriety, but in all things, in drinking, in eating, in thinking, in speaking, in actions of all kinds. Many Christians practice sobriety, temperance in drink, but are very intemperate in speech, in desires, in habits of other descriptions. We must be temperate in all things if we would win the prize of eternal life. We must do that one thing, and whatever in our lives does not assist us in this one thing must be controlled or destroyed. If contestants for worldly prizes are so ready and willing to deny themselves for prizes which soon fade away and are forgotten, how much more ready should we be to do the same for an eternal crown!

Bible Readings.—Prov. xv, 1; xvi, 32; xix, 11; xx, 1; xxiii, 1-3, 29-32; Isa. v, 11, 12; xxviii, 1-7; I Cor. vi, 9, 10; Gal. v, 19-26; Eph. v, 18; Titus i, 7-9; ii, 1-12; I Pet. iv, 1-5; II Pet. i, 6-9.

Universal Peace.

Apart from the temporal peace between the kingdoms on earth we are in a higher sense also reminded of the millennial reign of peace toward which the signs of the times are clearly pointing. As followers of Jesus, we are looking forward to that ideal government of God, indicated in the Scriptures, when Christ shall rule His people in peace and equity, "and we are aiding the realization of this ideal and the coming of God's kingdom just so far as in our daily lives, in our business, in all our intercourse with men, we make the principles of Christ's kingdom our own." For the coming of this kingdom of peace we as Christians ought constantly to labor and be sincere when we pray, "Lord, for Thy coming us prepare."—Moravian.

Good Intentions.

Many a good intention dies from inattention. If through carelessness or indolence or selfishness a good intention is not put into effect, we have lost an opportunity, demoralized ourselves and stolen from the pile of possible good. To be born and not fed is to perish. To launch a ship and neglect it is to lose it. To have a talent and bury it is to be a "wicked and slothful servant." For in the end we shall be judged not alone by what we have done, but by what we could have done.—Sunday School Times.

How They May Commingle.

The weeping of the old men who remember the glory of former days and the shouting of the young men who behold the glory of the present and future make a singular medley of sad and happy experiences and memories and realizations and hopes. Yet they may all commingle in gracious and glorious victory in the present.—Rev. E. D. Pepper.

Singing From the Heart.

Singing is a heart service. It is making melody within the heart to the Lord. Some of God's most acceptable hymns are sung in silence. The heart simply hums some old tune which none save God can hear.—Presbyterian Journal.

Toward Heaven.

A church without weak souls in it, bearing them toward heaven, would deserve the condemnation of men as much as a lifeboat that had gone to a ship blown up and refused to take on board any but those not wounded.—Christian Standard.

An Old Legend.

An old legend says that the devil once gave a hermit the choice of three great vices, one of which was drunkenness. The hermit chose this as being the least sinful. He became drunk and committed the other two.—Universalist Leader.

CHAPTER II.

Just what an officer's actual rank might be in the days that followed close on the heels of the war was a matter no man could tell from either his dress or address. Few indeed were they who escaped the deluge of brevets that poured over the army and soaked some men six deep.

There were well authenticated cases of well preserved persons who had never so much as seen a battle and were yet, on one pretext or another, brevetted away up among the stars for "faithful and meritorious service" recruiting, mustering or disbursing.

We had colonels by title whose functions were purely those of the file closer. We had generals by brevet who had never set squadron in the field and didn't know the difference between a pole yoke and a pedometer.

Every captain, except one or two who had laughingly declined, wore the straps of a field officer, some few even of generals, and so when one heard a military looking man addressed as colonel the chances were ten to one that he was drawing only the stipend of a company officer, and in matters of actual rank in the army it was money that talked.

But there could be no questioning the right of the senior of the two officers who had alighted at Sancho's to the title of colonel. Soldier stood out all over him, even though his garb was concealed by a nondescript duster. His face, lined, thin lipped and resolute, was tanned by desert suns and winds. His hair, once brown, was almost white. His beard, once flowing and silky, was cropped to a gray stubble. His steely blue eyes snapped under their heavy thatch. His head was carried high and well back, and his soft felt hat, wide brimmed, was pulled down over the brows. His deep chest, square shoulders, erect carriage and straight, muscular legs all told of days and years in the field, and every word he uttered had about it the crisp, clear cut ring of command.

It was safe to bet that no mere company was the extent of this soldier's authority, and Sancho, keen observer, had put him down for a lieutenant colonel at least. Full colonels were mostly older men, and Arizona had but one in "the days of the empire."

The ranchman had eagerly whispered questions to the loungers as to the identity of the two arrivals, but without success. Both were strangers, although the junior had been seen at the ranch once before, the day Blake's troop was camped there on the way back from the Dragoons. There was the packet left by the orderly to be called for by officers arriving on the Yuma stage, addressed in clerkly hand, but Sancho, alas, could not read.

Hovering as near as the gravity and dignity of his station would permit, he had heard the colonel's query about Blake. He pricked up his ears at once. Teniente Blake—thirty miles east on the Maricopa road! Why, how was this? Some one had told him Blake had been to the Colorado and was coming back by this very stage. How did Blake get to the east of Sancho's ranch, after having once gone west, without Sancho's knowing it?

Suspiciously he watched the two soldiers, the grizzled colonel, the slim lieutenant. They were talking together in low tone; at least the colonel was talking eagerly, energetically and with much gesticulation. The junior listened wordless to every word. What had he meant by "the bird had flown?" Why should Nevins "skip?" An unpleasant fear seized upon Sancho. He knew Nevins, at least a Nevins, is captain whom everybody knew in fact and few men trusted. What had Nevins been doing, or rather what that he had been doing was he to be held to account for? Why should the colonel so eagerly ask where they could reach Blake?

Time was when Sancho flattered himself there was no deviltry going on in Arizona, except such as originated with the Indians, in which he had not at least the participation of full knowledge, yet here came two officials, hastening by stage instead of marching with military deliberation and escort, and they were in quest of the Senor Capitan Nevins, of whom all men had heard and at whose hands many had suffered, for was not he a player whom the very cards seemed to obey?

Was it not he who broke the bank at Bustamente's during the fiesta at Tucson but five months agone? Was it not Nevins who won all the money those two young tenientes possessed, two boys from the far east just joining their regiments and haplessly falling into the hands of this dashing, dapper, whole souled, hospitable comrade, who made his temporary quarters their home until they could find opportunity to go forward to the distant posts where their respective companies were stationed? Was it not Nevins who, right there at Sancho's ranch, finding a party of prospectors, several ex-Confederate soldiers among them, languidly staking silver at the monte table presided over by Sancho's own brother, had calmly opened a faro layout and enticed every man from the legitimate game and every peso from their pockets before the two days' session was finished?

Well did Sancho recall his own wrath and that of his brother at this unlicensed interference with their special business and the surprising liberality, too, with which the senor capitan had silenced their remonstrance. Rascal though he was, Sancho had sense enough to know that such proceedings were not seemly in a man bearing the commission of an officer, but Sancho little knew how many a congressman along at the close of the war, finding himself compelled to provide some kind of living for political "heelers" or some impersonal reward for services rendered, had foisted his henchmen into the army, then being enlarged and reorganized, and Nevins was one of the results of the iniquitous system.

Commissioned a first lieutenant of a regiment that had had a proud record in the regular division of the Army of the Potomac and had been hurried at the close of the war to the Pacific coast, Nevins had joined at Fort Yuma and served a few weeks' apprenticeship as a file closer, just long enough to demonstrate that he knew nothing whatever about soldiering and too much about poker. All his seniors in grade, except the West Pointers graduated in 1865, had brevets for war service, and Nevins' sponsor was appealed to to rectify the omission in the lieutenant's case. Nevins had held a commission in a volunteer regiment in the defenses of Washington the last few months of the war, and that was found amply sufficient, when a prominent member of the committee on military affairs demanded it, to warrant the bestowal of a brevet for "gallant and meritorious service;" hence came the title of captain.

Then, as company duty proved irksome and Nevins' company and post commander both began to stir him up for his manifold negligences and ignorances, the aid of his patron in congress was again invoked. A crippled veteran who could do no field service was in charge of a supply camp for scouting parties, escorts, detachments, etc., and, to the wrath of the regimental officers, this veteran was relieved and Lieutenant and Brevet Captain Nevins, by department orders, was detailed in his place. This made him independent of almost everybody, besides placing in his hands large quantities of commissary and quartermaster stores, which were worth far more to the miner, prospector and teamster than their invoice price. The stories that began to come into Yuma and Drum barracks and other old time stations of the "high jinks" going on day and night at Nevins' camp, the orders for liquors, cigars and supplies received at San Francisco and filled by every stage or steamer, the lavish entertainment accorded to officers of any grade and to wayfaters with any sign of money, the complaints of victims who had been fleeced, the gloomy silence of certain fledgeling subalterns after brief visits at "Camp Ochre," as Blake had dubbed it, all pointed significantly to but one conclusion—that, so far from living on his pay, Nevins was gormandizing on that of everybody else and doubtless "raising the wind" in other ways at the expense of Uncle Sam.

Even in Arizona in the days of the empire it couldn't last forever. Easy come, easy go. Nevins had lavishly spent what was so lightly won. Tucson and Yuma City were within easy stage ride; even San Francisco had twice been found accessible. Dashing associates of both sexes were ever at hand. The sudden turn of the tide came with the order that broke up the supply camp, required him to turn over his funds and stores to the quartermaster at Camp Cooke and report for duty in person at that post.

Then came the expected discovery of grievous shortages in both funds and property, the order for the arrest of the delinquent officer and his trial by court martial. Colonel Turnbull, inspector general of the department, was hurried out from the shores of the Pacific to sit as one of senior members of the court. Lieutenant Loring, vainly striving along the Gila to find some resemblance between its tracing on a government map and its meanderings through the desert, was selected to perform the duties of judge advocate.

The court was authorized to sit without regard to hours and to sift the official career of the protege of the house committee of military affairs without regard to consequences, when that volatile and accused person took matters into his own hands and between the setting and rising of the sun disappeared from the brush, canvas and adobe shelters of old Camp Cooke and left for parts unknown, taking with him the best horse in the commanding officer's stable and, as genius has ever its followers, the admiration if not the regard of much of the garrison.

But other followers were needed at once. "That man must be caught at any cost, Loring," said the colonel. "No one begins to know the extent of his rascalities, and you and Blake must catch him."

For answer the engineer took out his watch—it was just 12:45—stepped out into the glare of the sunshine and gazed to the far horizon. The plain to the east was flat as a board for many a mile and well nigh as barren. Then he turned abruptly to Sancho. "Dinner ready?" he asked.

"In one, two minutes, senor capitan," responded the ranchman gravly, conferring on the officer the brevet of courtesy.

Out in front of the ranch the old red stage, long since faded to a dun color, stood baking in the burning rays. The mules had been taken into the corral for water, fodder and shade. The driver was regaling himself within the bar. A few loungers, smoking, but silent, seemed dozing the noontide away. Loring stepped to the side of the vehicle and drew forth a leather valise, swung it to his shoulder and strode back to where the colonel stood pondering under the canvas screen.

"Good hefting power in that right arm of his," muttered one of the loungers to a mate sprawled full length on the sand beneath the shelter of a tent fly and watching the officer from under his half closed lids. A grunt of assent was the only reply.

"Sancho," said he, "have that roan of yours saddled in ten minutes."

"Know what regiment he belongs to?" queried No. 1.

"No, but it's cavalry," was the murmured answer; "saw him straddling a broncho at Maricopa Wells last week. He knows how."

Somewhere within the ranch a triangle began to jangle. "Quima a-dol!" shrilled little Pedro, and three or four lazy, drowsing forms began slowly to get to their feet and to shuffle away toward the doorless aperture in the adobe wall, the entrance to the dining room of the stage and ranch people. Two men lingered, the two who were speculating as to the military connections of the young officer. One of them, after a quiet glance about the neighborhood, strolled out toward the stage, hands deep in the pockets of his wide trousers. There he seemed casually to repeat his leisurely survey of the surroundings. Then he lounged back.

"No go," said he in low tone; "both of 'em there yet; young feller changing his dress. Their dinner's ready, though. The colonel's writing."

Presently Sancho, grave and deliberate, as became his race, emerged from the shadows of the bar and came close before he spoke.

"He goes to ride—that youth. Know you whither? And he has no horse."

And, as though to confirm this statement, with his quick elastic step Loring came forth to the side gate, dumped his valise into the stage, turned and looked keenly over the group, then as quickly approached them. He had discarded his linen coat and trousers in favor of a pair of brown cord breeches, with Hualpai leggings and light spurs. A broad belt, with knife and revolvers, was buckled to his waist. A silk handkerchief was loosely knotted at his throat. A light colored felt hat was pulled down to his eyebrows, and dust colored gauntlets were drawn upon his hands. "Sancho," said he, "have that roan of yours saddled in ten minutes. How much if I keep him a week?"

"Everything in my house is at the service of the senor capitan," began Sancho grandiloquently, "but as to that horse"—

"No other will do. How much a week? Though I may keep him only a day."

"Senor, he is the horse of my brother, and my brother is not here. If harm should come"—

"Full value will be paid. Here," and a glittering goldpiece, a double eagle, flashed in the sun. "Waste no talk now. Take this and saddle him."

Slowly, gingerly, with thumb and finger tips the ranchman plucked the coin from the open and extended palm, then bowed with the same native grace and gravity.

"Come, Loring," growled the colonel impatiently, "dinner," and Sancho caught the name.

"The Senor Loreeng—will not ride him hard—or far? It is to the camp of the major he goes?"

But, turning on his heel, not another word would Loring say. Ten minutes later, his hunger appeased with bacon, frijoles and chocolate, he mounted and rode quietly away eastward until Sancho's ranch was two miles behind, then gave the roan both rein and spur and sped like the wind up the Gila, two of Sancho's oldest customers vainly lashing on his trail.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"A Ragtime Reception," presented for the first time on any stage, was seen in Music Hall last night by a good sized audience. Ragtime dances, melodies and dialogue are quite the proper caper in the vaudeville ranks nowadays and in "A Ragtime Reception" the use of this up-to-date subject goes to the limit. But the limits are bounded on all sides by an amused audience whose spontaneous, hearty laughter is the index that describes it as a popular distraction from the sobrieties of everyday life. The author, John M. Cooke, offers a reward to the person that can find a plot or a tangible story in the piece, but he is in no danger of being a loser thereby. There is no plot or motif in the whole concoction of stage hilarity that abounds while the reception is on. The title is slimly supported by a little buffoonery and dialogue acting as a vehicle for the introduction of songs, dances and bright sayings. And last, but not least, a bevy of pretty girls whose fantastic and abbreviated costumes put the finishing touches on what will undoubtedly prove to be a successful variety show. The performance last night dragged somewhat in places, as a first night is bound to, but a few days' work will relieve the piece of its rough spots and then the show should go with enough spirit and dash to make it popular.

* * * * *

The citizens of Plainfield will have the coveted opportunity of listening to one of the best known women lecturers in the country next Wednesday night, when Miss Anna Northend Benjamin, the famous war correspondent, will occupy the stage in Stillman Music Hall and speak upon "Tampa, Key West and Cuba During the War." The eighty views will be thrown upon the screen by the Camera Club's stereopticon. Plainfield society is sure to give a warm welcome to this plucky young American woman, who counts among her best friends, Mrs. William Ebbits Lowe. The demand for tickets indicates a crowded house.

SENATOR REED PLEADS.

ried the burden. Paying more taxes than any other industry in the State, they were not only forced to pay the six per cent., but they also had to pay the taxes of those who loan money to the counties. He knew of farms that would not sell for the amount of taxes. There was no demand in the State for 4 per cent. rate. The Five Per Cent. Interest bill, he said, did not protect large borrowers, but the small ones, the poorer man.

Mr. Pitney said that he had yet to hear the first intimation that a reduction of the rate of interest was desired. He said he believed the bill was presented in all sincerity for the best interests of the people, although it did not commend itself to his judgment.

Mr. Ketcham read a circular from from the smaller business men of New York against a 5 per cent. bill pending in that State. The circular set out that such a rate would drive the smaller banks out of business.

After further remarks by Messrs. Reed, McDermott and others, the amendment was defeated, 8 to 11, as follows:

Ayes—Messrs. Evans, Francis, Hutchinson, H. W. Johnson, Ketcham, Pitney, Smith, Stokes.

An attempt to take up the bill this afternoon on final passage was defeated because Senator McDermott refused to consent, on the ground that he wished to further consider the bill.

A Narrow Escape.

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in eight bottles. It has cured me and thank God, I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's Drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. Guaranteed or price refunded.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AIDING MISSIONS

Silver Anniversary of the Young Ladies' Mission Band.

FIVE REPORTS WERE READ.

EACH ONE COVERED FIVE YEARS OF SOCIETY.

The Band Originally Met as a Prayer Meeting and Then Became Known as the Mah Mhyah Mission Band—After Five Years Present Title Was Assumed—$3,000 Raised in Five Years.

A quarter of a century of success has crowned the efforts of the Young Ladies' Mission Band of the First Baptist church, and in honor of the completion of that number of years as a society the event was celebrated yesterday afternoon in a pleasant and profitable manner. The president, Mrs. DeWitt Brokaw, was in charge of the affair and conducted the programme.

Five reports were presented, each one covering a period of five years. Mrs. J. A. Powlison read the paper for the first five years. This showed that in 1873 a band of girls associated themselves and raised $25 to make Mrs. D. J. Yerkes a life member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. In 1874 these same girls formed what was known as the prayer meeting band. Meetings were held at the home of Miss Isabella Butler and at the home of Mrs. Eden Boice. Miss Butler was chosen as the first president of the band. In 1878 the name was changed to Mah Mnyah Mission Band and that name was kept until 1888. Mrs. Powlison was treasurer for the seven years, and during the first five years $800 was raised for mission work. This was considered remarkable considering the number of members, twenty, and the means at hand to collect money.

Mrs. W. O. Chapman presented the paper for the second five years. This showed that the band was increasing in membership and was doing good work. At this time the name of the society was again changed to the Young Ladies' Mission Band. Considerable money was raised during the second five years and it was used for foreign and home missions. The third five years was presented by Miss Grace Yerkes. During that time $1,400 was raised. Miss Yerkes read a letter from Mah Mhyah, in which she told of the work being carried on in India, where the band sends some of its money.

The paper for the fourth five years was read by Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., and it showed that over $3,000 was raised. This was the largest amount raised during any five years in the band's history. The report for the last five years was read by Miss Hattie Shreve and showed that a large amount of money was raised and wisely distributed to the best advantage.

After the reading of the reports a very enjoyable vocal solo was given by Mrs. Samuel Case, after which those present had the pleasure of listening to an able and interesting address by Mrs. Heinrichs, of Tettu, India. She told much about the work in her field of labor and created much enthusiasm among those present.

A matter brought up for discussion at the meeting was in regard to the advisability of the older members of the band withdrawing and joining the older missionary societies and allowing young persons to reorganize the band. There are good prospects of this being done, and it will be decided at the annual meeting of the band next Wednesday afternoon, when officers will be elected and other important business transacted. The band now numbers ninety members and is in a flourishing condition.

After the meeting yesterday a social time was held and tea was served by Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. Elston Woodland, Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. G. F. Brown and Mrs. Charles H. Smith.

ALL HONORED PATRON SAINT OF IRELAND

Plainfield Celebrated Birthday With a Ball.

FIVE HUNDRED PRESENT.

THE ANNUAL BALL OF ANCIENT ORDER OF HIBERNIANS HELD.

Affair Took Place in Washington Hall Last Night Whither Thronged Every Good Son and Daughter of Erin's Isle That Could Possibly Go—Danced and Made Merry All Night Long.

The only pity of it was that St. Patrick himself was not there last evening to see how his sons and daughters celebrated the anniversary of his birth. The Ancient Order of Hibernians were in command, but every true son of Erin, who could possibly do so, turned out to do honor to his patron saint. Altogether it was a glorious occasion.

Plainfield doesn't have any St. Patrick's Day parade but, for the past quarter century, the "Seventeenth of Ireland" has been the time for the annual ball of Division No. 4, Ancient Order of Hibernians. Last night it was held in Washington Hall and fully five hundred fair maids and brave young men assembled to dance away the evening in remembrance of the day.

The hall was decorated with greens and tri colored bunting while the flags of the United States and Old Ireland waved in unison over the heads of the musicians on the stage. Prof. Wallander, of Newark, led the orchestra.

The ball opened with a selection on the Irish bagpipes by Patrick Gilhooley, of Newark, which rejoiced the hearts of those who had heard it in the "ould country." Shortly after 10:30 o'clock came the grand march. It was led by the floor manager, Samuel Goff, with Miss May Day, and his chief assistant, Martin Regan, with Miss Katie Kelly. They were assisted by the other members of the floor committee, Patrick Currigan, Patrick O'Keefe and Patrick Cullen.

The ball was a great success socially. Besides those who went to dance there was a host of lookers-on. The dancing continued without abatement until the early morning hours.

The officers of the local division of the A. O. H. are as follows: President, Edward Ryan; vice-president, Patrick Cullen; treasurer, P. J. Reville; financial secretary, Patrick Harrington; recording secretary, J. J. Gallagher; sergeant at-arms, William Casey.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL OFFICERS ELECTED.

Annual Meeting of First Presbyterian Sunday-School Held Last Night.

The annual meeting of the Sunday-school of the First Presbyterian church was held in the church parlors last evening. The following officers were elected; Superintendent, E. M. Cave; assistant superintendent, R. H. Radford; second assistant superintendent, Miss Helen Boice; treasurer, F. Shotwell; secretary, E. D. Coegre; assistant secretary, Frank Hazeltine; librarian, F. L. Cobb; assistant librarian, Warren Townley.

The reports presented from the various officers and committees showed the school to be in a flourishing condition.

Verdict for the Claimant.

The jury in the case of the Bard Company, claimants, against Charles Daley, plaintiff in execution, to try the right of property, brought in a verdict for the claimant yesterday afternoon, the plaintiff not appearing. This, as well as the two preceding trials, took place before Justice Moffett. The jurymen were Julian Scott, F. H. Martin, Charles Ross, John N. Anderson, H. W. Fraleigh and P. N. Kline.

Neal Dow's Birthday.

One of the red letter days of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, both in this and foreign countries, is the birthday of General Neal Dow, March 20th. The Plainfield Union will observe Sunday, March 19th, 4 p. m., in their room, East Front street with appropriate exercises, at which time Aaron M. Powell, who was a personal friend of Neal Dow, will speak. Everyone will be be welcome.

Adopted Two Palefaces.

Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men met last night and adopted two palefaces. The committee on the fair reported progress and said that all the arrangements are completed. After the meeting a large delegation went to Bound Brook and attended the peace dance given there by Indianola Tribe. All had a good time and returned home about 2 o'clock.

THE LAST AND THE BEST

LEON VINCENT'S TALK ON AUTHOR OF "THE LITTLE MINISTER."

This Popular Author is a Graduate of Newspaper Work, and Though Young Stands High in the School of Fiction.

The last and best of the three lectures which Leon H. Vincent has been giving in Vincent chapel this spring, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church, took place last night. Mr. Vincent's subject was "Barrie and the Scotch School."

In introducing his subject the lecturer spoke briefly about the new school that has sprung up within the past ten years, and which now threatens to usurp the place of English literature unless there is a halt called by the novel-reading public. Of dialect stories, Mr. Vincent thinks those with a hint of dialect in them are preferable to those that are full of it, and instead of the reader quickly getting the sense of what is real, because of the uncouth terms used, he must pay too much attention to the language.

Foremost among the Scotch writers Mr. Vincent placed James M. Barrie, who has recently become even better known to the world through his famous book, "The Little Minister." Mr. Barrie is now about 38 years of age, having been born in 1860, and for many years has been giving to the world the choicest bits of Scottish literature. His dialect is so pure and delicate, yet so substantial a part of the story he writes that it adds a charm to the novel.

Barrie took up literature when a young man, graduating into it from the great school of journalism.

After leaving college Barrie looked about for something to do. A position as leading writer on an English country paper was offered him. He accepted, and for two years labored hard at his desk for what he considered a princely salary of $15 a week.

Just when he began to write fiction is not definitely known. The old legends and tales of his native land began early to rise up in his imagination, and soon he began to sketch them with his pen. The outline was completed, a bit of real life was added, a plot was arranged on which to hang the tale and there was a story.

It would appear that the young man had no very firm believers in his genius, for he received no encouragement even from his mother to induce him to spend his time in writing. When some of his tales first appeared in print she expressed an opinion that the editor who accepted "that stuff" must be a fool, and for a long time failed to realize that her son was delighting the whole English speaking and reading world with his books.

Barrie's novels are the ideal creations of a well balanced mind helped by the plain every day surroundings of his home. The rich Scotch dialect was his own native speech; the romances woven about his characters are plain tales of the Scottish moors and crags, and the plots of the novels are laid upon actual happenings in which he often had a part. Books could not teach him those things, they are the work of a genius.

Barrie's genius was quickly recognized and rewarded. His first publisher was Frederick Greenwood, editor of the St. James Gazette. Barrie is the author of three well know novels, "When a Man's Single," "A Window in Thrums" and "The Little Minister." His last book, "Sentimental Tommy" is reaching an enormous sale, and is said by some to be the best he has yet written.

Towards the close of the lecture Mr. Vincent read humorous extracts from some of Barrie's writings.

Will Tell How They Worked.

The members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church have arranged a very entertaining sociable, which will be held in the church parlors Wednesday evening. Each member of the society will earn a dollar in some unusual way before the sociable which will then be turned into the treasury of the society. At the sociable the members will tell how they earned their respective dollars.

A Joint Exhibition Drill.

The Plainfield High School cadets held their first drill at the Crescent Rink Thursday evening. Hereafter the company will meet there for drill until the weather moderates sufficiently to allow the out-door drills to take place. An exhibition drill will be held later in the season. The advisability of having the High School company and the company from Leal's School unite for that occasion is being considered.

CONTEST AN EXCITING ONE.

TEAMS EVENLY MATCHED, BUT LUCK WAS WITH EAST ORANGE.

Match Played in the Gymnasium of the East Orange High School—Miss Sterling Made the Only Goal for the Plainfield Team—Plainfield Accused of Causing a Foul—Names of Local Team.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

East Orange, March 18—By a score of 3 to 2, the girls of the East Orange High School defeated the girls of the Plainfield High School at basket ball yesterday afternoon. The match was played in the gymnasium of the East Orange school before a large crowd of interested spectators.

The game was a decidly exciting one, but free of all rough features. The East Orange girls played a clean, fast game, with a good exhibition of team play. It was evident from the start that the two teams were evenly matched. Both sides showed up well and played together, the home team having the advantage of an old acquaintance with the gymnasium.

East Orange was the first to score, Miss Dill throwing a goal from the field. A few minutes afterwards, Miss Marjorie Sterling made the only goal for Plainfield. At the end of the first half the score stood 2 to 2. In the second half both teams succeeded in preventing their opponents from scoring. A foul was called on the Plainfield team by the referee, and East Orange instructor. The foul was for delaying the game, the referee claiming that one Plainfield player held the ball so long that she delayed the game. At the time she was surrounded by the other side and would not throw it until she found an opening. On the throw East Orange gained a goal, scoring another point. Neither side could score from the field and the game closed with East Orange one point in the lead.

BOY WAS A CRACK SHOT.

ALBERT CALLOWAY WON A MATCH AGAINST HOWARD.

The Lad Gave the Spectators a Surprise, Winning by 23 Birds to Howard's 21—Other Honors Were Won.

There was a surprised crowd at Scott Terry's yesterday afternoon. A young lad, only seventeen years old, walked in and defeated an old hand at the business, incidentally winning a purse of $100. The young wonder was Albert Calloway, of North Plainfield. His rival for trap shooting honors was Charles C. Howard.

A match at twenty five live birds, had been arranged between the two, for $50 a side. Almost all of the spectators present backed Howard as the probable winner. Frank Hedden was the lad's principal backer.

The match resulted in a victory for Calloway by a score of 23 to 21. The birds were a selected lot and flew well. The weather was ideal for shooting.

There were sweepstakes besides the match. At the blue rocks Tom Brantingham, of South Plainfield, carried off the honors, bringing down 20 targets out of 20. Calloway and Howard will shoot again the 29th for $100 a side.

A Hot Affair.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, March 18—A smoker was the attraction at the Westfield Club Hall last evening. The entertainment led off with some slight of-hand work by Charles P. Thompson. He was followed by the Saville Sisters, who in abbreviated dresses did some song and dance work and then gave way to two other females who entertained with songs and puns on local members of the club. The entertainment ended with a boxing match between William O'Connor, of New York, and E. Hornbeck, introduced as the former feather weight champion of the United States. The bout was very interesting.

THE DUTCH NOT THERE.

BUT THE HOLLAND SUPPER WAS A GREAT SUCCESS.

Affair Given in Trinity Reformed Church Under the Auspices of the Bible Class Taught by Robert A. Meeker.

Those who have never partaken of a genuine Holland supper in the old country many thousands of miles away were given the opportunity last evening at Trinity Reformed church of enjoying such a supper without the discomfiture of going to Holland to get it. This original idea was conceived in the minds of Sunday-school class No. 1, taught by R. A. Meeker, and to carry out the plans successfully they had the assistance of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school in their endeavor to secure enough money to meet the financial needs of the school.

In every particular the affair was a success and those who took part feel well repaid for their efforts. As an attraction, and incidentally, in honor of the day, the decorations were green, which color prevailed through a pleasing arangement of bunting that was draped about the room and suspended from the pillars. Arranged about the rooms were tables where one could conveniently sit down and remain until the inner man was sufficiently filled and satisfied.

The supper was all to be desired. The menu was noticeable for the fact that everything mentioned was of a substantial nature and no doubt filled the minds of any as to whether they would get their money's worth. Old-fashioned baked beans, clam chowder, home made bread, jelly cake, crullers, corn beef, potatoes, etc., were some of the things that were provided, and no one was allowed to leave the table until they were satisfied. As a finishing touch ice cream filled the bill exactly.

Mr. Meeker, teacher of the class, was on duty at the door and accepted the shekels, and not one escaped his eagle eye. After this guard was passed the guests were weclomed by members of the school and they were made to feel at home right away.

While supper was being served from 6 until 10 o'clock a pleasant phonograph concert was given consisting of all the best and most popular selections. Altogether the affair was a success, financially and socially. Nearly one hundred and fifty suppers were served, and nearly everything was disposed of.

Those who took part in making the supper so successful included Miss Nettie Randall, Miss Ward, Mrs. Wikoff, Mrs. Watts, Miss Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Anthony, Miss DuBois, Miss Maude DuBois, Mrs. Beighton, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke. Among the young women who assisted were Miss Cora Laire, Miss Martie Anthony, Miss Grace Rowland, Miss Emma Gillem, Miss Grece Emmons, Miss Emma Lines, Miss Emma Backer, Miss Bemeen, Miss Minnie Wyman.

Miss Randall had charge of the supper and gave personal supervision to it, while Mrs. VanDyke attended to the serving of the ice cream, assisted by some of the young women whose names are mentioned. The serving of lemonade was in charge of Mrs. E. E. Anthony, while the other work was divided equally among those who are included in the list of names.

To Change Their Location.

The members of the Young Women's Club have decided to change their quarters and on April 1st they will occupy two rooms in a portion of the double house on West Front street opposite Washington avenue. The club is in a very flourishing condition and every Monday evening a large number of the members attend the events arranged. On Monday evening, March 27th, Miss Grace Dodge, of New York, will come to the club and have a social talk with the girls. Other interesting features are being arranged by the members to make the club one of the most successful in existence.

LOUIS E. HOWARD DIED UNEXPECTEDLY.

He Was the Originator of Club Cars on the Central.

WELL KNOWN IN THIS CITY.

WAS IN ILL HEALTH, BUT ILLNESS NOT THOUGHT SERIOUS.

He Was Born in Brooklyn, But Had Lived in This City for Fifteen Years—First Club Car Was Named After Him—During His Business Career He Made and Lost Several Fortunes.

At 1:45 o'clock this morning occurred the death of Louis E. Howard, of 312 LaGrande avenue, a well known Plainfielder. His death was sudden, for although he had been in poor health for several months, it was not thought that he was dangerously ill until yesterday. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

The deceased was born in Brooklyn, and would have been fifty-two years of age the 25th of this month. Fifteen years ago he moved to this city and lived on East Ninth street, then on Sandford avenue, and for the past year or so at 312 LaGrande avenue.

Mr. Howard was a popular man. He became a commuter, and during his business career has made and lost several fortunes. It was through his efforts that the club cars were introduced here. The first one was built ten years ago and placed on the road and named the "Howard" in his honor. The Central Railroad Company has since changed the name to the "Netherwood."

The deceased was a member of Grace P. E. church, and belonged to Jerusiem Lodge, Chapter 26, F. and A. M.; Anchor Lodge No. 149, F. and A. M., and Trinity Commandery No. 17, K. T. He was a sportsman and usually spent his summers in the Catskills, where, two years ago, he had a narrow escape from death in a burning hunter's shanty.

A widow and four children survive him, Mrs. G. Harry Squires, Miss Lelia Howard, E. C. and Frank Howard. Last October Mr. Howard was compelled to give up active business on account of his health, and had been an invalid ever since. Yesterday his trouble took a sudden turn for the worse, and shortly after midnight he died.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed, but the services will be held Tuesday morning. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

FELL THIRTY-FIVE FEET.

Westfield Carpenter Lost His Balance and Was Badly Injured.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, March 18—James P. English, ex-chief of the Westfield Fire Department, met with a serious accident early yesterday. The "Chief," as he is known to all Westfielders, is employed as foreman of the carpenter shop of S. D. Winters, contractor and builder, and was directing a gang of men yesterday morning, who were working on the new residence of Rev. George A. Francis, at Broad and Somerset streets. He was standing on the roof of the house, about thirty-five feet above the sidewalk, when he lost his balance and fell, striking the piazza roof and then bounding to the sidewalk. He was picked up and carried to his home on First street. Doctors were called in, but it could not be learned how badly he was injured. It is thought, however, that he is seriously injured internally.

Joel Manning's Horse Got Fractious This Morning.

A young horse belonging to Joel Manning, of South Plainfield, and tied under James Dunn's sheds, on Park avenue this morning, undertook to run away. Backing out from under the shed, the horse turned around and started towards the street. At the end of the alley one of phaeton's wheels struck a post and hung there, while the carriage, with only three wheels, went on.

James Babbitt caught the horse before he had gone half a block, and he was unhitched from the phaeton and led back. Mr. Manning was not around at the time, having left his horse to do some shopping.

Surprise at Glenside Park.

Mrs. Molloy, of Glenside Park, arranged and gave a very pleasant surprise party to her daughter, Miss Anna Molloy, last evening. There were about fifty guests present from Newark, New York, Jersey City, Scotch Plains and Plainfield. There were about eighteen persons from this city who went by one of Conover's stages. Frazee furnished the music.

MRS. J. H. ACKERMAN IN THE WINDSOR FIRE

She Was a Guest There and Just Escaped With Her Life.

MRS. RUSHMORE WITH HER.

Were Watching the St. Patrick's Day Parade From Their Apartments on Second Floor of the House When the Alarm Came—Had Not a Moment to Save—Now Stopping at the Holland House.

(Special to The Daily Press)

New York, March 18—Among the inmates of the Windsor Hotel, the destruction of which by fire yesterday afternoon involved such a terrible loss of life and property, were Mrs. J. Harvey Ackerman, of West Seventh street, Plainfield, and her daughter, Miss Lydia P. Ackerman. At the time of the fire Mrs. Robert Rushmore, of West Eighth streets, Plainfield, was visiting her mother, Mrs. Ackerman, at the hotel. All three escaped without injury but only in the nick of time, leaving behind everything except the clothing on their backs.

Mrs. Ackerman and her daughter occupied apartments on the parlor floor, the first above the street, in the Windsor. Mrs. Rushmore was with them and they were looking out of one of the windows of their parlor on the Fifth avenue side watching the St. Patrick's Day parade that was passing.

Suddenly the procession broke ranks and shouts of "fire" filled the air. Then they realized that the building they were occupying was on fire. Without even stopping to don hats or wraps they went into the corridor which was already filled with smoke. The flames were rapidly approaching. They hurried to the stairway and made their way down it and through the lobby with its excited occupants into the street. They took refuge in a house opposite for a short time until they were able to obtain a conveyance to take them to the Holland House where they are now staying.

Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. Ackerman's son, was summoned from his New York office by telegraph and came at once. The other members of the family were then notified that Mrs. Ackerman and her daughters had escaped from the Windsor without injury.

The trunks of Mrs. and Miss Ackerman were at the fated hotel and were destroyed with all their contents. Nothing was saved. Mrs. Rushmore went to Plainfield today. Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman will remain in New York until next week when they expect to return to their Plainfield home.

Among those who were burned was Mrs. John VanValkenberg Waldo, who is known to several Plainfielders. She spent a portion of last summer and spring at the "Chestnuts" on Seventh street. She was stopping at the Windsor for a time. She was quite badly burned about the body and was rescued and taken to Roosevelt Hospital, where it is believed that she will recover.

Among the witnesses of the breaking out of the fire was Pat, the gardener in the employ of James E. Martine, of Cedar Brook Farm. He was in the Hibernian's parade and was just passing along Fifth avenue in the neighborhood of the hotel when the flames burst out. He saw a woman jump from the fourth story and land on the sidewalk, crushed beyond recognition by the force of the fall.

Asa Collier, of East Sixth street, was in New York at the time of the fire and went to the scene. E. Maxwell Honeyman, of Grove street, passed by when the conflagration was at its height. There were a number of other Plainfielders who witnessed the fire from the sidewalk and from passing cars and L trains.

Millinery Opening at Crosby & Hill's.

Today the annual spring millinery opening at Crosby & Hill's commenced and notwithstanding the weather the department was visited by hundreds of Plainfield ladies. Never in the history of the store have they displayed such beautiful hats as they are now showing and every one was more than pleased with the fine taste that has been displayed by Miss Daly in the selection and blending of the many new and beautiful shades.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

The "Penny Habit."

A student of children has designated another peril of childhood as the "penny habit," the constant giving of small sums wherewith to purchase "sweets" and nuts. This indulgence exceeds folly and becomes a crime, so injurious are its effects upon health, disposition and character. The true value of money is better impressed by the English method of allowance, but under very different conditions from that granted in America, says a recent writer. Each child of the household is given a certain fixed sum every week to supply the trifling luxuries coveted aside from those on the family table. Whatever it may be, whether threepence, sixpence or a shilling, it is not increased or replaced when spent until the time expires. In this country, as a rule, the allowance is promptly spent at the beginning of the week, the middle and end generously cared for by after contributions, prompted by the distressing poverty of the little pocket book and the winsome pleadings of the owner. That this course is all wrong needs no argument other than actual experience with the half-sick, cross, exacting child who is its victim. Foreigners attribute the lack of respect and love shown to parents by children of America as the natural sequence of over-indulgence. Recognizing this as a just conclusion to be not only deplored but remedied, a reform is asserting itself which is speedily to be apparent in results. At home, school and during vacation days mother love awakens to its responsibility, and, strengthened by courage and firm resolve to meet it, will work wonders in the juvenile world.—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Queen in Her Own Right.

There is such an outcry on both sides of the Atlantic on the subject of international marriages, especially when one party to the alliance is a member of the British peerage and the other a member of the moneyed aristocracy of America, that a few statistics will not be uninteresting.

At the end of 1896 there were nine peers with American wives. As there are three American dowager peeresses, the total number of brides taken across the Atlantic by English peers since 1860 is twelve. It is curious, too, that there is not a single Irish peer on the list, and only one Scotch, a viscount.

Of the wives of the eldest sons of peers, five are American. There are also five of our kinswomen who hold the courtesy title of lady, nineteen with the courtesy title of honorable, fifteen who hold the title of lady as wives of baronets, nine as wives of knights. So in round numbers, since 1860, about seventy titled Englishmen have married Americans.

This number is likely to increase much more rapidly during the next decade, because, with the continued fall in the value of their landed estates, many English peers are growing more and more impoverished, while the ranks of moneyed Americans are steadily increasing. And the American girl seems incapable of learning, either by precept or example, that she is a queen in her own country, whereas in a foreign home she will find not only a queen over her, but something like twelve thousand titled dames who will look down upon her and possibly snub her.—Puritan.

Beauty of Small Courtesies.

We are all born but once. Most of us marry but once. We certainly can die but once. And if we look at life "as a small bundle of great things," we shall certainly not think it worth while to practice small courtesies. But if we regard it, far more truly, as "a big bundle of small things, we shall as certainly feel that few things in life are better worth doing. It may never be in our power to save anybody's life, make for anybody a fortune, shed lustre upon the family name, die for our country, or set the smallest river on fire in any way whatever. But if we conscientiously and sweetly give ourselves to the practicing of small courtesies, only the recording angel can ever set down the good we shall do in our day and generation to hundreds and thousands of our fellow creatures in the course of a lifetime.

Most people despise them as not worth doing. Few people perform them with any degree of consistency or loving kindness. Fewer still are content to do them in the best way, unnoticed, unremembered, really feeling it to be emphatically a virtue that is its own reward. Yet it is a wonder that preachers do not urge it upon their congregations from a thousand pulpits—on off-Sundays, say, when they are not pitching into the Pope, if they be Protestants or into the Protestants if they be Roman Catholics, and have time for the marrow of all creeds, and can be content to let the bones take care of themselves.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Hardy Table Plants.

The Mexican palm grass is a thrifty plant for a centerpiece for the dining table. It is a hardy grower and is especially effective. A Primrose is also pretty, and it may be preserved by placing it for several hours every day in the window, where the sun can reach it. A fern should be kept in a north room. In selecting a plant for decoration at this season, when it is possible to find one that has been grown out of doors, it will be found to be more hardy, and consequently the blossom will last longer.—New York Tribune.

Slate-Pencils.

Slate-pencils undergo a number of processes before they are ready for use, explains the Philadelphia Times, and in making them nearly all of the manual labor is done by boys.

First, broken pieces of slate are put into a mortar run by steam, and are crushed to a powder, which is then bolted in a machine such as is used in flouring mills. A fine slate flour results, which is thoroughly mixed in a large tub with steatite flour and other materials, the whole making a stiff dough. The dough is kneaded by being passed between iron rollers a number of times, and is then taken to a table, where it is made into short cylinders four or five inches in thickness, and containing from eight to ten pounds of material each.

Four of these cylinders are placed in a strong iron retort, which has a changeable nozzle, so that the size of the pencils may be regulated. In the retort the material is subjected to great hydraulic pressure, and is thus pushed through the nozzle in the shape of a long cord. As the cord comes through the nozzle, it passes over a knife, and is cut into the desired lengths. The lengths are laid on boards to dry, and are then placed on sheets of corrugated zinc, the corrugation preventing the pencils from warping during the baking process. The baking is done in a kiln, into which superheated steam is introduced through pipes.

The pencils go from the kiln to the finishing and packing room, where the ends are held for an instant under a rapidly revolving emery wheel, which neatly points them.

Finally they are packed in pasteboard boxes, one hundred pencils in each box, then one hundred of the pasteboard boxes are packed in a wooden box, and they are ready for shipment.

Slavery Among Ants.

The ant has long been held up to mankind as a model of industry. Along with the story of Washington's hatchet and the busy, busy bee, the ant and its zeal for work have formed the chief bugaboos of the American schoolboy. Now, along comes the scientist and proves that the ant, at least one species of the tribe, is about the laziest, the most ruffianly and the most dishonest thing in the animal kingdom.

This particular species is known as the red forest ant. These delightful creatures are regular slavers. The worst Arab that ever swooped down on an African settlement for a slave raid could get valuable pointers from the red forest ant. A drove of the red ants marshaled by the stoutest of the species, marches down on a colony of black ants, real workers. After a fierce battle, in which the black ants are always worsted, and driven to flight, the invaders take possession of the eggs they find in the quarters of their victims. These eggs the thieves carry off to their own quarters. Here the eggs are turned over to slaves that have been procured in previous raids. It is the duty of these slaves to nurture and raise the young ants that come out of them. This accomplished, and the young blacks having attained the proper working age, the slaves are forced to forage for food for their red masters, to look after things about the quarters, and to do the work of slaves generally. They are even compelled to chew the food for their masters.—New York Journal.

To Drive a Needle Through a Cent.

"An apparent mechanical impossibility may be accomplished by simple means, using a copper cent and a cork, with a common cambric needle, as accessories," writes magician Harry Kellar, in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Announce that you will drive a small needle through a coin, and few will be ready to accept your statement, yet it is very simple, and any one can do it. Take a copper coin, place it upon two small blocks of wood, leaving a very narrow open space between the blocks. Now, having selected a good sound cork, force the needle through it until the point just appears at the other end. Break off the portion of the head of the needle showing above the top of the cork. Place the cork upon the coin and strike it a fair, smart blow with a hammer. The needle will be driven entirely through the penny by a single blow.

ROYALTY LABORS.

PRINCESS LOUISE ADDS TO HER INCOME BY HER CHISEL.

People Desirous of Obtaining Favorable Notice from Queen Victoria Will Understand the Secret to Gaining Her Approbation.

Sculpture is a favorite art among those royal and imperial ladies of the Old World who are most distinguished for the exuberance of their temperament, the independence of their character and the strength of their mind.

The young Princess of Naples has already distinguished herself as a sculptor. One of her works is a statue of her ancestor, the Vladilla Danilo of Montenegro.

Princess Louise, fourth daughter of Queen Victoria, adds to her annual income by her chisel. She is far from rich, her husband, the Marquis of Lorne, being actually compelled to work as one of the junior partners in a third-class firm of house decorators in Chelsea, London. The Princess always has her hands full of orders for statues and busts of her mother, the Queen, from people desirous of social and titular distinction.

It has been found by persons of this class that the best way to attract the favorable notice of the sovereign is to present a statue of Her Majesty to some town or city, and when in addition to this the statue thus presented has been executed at a more than ordinarily large cost by her daughter Louise, of course the Queen is especially appreciative of the compliment paid. Thus some time ago Proprietor Borthwick, of the London Morning Post, who was member of Parliament for the Kensington district of the metropolis, announced his decision to present to his constituency a statue of the Queen to be erected in the chief square of the district. He placed the order for the statue with Princess Louise, and gave her a check for $20,000 for the work. The result was that the Queen herself presided at the unveiling of the statue, and before a year had elapsed the sagacious proprietor of the Morning Post had been elevated to a peerage under the name and title of Lord Glenesk.

One of the Queen's grandnieces, Countess Gleichen, whose father was Prince Victor Hohenlohe, earns her living by her chisel, which renders her independent of the relatively small allowance which the Queen has placed at her mother's disposal.

Another royal lady who is renowned from one end of Europe to the other for her skill with mallet and chisel is the widowed Empress Frederick of Germany, eldest daughter of Queen Victoria. Some of the best busts and medallions of her lamented husband have come from her studio.

An imperial lady who runs her very close in this respect is the widowed Archduchess Marie Therese of Austria.

HOW WORTH WORKED.

And the Long Waiting Women Would Endure to be Well Gowned.

On days on which there were to be Court dinners or other functions Parisian ladies who had ordered gowns for them came to Worth, the well-known dressmaker, to be dressed. First come, first served; but there was a waiting room with choice refreshments—a very necessary arrangement—for a fair customer might have to wait seven or eight hours. When her turn came she entered the consulting-room. Worth stood there, armed with a pair of scissors. Two women stood beside him. They undressed the lady behind a screen—for her petticoats were to the skirt of the gown what the skeleton is to the flesh. When her toilet so far was complete the new gown was donned, and she emerged from behind the screen to be passed in review by Worth. He was particular about the cut and plastic points. He criticised aloud, worked here and there with the scissors and pins. The women acting under his orders also pinned and plied their needles. Glasses of wine were administered when nerves had run down from long waiting.

A Considerate Dog.

A neat dog story, which was related by a gentleman the other day, can be verified. He was riding upon the rear of a trolley car when the car passed over a nice, light, soft hat, which had blown between the tracks. The hat was not injured, but the wind gave it a little flirt after the car had passed and dropped it fairly upon one of the rails. A big New York car was coming and ahead of it a big mongrel pointer dog was trotting along.

The dog glanced at the hat, looked at the car, and then picking up the hat in his teeth ran over to the curb and deposited it upon the sidewalk near a group of pavers who were working alongside of the court house. After putting the hat in a safe place the dog loped after the big car and took his place in front of it.—Newark Call.

Turned Black and Died.

The strange part of the case and the feature which proved so interesting to the physicians consulted was that about three months before he died the boy began to turn black. The nigrescence continued, and at the time of his death he was as dark as, or darker than most negroes.—Hartford Courant.

What One Girl Can Do.

A Kansas girl of seventeen won a prize in an unusual contest. She was matched against two most expert blacksmiths in the city, and, to their dismay, turned out a perfect horseshoe in less than four minutes.—Tid-Bits.

Der hochbetagte Porträtmaler Jährig, ein Schüler Ludwig Richters, wurde von einem Fuhrwerk überfahren und getödtet. — Wegen schwerer Beleidigung der Professoren der hiesigen königlichen thierärztlichen Hochschule wurde die Baronesse Selma v. Sternfeldt zu 600 Mark Strafe verurtheilt. Die Thierfreundin hatte in öffentlichen Blättern einen Aufruf gegen die Vivisektion erlassen und dabei die Behauptung aufgestellt, in der hiesigen thierärztlichen Hochschule betäube man die zum Zwecke schnellen Tödtens eingebrachten Hunde u. s. w. nur, um die Thiere später zur Vivisektion zu verwenden. Die Beweisaufnahme ergab die völlige Grundlosigkeit dieser Beschuldigung.

Eisenberg. Der 18jährige entlassene Sträfling Bertram verübte bei Schloß Moritzburg einen Raubmord gegen einen alten Besenbinder. Der Thäter ist verhaftet.

Plauen. Der Oberpostassistent Gnädig ist wegen Unterschlagung im Amte zu zwei Jahren Gefängniß verurtheilt worden.

Zittau. Das Cistercienserinnenkloster St. Marienthal ist als Besitzer der Herrschaft Tischnowitz in Mähren bei der österreichischen Regierung um die Bewilligung eingeschritten, die ehemaligen Klostergebäude in Tischnowitz-Werkloster wieder in ein Kloster umwandeln und beziehen zu dürfen.

Zwickau. Der Sozialdemokrat Landgraf in Burgstädt war in den Schulausschuß des Stadtverordneten-Kollegiums gewählt worden. Nachdem Landgraf schon einer Sitzung des Schulausschusses beigewohnt hatte, wurde seine Wahl in den Schulausschuß von der königlichen Schulinspektion mit der Begründung aufgehoben, daß ein offenkundiger sozialdemokratischer Führer nicht Mitglied des Schulausschusses sein könne.

Thüringische Staaten.

Oldisleben. Von ruchlosen Mörderhänden wurde hier zur Nachtzeit eine ganze Familie hingerichtet, nämlich der Landwirth Friedrich Müller der Dritte, seine Ehefrau und deren beide Kinder, ein Töchterchen von vier Jahren und ein Knabe von acht Monaten. Die ganze Familie wurde von einem oder mehreren Scheusalen, die durch Eindrücken der Fensterscheiben eingestiegen waren, im Schlafzimmer überfallen und durch Beilhiebe getödtet. Von den Mördern fehlt bis jetzt jede Spur; entwendet wurden 500 bis 600 Mark in Baar und in Werthpapieren. Anzunehmen ist jedoch, daß die Thäter Lokalkenntniß besaßen.

Freie Städte.

Hamburg. Um die Errettung der „Bulgaria" aus schwerer Gefahr durch einen Wohlthätigkeitsakt würdig zu feiern, hat die Hamburg-Amerikanische Schifffahrtsgesellschaft mehreren hiesigen Wohlthätigkeitsanstalten 20,000 Mark überwiesen.—Hier ist eine Frau Sauneck, welche die „Engelmacherei" professionell betreibt, gefänglich eingezogen worden. Bei der in ihrem Hause vorgenommenen Haussuchung wurden nicht weniger als 50 Leichen von kleinen Kindern aufgefunden.

Bremen. Die Bremer Bark „Johann Friedrich," der Rhederei v. Siedenburg u. Wendt gehörend, ist bei den Azoren gesunken. Ein Boot mit acht Mann der Besatzung wurde durch den Dampfer „Kasbek" gerettet; vermißt werden Kapitän Lamke und neun Matrosen.

Lübeck. Dem Staate Lübeck wurde nach einem über 200 Jahre alten Prozesse das Hoheitsrecht über den Dassower See zuerkannt. Da nun nachgewiesen worden ist, daß der See während des Prozesses ganze Landgebiete an sich gerissen hat, und die Anwohner dafür halten, daß das Hoheitsrecht sich nur auf die eigentliche Tiefe des Sees, nicht jedoch auf das Ueberschwemmungsgebiet erstrecke, so haben die mecklenburgischen Regierungen wider die Entscheidung nachgesucht.

Oldenburg.

Tossens. In Pücke ist die Frau des Gastwirths Stümpeley im Gastzimmer erschossen aufgefunden worden. Die Kugel war in die Schläfe gedrungen. Der Ehemann wurde gefänglich eingezogen.

CHAPTER III.

Three days later, just at sundown, the loungers at Sancho's were treated to a sensation. Up from the south, the old Tucson trail, came, dusty, travel stained and weary, half a troop of cavalry, escorting apparently some personage of distinction, for he was an object of the utmost care and attention on the part of the lieutenant commanding and every man in the detachment. As the cavalcade approached the dun colored walls of the corral and without a word or sign to the knot of curious spectators gathered at the barroom door filed away to the spot where wandering commands of horse were accustomed to bivouac for the night (tents would have been superfluous in that dry, dewless atmosphere) the women, whispering together behind their screened window place, stared the harder at sight of the leaders. One was Lieutenant Blake—no mistaking him—the longest legged man in Arizona. Another was big Sergeant Feeney, a veteran who had seen better days and duties, but served his flag in the deserts of the Gila as sturdily as ever he fought along the Shenandoah three years before.

Between these two, dapper, slender, natty, with his hat set jauntily on one side and his mustache and imperial twirled to the proportions of toothpicks, rode a third cavalier whom every one recognized instantly as the fugitive of Camp Cooke, the urgently sought Captain Nevins, and, though Nevins' arms and legs were untrammeled by shackles of any kind, it was plain to see that he was a helpless prisoner. He had parted with his belt and revolver. His spurs were ravished from his heels, and his bridle rein, cut in two, was shared between Blake and his faithful sergeant.

Behind these three rode another set. Sandwiched between two troopers was a man whom Sancho's people well remembered as Nevins' clerk and assistant, despite the fact that a bushy beard now covered the face that was smooth shaved in the halcyon days of the supply camp. Then came some 30 horsemen in long, straggling column of twos, while straight from the flank to the gate of the corral, silent and even somber, rode the engineer, Lieutenant Loring. To him Sancho whipped off his silver laced sombrero and bowed, while two jaded looking vaqueros, after one long yet furtive stare, glanced quickly at each other and sidled away to the nearest aperture in the wall of the ranch, which happened to be the dining room door.

Loring mechanically touched his hat brim in recognition of the ranchkeeper's obeisance, but there was no liking in his eye. At the gate he slowly, somewhat stiffly, dismounted, for it was evident he had ridden long and far. The roan with hanging head tripped eagerly yet wearily to his accustomed stall, and a swarthy Mexican unloosed at once the cincha and removed the horsehair bridle. Thus Sancho and the engineer were left by themselves, though inquisitive ranch folk sauntered to the gateway and peered after them into the corral. Over at the little clump of willows Blake's men were throwing their carbines across their shoulders and dismounting as they reached the old familiar spot, and Loring cast one look thither before he spoke.

"Who were the two men who followed me?" he calmly asked, and his eyes, though red rimmed and inflamed by the dust of the desert, looked straight into the dark face of the aggrieved Sancho.

"Surely I know not, senor teniente." He had dropped the "capitan" as too transparent flattery.

"Don't lie, Sancho. There's ten more dollars," and Loring tossed an eagle into the ready palm. "That's $30, and I shall want that horse again in the morning."

"Tomorrow, senor! Why, he will not be fit to go."

But to this observation Mr. Loring made no reply. Straight from Sancho's side he walked down the corral, halted behind two raugy, hard looking steeds that showed still the effects of recent severe usage, and these he studied coolly and thoroughly a few minutes, while, peering from two narrow slits in the ranch wall between the windows, two sun tanned frontiersmen as closely studied him. With these latter peeping from the shaded window was "the wife of my brother," exchanging with them comments in low, guarded tones. In the adjoining room, a bedroom, a girl of perhaps 16, slender, graceful and dark eyed, peeped in the opposite direction over toward the willows where Blake's men were now unsaddling, whence presently, with giant strides, came Blake himself, stalking over the sand.

Sancho, despite his anxious scrutiny of Loring's silent movements, saw the coming officer and prepared his countenance for smiles. But, with a face set and forbidding, Blake went sternly by, taking no notice of the proprietor, and made directly for the little group now muttering at the dining room door. The loungers, some of whom had deserted the supper table for a sight of the captives and the cavalcade, stilled right and left, as though to avoid his eyes, for into each face, most of them hangdog visages, he gazed sharply, as though in search of some one, yet never faltered in his stride. Back from her barred window shrank the young girl as the tall soldier came within a dozen paces. To one side or another, smoke inhaling and striving to look unconcerned, edged the swarthy constituents of the group, and with never a word to one of them, straight through their midst and the doorway beyond, went Blake, catching the three peepers, "the wife of my brother" and the brace of palpable cutthroats at their loopholes. So unexpected was the move that it had not even occurred to one of the creatures at the door to mutter a word of warning. So engrossed were the three in their scrutiny that Blake's entrance was unheard.

True, he had discarded boots and spurs, and his feet were incased in soft Apache moccasins. The floor, too, was earthen, but he made no effort at stealth, and in the gloom and shadow of the low roofed room it was for a moment difficult to distinguish the human figures against the opposite wall. It was his ear that first gave warning, for low, yet distinct, he heard the words:

"If he'd taken any horse but that roan, or knew less about riding, we'd 'a' caught him 20 miles out, and he'd never 'a' caught Nevins. Dash dash the whole dashed blue bellied outfit and be dash dash dashed to their quadruple dashed souls!" and the concentrated spite and hatred of the speaker hissed in every syllable.

"'Tain't a question of what we could not do. What can we do? He's got the money, and plenty of it, cached somewhere about the old camp, and $500 of it's mine. That's what I want. I don't care a d—n what they do with him so long as they don't send him to prison, where we can't nail him. That's what that bloody court will do, though, and I know it."

"How d'you know," fiercely demanded the other, "'niess you've been in the army, which you swear you haven't? Where'd you desert from? Come, own up now," and, turning for an instant from his peephole, the speaker became suddenly aware of the silent form of Lieutenant Blake.

"None of your dashed business!" began the other, when a harsh "Shut up!" brought him around in amaze, and he, too, confronted the dark figure standing like a signpost between them and the violet light beyond the open doorway. Instinctively the hands of both men sought their pistol butts, but Blake made never a move. The woman, looking around for the cause of the sudden silence, caught sight of the statuesque intruder and, with a low cry, threw her shawl over her head and, bending almost double, with outstretched, groping hands, scurried to where the mission made blanket hung at the doorway of the bedroom and darted through the aperture like a rabbit to its form, the folds of the heavy wool falling behind her.

And still the tall lieutenant neither spoke nor moved. His revolver hung at his right hip, his hunting knife slept in its sheath, but his hands sat jauntily on his thighs. The stern, set look of his clear cut face had given place to something like a grin of amusement. First at one, then at the other, of the two bewildered worthies he gazed, looking each deliberately from head to foot as they hovered there, both irresolute and disconcerted, one of them visibly trembling.

There was a doorway leading into the room in which was set the table for stage passengers of the better class, officers and the few ladies who had ventured to follow their lords into faraway Arizona, or the gente fine, which included amazons whose money could pay their way pretty much anywhere and was made pretty much anyhow. But that room was empty, and the one beyond it, the bar, had only one or two occupants, too far away to see what was going on.

There were a doorway and a swinging screen of dirty canvas just beyond the loophole lately occupied by "the wife of my brother," a doorway that gave on the corral, and to each of these each silent "tough" had given a quick, furtive glance, but not a step was taken. How long the strain of the situation might have lasted there is no saying. It was broken by the sudden lifting of that dirty canvas screen, as sudden and perceptible a start on the part of each of the confronted men and the quick entrance of the engineer. For another second or two no word was spoken. Loring's eyes were evidently unable at the instant to penetrate the gloom. Then he recognized Blake, then gradually the two men at the wall, and then at last Blake spoke.

"There are your followers, Loring."

A moment's careful scrutiny; then a nod of assent was Loring's answer.

"Now, then, you two," said Blake—"I've suspected you before. Now I more than suspect you. You, the long villain, I warn never to come nosing about our camp again, and you, the shorter, I'll trouble to come into camp forthwith. No, don't draw that pistol unless you want a dozen bullets through Loring's fist had landed full on Higgins' jowl and sent him like a log to the floor.

you. Half a troop is right here at my back. Your soldier name was Higgins, and you're a deserter from Cram's battery, New Orleans."

For a moment there was a silence broken only by the hard breathing of the two cornered men; then came a flash, a sharp report, a piercing scream as the lithe Mexican girl sprang forth from behind the blanket and hurled herself on Blake, a pantherlike leap of the accused man under cover of the flash and smoke, a thwack like the sound of the bat when it meets a new baseball full in the middle, and Loring's fist had landed full on Higgins' jowl and sent him like a log to the floor.

THE TRICK DIDN'T WORK.

The Child Was Willing to Accept It but the Mother Objected.

A well-meaninfg young woman was covered with confusion.

She read of the pretty trick that a gentleman acquaintance of mine loves to practice upon poor children—that of taking a penny out of the child's hair and presenting it to the amazed youngster—and she thought she was an excellent opportunity.

A shabby dressed, shoeless girl sat next to her, holding the hand of her mother, who was even shabbier and dirtier than the child.

The lady took a nickel from her pocketbook, "palmed" it, and then said, as she seized one of the little girl's straggling locks,—

"Mercy on me! What have you got in your hair?"

"Nothing de mat wid her hair!" hissed the matron. She was an Italian, and her eyes blazed with anger. "Her hair all righta. I comba dis morn. You minda your own biz!"

The philanthropist paled.

"You don't understand me, madam," she gasped. "It was a trick of mine—"

"No wanta any tricka!"

The child reached for the nickel, but the mother pushed it away.

"No beggar!" she said, as her eyes glowed with rage. "My man he maka dolla day. She gotta good clothes for Sunday. You go away!"

And away my friend went accordingly.

LI HUNG'S KINDNESS.

HIS INTEREST IN ONE OF HIS OWN COUNTRY WOMEN.

Appoints Her as a Representative to the Woman's Congress, to be Held in London in 1898, After Having Become Acquainted With Her Story.

Some time ago a Chinese Christian girl named Marguerite Wang came to America with the intention of obtaining an education. She remained here a year and was just about to enter a woman's college when she received word that here father had betrothed her to a man whom she had never seen. Under the consular regulations she was forced to return to her home, foregoing her education, to marry this man. Miss Hartford, one of the principal workers in the Foo-Chow Mission, who was here on a visit, accompanied her on her return.

On the same ship with them was Li Hung Chang and his suite. The Viceroy noticed the Chinese girl and sent his secretary, Lord Li, to inquire about her. A day or two later he sent word that he would like to talk with Marguerite and Miss Hartford. They went to see him and told him the story of the girl's attempt to obtain an education. The Viceroy was much pleased with his countrywoman and seemed to take a great interest in her. He told her and Miss Hartford about the Woman's Congress which is to be held in London in 1898 and said that he wanted the women of China represented at the congress.

After a little talk he told Marguerite that he would appoint her to represent China and its women at the congress. He then asked Miss Hartford if she did not know of some other woman in China that was qualified to be a delegate to the congress. Miss Hartford at once recommended to him Dr. Hu King Eng, the first Chinese woman to study medicine. Some years ago she left China to come to America, and after a course in the woman's medical school at Philadelphia she received her degree. She then returned to China and became one of the most valuable members of the Foo-Chow Mission, where she now is. Li Hung Chang was much interested in the story and after a few questions said that she should be appointed as the second woman to attend the congress. So China will be represented at the Woman's Congress and by two Christian women. After the Viceroy's arrival in China he made the appointments in a formal manner.—New York Tribune.

INDIAN DIVORCES.

The Reservation Indians Throw Off the Galling Bonds at Will.

With most of the plains Indian marriage consists simply of picking out the maiden, leading her to a cabin or wigwam, and installing her as mistress of the house and cornfield, sometimes with the necessary preliminary of paying the father a pony or two or an installment of blankets, and occasionally with some slight ceremony performed by a chief or medicine man. And when the brave grows tired of his partner he can get rid of her as easily as he won her.

The people who are now flocking to the Dakotas or Oklahoma to get divorces would be supremely happy if they could throw off the galling bonds of wedlock as easily as does the reservation Indian. The fact having been formally announced by the head man of the clan, the divorce takes place when the tribe is gathered at a dance. When all are assembled and the circle formed, the discontented warrior strikes a drum held by the revellers, gives away a few presents (oftimes making a present to the squaw he intends to take next) and then in a short bombastic speech he stigmatizes his wife by giving her over to the tender mercies of other braves, while they look upon him enviously and consider that he has performed an act of bravery in his desertion.

Often as many as half a dozen divorces are thus obtained at a single dance. No tedious waiting; no courts, no lawyers and no trouble about alimony or the custody of children. And the squaws thus cast off, as a general thing, seem to take it as a matter of course, and before the close of the dance are using the wiles known and used by women the world over in an effort to repair as speedily as possible the break in their hearts and matrimonial experience.

With the taking of land in severalty and putting on of citizenship, however, the Indian finds that he has cemented the ties that were so loose before, for the courts everywhere are deciding that the tribal marriages are legal and binding upon the Indian who becomes a citizen. And if the weight of one legal marriage wears somewhat heavily upon a white man, how must it be with the red man, who has contracted two, three, four, or even more alliances which the court now declares legal, and at the same time takes away his former avenue of relief?—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

LAST OF MAYOR WILSON

MR. SMALLEY WILL ASSUME HIS OFFICE NEXT MONDAY.

The Old Mayor Visited the Borough Office This Morning for the Last Time in His Official Capacity.

John F. Wilson, of the borough, is practically now a former Mayor of that municipality. He visited the Mayor's office this morning as usual for the last time in his official capacity, and interviewed those who called on him. There were not a few regrets expressed that he is to retire, but all wished him many years of happiness and success in the retired life he will live.

Monday morning it will be Mayor Smalley, who is to serve the borough as such for two years. He has the best wishes of his friends in his position and all trust that at the end of his term it can be said that he served well and faithfully, advancing the best interests of the borough.

LUNCH BOX SOCIABLE.

Pleasant Affair Arranged by Women's Relief Corps.

The members of the Women's Relief Corps, No. 10, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., together with their friends, enjoyed a lunch box sociable with an entertainment last evening, in their rooms. The attendance was good and an evening of pleasure for all resulted. There were many visitors present including Department President Mrs. Cauley, of Paterson, accompanied by several members of her staff. Mrs. Atwood, of Trenton, was also present, and Mrs. Angleman, of Bayonne.

During the evening several recitations were given by Mrs. Andrew Cox, and Miss Jennie Smith rendered several piano solos. A very pleasant feature was the addresses given by members of the G. A. R. who were present.

This is a Fish Story.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Hopatcong, N. J., March 18—Perch and black bass are so plentiful in the lake here that men are actually catching them simply by digging their hands into the water and lifting the finny fellows out. Of course, the sportsman who fishes for the pleasure of doing so, uses a rod and line. Ex Mayor Wurster, of Brooklyn, recently caught a black bass weighing eight pounds.

POLITICIANS AT SEA.

SUMMIT LEADERS ARE PUZZLED OVER THEIR NEW CITY.

Do Not Know Whether the City Will be Divided Into Four Wards or Less—List of Candidates for the New Offices.

Summit, March 18—The politicians of Summit are in something of a fog owing to the uncertainty as to whether the new city will be divided into four wards or a less number, and whether or not the Board of Education will be appointed by the Common Council. These questions will be settled by the enactment or rejection of legislation now pending at Trenton. In the absence of such settlement nominations for only the principal offices can be settled upon in advance.

George Wilcox will probably receive the Republican nomination for Mayor. Stephen R Mullin's name has been mentioned, but he told a reporter that he would not run for Mayor, but was a candidate for re-election as Collector of Taxes.

Parker W. Page will receive the Democratic nomination for Mayor, and Alexander A. Taylor will be nominated by the Democrats for Councilman at-Large. Freeholder William H. Swain will be re-nominated by the Democrats, and Frank E. Phraner will endeavor to secure the Republican nomination for the place.

There are several candidates for the nomination for City Clerk on the Democratic ticket. Among them are Robert J. Muldowney, Timothy J. Scott, Charles W. Swain and John V. Murphy.

The Republican candidate will be David C Day. Michael McGrath is a candidate for Overseer of the Poor at the Democratic primary, and Morris Spinning will be re-nominated by the Republicans.

UNEXPECTED VISITORS.

A birthday surprise was given to John P Wolfe, of Rose Hill, last evening. Neither Mrs. Wolfe or his wife had any idea of the event and about 9 o'clock a large crowd of people appeared and took possession of the home. The evening was passed in a social manner, and a feature was a checker contest wherein Wm. Smith won the championship. Among those present were: Miss May Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George Whitlock, Miss Ella DeCamp, Miss Eva DeCamp, of Plainfield; Mrs. Elizabeth Apgar, of Dunellen; Mrs. George Savety and son, of Clinton avenue; Mr and Mrs. W. N. Pangborn, son and daughter, of the borough; Mr and Mrs. Wm. Smith and W. C. Wolfe, of Washingtonville.

WILL RUN SUNDAY TRAINS.

D. L. & W. Railroad Promises Relief to Suburban Residents.

The Delaware Lackawanna and Western Railroad will tomorrow begin running Sunday trains on the Morris and Essex division and additional local trains on the main line. Superintendent Reasoner, in his office in Hoboken, said yesterday that the management proposed to give a suburban Sunday service surpassed by no other road.

There will be about twenty trains each way over the Morris and Essex division, stopping at Newark and the Oranges. The terminal points of the trains will include South Orange, Montclair, Morristown, Dover and Washington. The Washington train will be run over the Morris and Essex division. It is probable that a majority of the trains will stop at South Orange, but enough will go as far as Morristown to give excellent facilities east of that point.

Dover will have at least one train making that place its terminus, and will also have the benefit of the Washington train and the main line trains.

A Narrow Escape.

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in eight bottles. It has cured me and thank God, I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's Drug store

A "STANDARD" STRIKE

Attempt to Blackmail the Great Oil Trust.

ARCHBOLD SO TESTIFIES

Declares that the Man Who Instituted So Much Litigation Against the Company and Railroads Offered to Stop Suits if the Company Would Buy Him Out—Other Testimony.

New York, March 18.—The taking of the depositions of witnesses in the action for contempt brought against the Standard Oil Company and John D. Rockefeller, in his capacity as president of the company, for alleged failure to comply with the Ohio law ordering the dissolution of the Standard Oil Trust of the state of Ohio took place in this city yesterday.

Besides the lawyers the only other person directly concerned in the case was George D. Rice, the man who has instituted so much litigation against the Standard Oil Company and against various railroads for alleged illegal agreements with the Standard Oil Company.

In previous proceedings between the Standard Oil Company and the courts of Ohio and before the interstate commerce commission, Mr. Rice has delivered testimony with reference to the Standard Oil Company's business methods. His own business methods were the subject yesterday of sharp criticisms by J. D. Archbold, vice president of the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Archbold accused Mr. Rice of having attempted to blackmail the Standard Oil Company to the extent of five hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Archbold was frequently interrupted in the delivery of his testimony by objections from the opposing lawyers and several spirited tilts occurred between them.

Mr. Archbold began his testimony by explaining his connection with the Standard Oil Trust of Ohio and the Standard Oil Company. He stated that he was secretary of the Standard Oil Trust when it was in existence, and that he was one of the liquilating trustees of the Standard Oil Trust of Ohio when its dissolution in compliance with the Ohio law was begun.

The first question put to Mr. Archbold was asked by Mr. Elliott. Mr. Elliott said:

"Mr. Archbold, did you ever have a conversation with George D. Rice with reference to the sale of a refining plant and oil well at Marietta, O., and in reference to litigation he had instituted in the courts of Ohio against the Standard Oil Company, to the end that existing litigation be stopped and the beginning of other litigation be prevented?"

"Rice said in this interview," began Mr. Archbold, "that he had been instrumental in the institution of many actions before the interstate commerce commission against us and against railroads of the state of Ohio and against railroads in connection with our business. He said that he believed that he was in a position to have the charters of more than one of the railroads annulled. He said that he was in the oil business and that he believed that he could put oil on the market at a price which we would be compelled to meet. He said that he would do all these things if we did not buy him out. I told him that he had succeeded in making himself considerable of a nuisance, but that I did not believe he could do all he said. He assured me that he could and suggested that if we came to terms much of the litigation he had instituted could be checked and that action that might be instituted could be prevented."

"What consideration did he demand for all this?" asked Mr. Elliott.

"He wanted $500,000—$250,000 in cash and the rest to be paid in five years at $50,000 a year."

"What did he propose to do then?" Mr. Elliott asked.

"He said that he would put all of his business into our hands and run it under our direction. He said that no one need know that his business and ours were not entirely independent of each other, which would greatly increase our profits. He said that we would have to act quickly, as he was going to Washington to see about old litigation pending before the interstate commerce commission, and that while there he might make arrangements to begin some new action."

"What did you say to that?"

"I told him that $500,000 was a big sum, and that I did not believe his oil plant was worth anything like that amount. He did not dissent from my opinion, but he said that he could, through litigation, hurt us to the extent of more than one million dollars, and that it would be much better for us to pay $500,000 then. I told him that his proposition was extravagant, but that we would take it under consideration.

"I wish to state here, and with emphasis, that I never considered Rice's offer a business like proposition. I regarded it as nothing more nor less than a pure and unadulterated attempt at blackmail. He simply wanted to make us pay an outrageous price for his property, holding over our heads the threat that if we did not yield to his demands he would continue his attacks upon us."

Continuing, Mr. Archbold said that several representatives of Rice had come to him at different times since the interview and renewed Rice's propositions. One man, a Mr. Orvis, he said, brought a written authorization from Mr. Rice.

Throughout the course of his testimony Mr. Archbold made many references to Rice's methods in this and other matters. After one particularly rough criticism Mr. Elliott said, smiling and looking toward a sofa in the corner of the room where Mr. Rice was sitting:

"Mr. Rice is present, is he not?"

"Yes," said Mr. Archbold quietly, "he is over there in the corner."

Mr. Rice got up and said:

"Yes, I'm here, and you will all know it before this business is over."

"I was not speaking to you," said Mr. Elliott sharply. "I was talking to the witness. You are not on the stand."

In answer to some cross questions propounded by Mr. Monnett, Mr. Archbold said that he believed that Mr. Rice's original enmity to the Standard Oil Trust had been inspired by his failure to compete successfully with it.

"His plant at the time he began his attacks upon us was badly situated. It is all right now as to situation, but since the change Rice has been too busily engaged in his efforts to harrass us to attend to business. Pure cussedness has kept him at it. He tried first to deceive us. He has since been deceiving courts and deceiving attorney generals and making money by making a nuisance of himself. He seems to be able to make more money in that way than he does in the practice of legitimate business methods. He has, however, reached the end of his powers. He gets very few interstate commerce decisions in his favor and never collects his judgments."

"Have you anything else to say on that subject?" asked Mr. Monnett.

"No," said Mr. Archbold after a thoughtful pause. "I think I have covered the situation—and Rice."

"You are the only witness on your side who ever acknowledged that he knew anything," said Mr. Monnett.

"Oh, yes, I know a lot, and you will know a lot more than you do now before you get through here," retorted Mr. Archbold, smiling pleasantly.

"Got something up your sleeve?" ventured Mr. Monnett tentatively.

"Oh, perhaps," said Mr. Archbold.

DEATH OF PRINCESS KAIULANI.

The Heiress to the Hawaiian Throne a Victim of Rheumatism.

San Francisco, Cal., March 18.—The steamer China, from the Orient, via Honolulu, brings news of the death of Princess Kaiulani on the morning of the sixth inst. The cause of death was inflammatory rheumatism.

PRINCESS KAIULANI.

Princess Victoria Kaiulani was the daughter of A. S. Cleghorn, a gentleman of British ancestry, but long a resident of the Hawaiian Islands, and the Princess Miriam Likelike, a sister of Kalakaua, who reigned as king for seventeen years, and also of Liliuokalani, whose reign of two years was brought to a close by the action of the United States authorities on January 17, 1893. Descent by Hawaiian law is through the female line, and the princess was declared heiress to the throne in 1891. She was educated in England and was an attractive and accomplished girl. On her way from England to Hawaii in 1893 she visited Washington and other American cities, making a very favorable impression. She was in her 24th year.

PEACE TREATY SIGNED.

Action of the Queen Regent of Spain Ends the Cuban "Incident."

Madrid, March 18.—The queen regent yesterday signed the treaty of peace between Spain and the United States. The signed treaty of peace will be forwarded to the French ambassador at Washington, M. Jules Cambon, for exchange with the one signed by President McKinley.

No decree on the subject will be published in the Official Gazette.

Washington, D. C., March 18.—In the absence of any direct diplomatic communication between the United States and Spain, the secretary of state expects to receive his first formal notice of the ratification of the peace treaty by the queen regent through the medium of the French embassy here.

The next step must be taken by Spain—that is, she must name her special envoy, and notify the United States government of the probable date upon which he will present himself in this city with the exchange copy of the treaty of peace.

Troops Guarding Palmetto.

Atlanta, Ga., March 18.—While the Georgia Volunteers are holding guard over the town of Palmetto, an inquiry is going on in the hope of establishing the identity of the murderers.

Dr. H. L. Johnstone, one of the most prominent citizens of the place, and the owner of the warehouse where the shooting took place, expressed regret yesterday that such an affair had occurred in a community that had hitherto borne such a good reputation. He said:

"Where the parties came from that did the deed we cannot say. I do not believe that they came from this place, and am at a loss to know from where they came.

"The negroes here have been very aggravating in their recent conduct; in addition to what they have done for us in this town they have made open threats to burn the town of Fairburn. You will find that the people of the place, in spite of the conduct of the negroes or some of them here, are down on any such summary action on the part of citizens as was taken in this matter."

The question "Where did the lynchers come from?" was on the lips of nearly every person all day yesterday, and has not yet been answered.

A mask which was worn by one of the lynchers was picked up on the road to the south of the storehouse.

John Bigby, one of the victims, who is now dying, informed the coroner that the party came from the direction of Fairburn, the county seat of Campbell county to the north.

Sheriff J. C. Aderhold of Campbell county has expressed the belief that the party came from the south, but as Palmetto is in the extreme southern portion of the county, in that case the Whitecaps must have come from an adjoining county.

There is much significance in the quiet remark of some that they are certain that the party came from the extreme southern part of Campbell county.

TRUSTS HURT TRADE

Apprehensions of New England Wool Merchants.

FLOWER ON THE SITUATION

In Boston Wool Business is Paralyzed—The Ex-Governor of New York Dissects the Condition of Industrials—He Has a Rosy View of the Future.

Boston, Mass., March 18.—One of the wool merchants of Boston, who made a great deal of money a year or two ago, when all wool dealers were making it rapidly, said yesterday that since January 1 business in his line has been flat, but now that operations for the formation of a woolen mill trust are under contemplation, it is worse than ever.

The situation is full of confusion. The wool merchants know not what to expect. This one fears that when the combination of the woolen mills has been perfected the manufacturers will have no further use for the wool merchants, but will send their buyers directly to the wool producers, and dispense with the merchants altogether.

This will be the inevitable tendency in the development of the trust form of doing business, though it may not be done at once.

Practical difficulties abound in the way of the mills making their purchases direct of the wool growers, but they are not such as may not be overcome in time.

But, for the present, as soon as the trust gets into operation, the fear is that the merchants will be at the mercy of the trust. There will be practically but one buyer, or so few that they can control prices.

Gov. Flower on Industrials.

New York, March 18.—In an interview in the American Banker, yesterday, ex-Governor Flower speaks as follows regarding industrial shares as investment properties:

"An industrial combination is nothing but a tool of commerce for the economical production and distribution of manufactured products. People seem to think that there is something new about this method of carrying on business. As a matter of fact, it is as old as business itself, for whenever the conditions of business have permitted producers to combine for economical production, combinations have been made, and the result has almost uniformly been for the benefit of the consumer.

"If nowadays I wish to go to Chicago or San Francisco, I buy a ticket, step into a car, and need not change until I reach my destination. When I came to New York a trip to Chicago involved many tickets over many roads and many changes from train to train. That we have the present conveniences in this regard is due to railroad combinations, which have made the stocks good, popular investments by economies of management, and has given passengers cheaper as well as better transportation.

"Many of the industrial combinations are artificially contrived, unnecessary and over capitalized. I do not believe that such concerns will attract the money of the general public. I do believe that they will fall to the ground of their own weight, as moneyed men will only invest in those which show a manifest superiority in cheapness of production and distribution."

Trusts in Connecticut.

New Haven, Conn., March 18.—The growth of trusts and trade combinations, reaching into this state, has now reached a point where a very large part of the staple manufacturing industries of Connecticut have been absorbed. The rubber trust some years ago took in practically all the rubber factories of the state, and still holds them, except one or two concerns.

The recently organized International Silver Company controls probably seventy-five per cent. of the Connecticut plating business, including all the large factories except one.

The arms companies are in a "gentlemen's agreement" as to prices, particularly prices of cartridges.

The newly formed brass and copper combination of the Naugatuck valley comprises six of the largest factories of that region, and probably others, the operations of the new company having thus far been kept very secret.

If the projected bicycle trust materializes, and also an oyster combination, of which there are persistent rumors, there will be left outside of the trusts in this state only the cotton and woolen industries, some silk mills and the manufactories of "shelf" hardware besides a few relatively small independent and "special" factory industries.

New Trade Combinations.

New York, March 18.—Among the combinations heard of by Wall street are a consolidation of the canning interests in this state, intended to embrace all the concerns packing fruits and vegetables, and to be capitalized at twenty million dollars, and a combination of the chief woolen mills in the East, to be a counterpart in many respects of the American Woolen Company, the worsted mills combination, five concerns in Boston, two in Hartford and three in Philadelphia being reported as having already approved of the scheme.

The President's Vacation.

Thomasville, Ga., March 18.—President McKinley, Mrs. McKinley, Vice President Hobart, Mrs. Hobart, and Senator Hanna drove out yesterday in the morning to Melrose plantation, the country home of Mr. Mel Hanna, five miles from town, where the party was entertained at luncheon.

After a drive through the pine forests the party returned to town in the afternoon.

The president and his party will visit Jekyl Island, on the Georgia coast. They will leave here on Monday morning, spend Tuesday on the island and return to this place on the day following.

The president is enjoying his recreation thoroughly and will stay here as long as public business will permit.

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY,

Chicago. St. Louis. New York. Boston. Philadelphia. Pittsburgh. Baltimore.

An Oregon farmer, living in Tidewater, has for a long time endured a most exasperating state of things. "For three or four years," he says, "I have been much troubled with sick headache and have tried almost every kind of pill and medicine, including hot water cure. I saw an advertisement of Ripans Tabules and knowing their ingredients, thought I would try them. I must say they acted immediately and relieved my head at once. I am forty years of age, and when the attacks came on every few days in the summer I had to stop work, but the Tabules would stop the pain in about twenty minutes. I have advised others to take them."

A new style packet containing TWO RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (12 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

THE RIVAL JACKSON FEASTS.

The Silverites Will Reduce Their Fee to $1.00 a Plate.

New York, March 18.—Richard Croker and his assistants in the management of the ten dollars a plate Jeffersonian day dinner are not yet ready to make public the list of invited guests or to name any of the men selected to make speeches.

It is evident that there is some hitch in the arrangements and that few if any of the national leaders of the Democratic party will be present.

The original plan of Mr. Croker to make a love feast of his dinner where the gold and silver men of the Democratic party might meet and ignore the Chicago platform, has been abandoned. No reply has been received from W. J. Bryan in response to the telegram of Perry Belmont saying that individual opinions were not considered in sending out the invitations, but it is pretty well understood in the Democratic Club that Mr. Bryan will not attend the dinner.

If the leader of the Chicago platform Democrats dines in New York on Jeffersons birthday, he will dine with the men who are loyal to the national policy of his party, and who can serve a public dinner for one dollar a plate. He has not yet sent word to the Chicago Democrats that he would be present at their dinner.

The Croker dinner has precipitated a fight between the two elements of the party which will probably continue until the next national convention. For the present the main difference between the two wings of the party is a matter of nine dollars in the cost of a dinner, but Bryan and Jones are determined to keep up the agitation in favor of the issues of 1896, and, to the surprise of Croker and his friends, there are many Democrats in this city who are standing squarely upon the national platform.

The extent of the failure of the Croker dinner may never be known, because the committees in charge will not make public the names of those who decline invitations, but the indications are that no Democrat of national prominence will be present.

The dinner of the dollar Democrats will probably be served in the Grand Central Palace and the list of distinguished guests will be a long one. The various organizations interested in this dinner are to meet on Sunday afternoon to appoint committees to arrange details.

Mr. Croker's nice words about the one dollar dinner apparently have not had any effect upon the plans of the one dollar dinner, and the originators of this Jeffersonian feast are more determined than ever to outstrip the Tammany affair both in orators and in attendance.

"Our dinner," said E. Stillman Doubleday, secretary of the committee on invitations, for the one dollar dinner, "is a protest against elaborate spreads, the cost of which bars out the man of moderate means. Our dinner is for those who can't afford to go to expensive Croker dinners, and who are just as good believers in the Jefferson principles as Croker's followers."

John C. Sheehan, who of late has not been in the good graces of Mr. Croker, is xpected to be one of the speakers. John R. Crosby has accepted an invitation to speak, and the committee on invitations declared yesterday that John P. Altgeld would certainly be on hand if he could spare the time from the campaign for the mayoralty of Chicago.

$3,000,000 IN HAVANA.

Havana, Cuba, March 18.—The United States transport Meade, formerly the Berlin, having on board three million dollars for the payment of the Cuban troops previous to their disbandment according to the agreement arrived at between Robert P. Porter, President McKinley's representative, and General Maximo Gomez, then commander-in-chief of the Cuban army, arrived here at ten o'clock yesterday morning, escorted by the United States cruiser Chicago.

The Cuban generals have resolved, it is said, to adopt a middle course in the trouble between the assembly and General Gomez. They consider it their duty to return to their commands in order to preserve concord.

This action was unexpected, and it is asserted by those who are familiar with the plans of the generals, that the latter will use their influence with the Cuban troops to rescind the power vested by the voters in the members of the Cuban Military Assembly, thus obtaining the deposition of many of the members, and leaving the assembly so weakened as to make it inefficient.

It is claimed that the generals' influence with the troops is so great that they will have little difficulty in accomplishing this result.

Petitions from the various Havana wards, containing two thousand signatures of property owners, have been forwarded to President McKinley.

They describe Havana's needs in the matter of sewerage and pavements, from a sanitary standpoint, and ask the president to allow the city council to ratify the contracts to this end awarded under Spanish rule.

The Newark for Sampson.

Washington, D. C., March 18.—Orders have been issued by the navy department for the cruiser Newark to join Admiral Sampson's squadron of evolution.

Rear Admiral Philip, the commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, has notified the navy department that the Newark will be ready to leave the yard on Thursday next.

She will join the squadron at either Caimanera, Cuba, or Kingston, Jamaica.

The two divisions of the squadron are now on their way from Puerto Cortez, Honduras, and Cienfuegos, Cuba, to Caimanera.

The Samoan Trouble.

Washington, D. C., March 18.—Admiral Kautz has cabled the secretary of the navy from Apia, Samoa, via Auckland, N. Z., that he has arranged for a meeting of the three consuls, those of Great Britain, the United States and Germany, at an early date, to have a full and free discussion of the Samoan affairs.

The cable dispatch is dated a week ago, so that this meeting undoubtedly already has taken place, and the admiral's next report may be expected to tell the results of the conference.

WAR'S END IN SIGHT

Gen. Otis Intimates That Aguinaldo Will Sue for Peace.

REBEL FORCES CUT IN TWO

Luzon Insurgents Expected to Surrender at Any Time—The President's Commissioners Will be Ready to Treat With the Natives at the Arrival of Col. Denby—Expected Soon.

Washington, D. C., March 18.—The war department expects a surrender of the insurgent forces at Manila at any time. Colonel Denby, the third member of the Philippine Commission, is expected to arrive there to-day, and with the other members of the commission, Professor Schurman, Professor Worcester, Admiral Dewey and General Otis, an organization will be effected, and the representatives of the president will be ready to treat with the natives.

In a dispatch to the war department, which the authorities do not care to make public, General Otis says that if the campaign around Manila continues in the same satisfactory manner that has marked its progress since the advance movement was begun, matters will be in such a condition in about three weeks that the end of the insurrection may be expected. This is not a paraphrase of General Otis's language, but embraces its substance.

In the message General Otis says that he has cut the insurgent army squarely in two, has captured a great quantity of supplies and taken a large number of prisoners.

He says that the Philippine commission, consisting of Messrs. Schurman, Worcester and Denby, will meet at Manila to-day, and indicates that proposals from Aguinaldo for ending hostilities are expected to be made to it.

The reason that the text of the dispatch is not made public is that General Otis cabled that he desired the department not to give out any of his predictions about the situation. Some of his comments on conditions in the Philippines had been telegraphed back to Manila and had reached the insurgents.

The military authorities describe the dispatch about the prospect of an ending of the war in three weeks as "very pleasing," but while they believe that no harm would result from its publication, they are bound by the wish of General Otis and will not give publicity to the exact language used by him.

Gunboat Shells Binangauan.

Manila, March 18.—The insurgents have reoccupied Taytay. A gunboat towed one hundred men of the Twenty-third infantry across the lake and shelled Binangauan.

The lines are quiet, though there is some firing on the front of the Tenth Pennsylvania infantry.

General Lawton relieves General Anderson in command of the brigade of regulars. General Anderson is returning here to take command of the department. There is to be a reorganization of the two divisions, which will consist of three brigades each. General Hale has been assigned to General MacArthur's division.

General Rios has received a cable dispatch from Madrid predicting the speedy ratification of the peace treaty and also expressing Spain's desire to form an international congress to secure the release of the Spanish prisoners held by the Filipinos.

The Natives Deceptive.

Hong Kong, March 18.—The following general view of the situation is from a correspondent of the Associated Press at Manila, and has evidently not passed the censorship:

The slipperiness of the Filipinos is illustrated by the action of the commissioners who came here to offer the allegiance of the island of Negros. It is now known that they were in friendly communication with Aguinaldo while here.

The Oriental character is so deceptive that the residents of Manila are ignorant as to whether their own servants sympathize with the rebels or not. It is known that a rebel organization exists in the city, and the evidence is growing that there was a wide-spread plot to assassinate the Americans, the signal being the commencement of hostilities. The servants were instructed to kill their employers, but they were terrorized by the vengeance dealt out to offenders and they weakened. Every Tagalos would have cut his employer's throat if he dared, or at least this is a current saying.

The remarkable feature of the situation is the inability of the Americans and residents to estimate the numbers, resources and plans of the Filipinos. Prominent generals think that two or three disastrous battles will break their spirit and make them sue for peace. A majority of the English and other residents are of the opinion that the extermination of the Tagalos is the only guarantee of peace, that they can easily be whipped if they give battle, but that they will dodge a meeting with the Americans in force.

Some people think that they will risk battles at Malabon and Paranaque, where they are strongly entrenched, and that if they are defeated they will resume bushwhacking as long as any of them are left.

The Army Beef Inquiry.

Kansas City, March 18.—The army beef court of inquiry have arrived here from Omaha. The members of the court started promptly for Armour's packing plant to investigate its methods of preparing beef.

No other local firm supplied any beef, and no other plants here will be investigated. After the testimony here has been taken the court will doubtless go to Leavenworth, Kan., and take evidence, remaining in this vicinity over Sunday.

It will return to Chicago before finally going back to Washington.

A Tobacco Deal.

Detroit, Mich., March 18.—The deal by which the Banner Tobacco Company's plant and business becomes part of the American Tobacco Company has been closed.

DUN'S WEEKLY REPORT.

The Volume of Business in All Branches Is Greater Than Ever Known.

New York, March 18.—In business this year cannot be compared with any other. It can be said that payments through the principal clearing houses for the past week have been 57.4 per cent. greater than in 1892, and 45.9 per cent. greater than in 1898, but that exaggerates the gain in some branches of business, while in others it falls far short of the gain.

Thus the February exports of manufactured products have about doubled since 1892. Omitting New York clearings, where speculation in stocks is most active, payments through the other principal clearing houses for the same week show increases of 37.6 per cent. over 1892, and 27.1 per cent. over last year. But with regard to such details all realize that the volume of business in all branches is the greatest ever known.

Such performances as the rise in sugar on Thursday from $141 to $170 and its reaction to $151 within an hour have not much to do with real business, but show the inflammable state of public feeling.

Prices of sixty most active railroad stocks averaged $72.15 last week per share, and $72.22 at the close of this week, showing a fair degree of confidence in current prices, although it is proper to say that the speculation ran largely to trust stocks which advanced from $81.40 per share a week ago to $84.17 per share. The punishment of short sellers in sugar was but one of the incidents in a market naturally strong.

The national prosperity rests on more solid foundations. The export of breadstuffs, provisions, cotton and oil in February showed a decrease of $6,000,000, but other exports, mainly manufactured, were $36,406,943 in value against $31,275,396 last year, and were sufficiently large to cover more than sixty per cent. of the entire imports. The merchandise exports exceeded imports for the month $33,624,117, the gold supply increasing, and there appears no occasion for monetary disturbance. The treasury recorded its first payment of the $59,000,000 for the Central Pacific Railroad, having previously received $59,000,000 for the Union Pacific and over $6,000,000 for the Kansas Pacific.

Swiftly rising quotations for iron and its products would mislead if it were not kept in mind that more than nine-tenths of the iron manufacturing capacity is engaged, and will be until July or later, in the execution of orders taken months ago at low prices.

More than a million in cash has been received from the interior during the week, and with some flurry in call money the general demand has been fairly steady and well met.

Failures for the first two weeks of March have been $4,916,226 against $4,[illegible]6,425 last year, manufacturing $2,408,421 against $1,849,058 last year, and trading $2,202,672 against $2,172,539 last year.

Failures for the week have been 189 in the United States against 208 last year, and 30 in Canada against 27 last year.

MRS. PLACE RESIGNED.

Condemned Murderess Will Probably be Put to Death on Tuesday.

Sing Sing, N. Y., March 18.—Mrs. Martha Place, who is sentenced to die in the electric chair next week, is resigned to her fate. Her air of resignation surprises her keepers and matrons. It is probable that Mrs. Place will be removed from her present quarters to one of the cells adjoining the death chamber, set apart for condemned murderers.

It is only a few steps from these cells to the place of execution.

Warden Sage and Mrs. Sage visited Mrs. Place yesterday forenoon and spent half an hour with her. She talked in a general way about the execution and the futile efforts of her friends to save her life.

Warden Sage has received a letter from Governor Roosevelt instructing him to allow but two reporters, one for the Associated Press and one for the Sun and other non-associated Press papers, at the execution of the condemned woman.

The warden says that he will obey the governor's instructions in every particular.

The invitations had not been mailed yesterday, and the warden will not say when they will be. This delay is evidence that the execution will not take place on Monday, as three days' notice is required by law. The execution will most probably take place on Tuesday morning.

Albany, N. Y., March 18.—The governor's attention was called yesterday to the reported petition of legislators asking him to interfere in Mrs. Place's case.

He said his conclusion not to extend clemency to Mrs. Place had been arrived at in accordance with his ideas of what justice demanded, and he was not likely to make a change at the request of the politicians.

For the Honolulu Trade.

San Francisco, Cal., March 18.—The Union Iron Works have just been awarded the contract for two large freight steamers. They are for the American-Hawaiian Steam Navigation Company, with headquarters at New York, in which Dearborn & Co. and Filert & Co. are interested.

The steamers will run between New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Honolulu, with the probability of extending the route.

The first steamer is to be finished in April, 1900, and the second one at a later date. Each will have a carrying capacity of 8,500 tons. The first vessel will be 410 feet long, with 51 feet beam, and a depth of 32 feet. Her engines are to develop 2,500 horse power.

Wages of Coal Miners.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 18.—The coal miners and operators' scale committee in session here got into a deadlock yesterday.

The miners demand that the difference of price existing between thick and thin vein coals, fourteen cents a ton in favor of the thick, be wiped out. The operators refuse to consider the question.

Should both remain firm a strike will ensue. Work at the mines is rushing, having opened up earlier than at any previous period.

Until April 1st, 1899.

The Cost Is Trifling

When you consider the profitable results that may come from such publicity. Thousands of Plainfield people have tried it and found that the plan

Works and Pays Well.

Raising Standard of the Bar.

Senator Reed is one of the members of the the Legislature who is strongly in favor of the repeal of the "Dunn" act in order to raise the standard of admission to the legal profession. In discussing the bill looking to that end the Senator said that he would not criticise the ability of many young men admitted to the bar in accordance with its provissions, but the system was responsible for the fostering of many iniquities. Some enterprising individual, he said, had compiled a pamphlet which should be styled "Becoming a Lawyer Made Easy," because it contained a list of questions propounded by the Supreme Court Examiners for several years back, together with the answers to these questions. Any bright young man with the aid of this book, could readily acquire a knowledge of law that might enable him to pass a successful examination. It did not, however, make him a lawyer except in name, and either he or his clints had to suffer.

Tomorrow the people living along the Morris and Essex branch of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad will be given a train service for the first time in the history of the road on Sundays. The change is brought about through the administration of a new President. The lack of a Sunday train service has undoubtedly retarded the development of the residential districts along the Lackawanna road in the past, as many New York business men were averse to being cut off from the outside world one day in the week, and therefore selected homes in other sections where railroad advantages might be obtained. The new order of things on the Lackawanna will probably have the effect of improving residential land values in the towns depending on that road for train service.

The Philadelphia Record says that the murder of five negroes and the serious wounding of four more at Palmetto, Ga., by a masked mob are events which furnish a sad commentary on civilization in one of the oldest, most populous and prosperous of the Southern States. The negroes were suspected of the heinous crime of arson; but they were in the custody of the law and entitled to a fair trial The murders were the more atrocious because they were cowardly and sneaking. The poor creatures were unable to defend themselves, and possibly were not guilty of the crime of which they were suspected. Such occurrences blacken the reputation of the nation.

The New York Evening Post has been sued for $100,000 damages for alleged libel. This is not an unusual proceeding for a newspaper to be engaged in as defendant. But the principal interest is in the contemplation of the fact that no matter how carefully edited or how unsensational and conservative a paper may be—and The Post is a topnotcher in all these qualities—it is one of the fates of the business to be running plumb against persons who feel themselves aggrieved to a great financial extent.

The Attorney General of New Jersey reports that there is no law on the statute books now that will prevent the formation of the proposed coal trust. Now here is a chance for the Legislature to do something really creditable before they adjourn. Let them enact a law that will destroy the rights of such a coalition of capital and industry, which, if carried out, will be a crime against the public.

The complaint against a New York policeman who had bought diamonds and failed to pay for them, was summarily dismissed by a police commissioner the other day. The poor cops who owed butcher and grocery bills and were behind in payment to their creditors, were fined from one to fifteen days' pay. We may soon hear of New York policemen having their teeth filled with diamonds.

Congressman Howell, of the Third district, has shown good sense in declining to be made a hero of by his townsman because he succeeded in securing an appropriation for a Government building in New Brunswick. His service in that direction was scarcely great enough to warrant an immense dinner in his honor.

In these days of coined words aptly applied to various public men and affairs it is a wonder that some other name than "Boss" is not originated to describe political leaders—that is, the big ones. It is difficult, however, to think of one that possesses more direct force and covers the situation as quickly and thoroughly.

A very pertinent reflection of a bachelor at this season of the year is conveyed in the saying that when a woman begins to economize on the pepper and salt it is a sign that she is saving up to buy a seven-dollar pair of stockings to match the yellow flower in her new hat

Vice President Hobert intimates that he is ready to be the tail to the next National Republican kite. Perhaps Mr Hobart thinks that he will be able to make a high flight, but we presume his opponents will argue that in such a case he would undoubtedly light low.

Under the act of Congress making him a full Admiral, Dewey will receive an increase of several thousand dollars in salary. This is prosperity that everyone is glad to hear about.

The fact that the price to be charged for Mr. Croker's dinner will be big does not necessarily mean that the same adjective will describe the public stature of the guests.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Assemblyman Murray, of Union county, declares that his colleague, Mr. Squire, is a creature of corporations What Mr. Squire thinks about Mr. Murray has not yet been made public.—Newark News.

Neither ridicule nor sarcasm availed to deter Assemblyman Roger Franklin Murray from pushing through the House his bill repealing the act of last year extending to July, 1900, lapsing trolley franchises. If the companies interested in such franchises have tried to live up to the conditions of them they ought not to find much difficulty in obtaining renewals from the local authority. Legislative interference in such matters is bad in principle, and the Murray repealer deserves favorable action by the Senate and Governor.—New York Tribune.

For several years past, when Plainfield newspapers had nothing else to exploit, the subject for consolidation with North Plainfield has been talked up, and it finally took shape in having the question put on the tickets at the recent borough election. An overwhelming majority appeared against the scheme which will probably now have a rest. Somerset county don't want to lose the taxable property in North Plainfield, which would be the case if that borough were set off to Union county or became a portion of a new county. The expense of creating and maintaining a new county would be great and taxpayers would object; hence the promoters may as well quit.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Herman Berger, of Paterson, was waiting for a car in Jersey City the other day when a stranger made some inquiries of him regarding the street cars. After a few minutes conversation Herman discovered that he was talking to his brother Carl, whom he had seen in twenty-two years. Carl resides in Portland, Me.

The sons of Erin's isle were not the only wearers of the green yesterday. A vast majority of the men and boys of the city—yes, and girls, too—wore a little bow of green ribbon in the button or else displayed that color in some other manner. A number of the cadets at the Plainfield High School had a band of green ribbon tied about their left arm in honor of the day.

* * * * *

The Plainfielders who have occasion to travel frequently on the Jersey Central railroad will be glad to know that that corporation has appropriated a large amount to be expended on new locomotives and passenger cars. While the engines do not make so much difference, a number of new passenger coaches will be greatly appreciated. Some of the present ones are very fine but others can be easily missed.

* * * * *

The members of the Legislature from the upper part of the State are terribly annoyed by the continuous demand for the loan of their railroad passes, says the Trenton Times. This is a growing evil in some parts of the State, and likely to extend to all parts of the State. A group of members were discussing the matter yesterday. One of them said: "Well, I'm in a pretty fix. I have got to stay here and pay my board over night because I can't get out of town I have been chump enough to loan my pass, and the fellow I loaned it to is not through with it, and I'm likely to get it about Sunday."

"That's nothing," chimed in another member; "one day last week I did not have a pass on any important railroad in New Jersey in my pocket. My constituents were keeping the rails hot all over the State. One chap that I loaned a South Jersey pass to actually struck me for $5 for spending money while on the trip."

The Democratic leader, Mr. Murphy, overheard the conversation, and said: "I think I have a solution of this difficulty. Let the Secretary of State issue the pass. One steel plate card, passing a legislator or official of the State over all railroads. The secretary of State signs the pass and the railroads honor it. It is issued to those entitled by law to carry it. It would do away with carrying a satchel of passes around. There would have to be but one, that could not be used by any person but for whom it is legally intended. There could be a penalty for loaning it."

Most members thought it was a good thing and ought to be pushed along.

Spain's Greatest Need.

Sons of Veterans Confer With the Councilmanic Committee.

LOCATION IS A QUESTION.

A CONTRIBUTION OF $25 WAS RECEIVED SATURDAY NIGHT.

The Project of Raising the Necessary Funds Will be Made a Popular One and Even Pennies Will be Welcomed Into the Funds—A Circular Describing the Monument is to Issued Very Soon.

On Saturday evening there was held the first meeting of the joint committee from the Common Council and the Sons of Veterans, appointed to devise ways and means for the erection of a suitable soldiers' monument in this city, and the initiatory steps were taken looking toward the completion of that object.

In the first place Rev. W. C. O'Donnell was made president of the joint committee. J. F. Buckle was made treasurer and H. C. McVoy was selected as secretary.

The subject under consideration was discussed and many suggestions were made concerning efforts that are to be made to raise the amount desired to erect the monument. It was unanimously agreed that every man, woman and child in the city should be interested in the scheme and be made to feel that they should contribute something, if only a penny. It was decided that the school children should be interested, as well as every society, organization and church in the city, and to this end a prospective circular will be issued at an early date setting forth the object and purpose of the movement.

Prior to the holding of another meeting estimates will be secured as to the relative cost of monuments so that the committee will be better able to judge as to how much Plainfield's monument should cost. The sketch of one monument, together with the plans and specifications, were submitted by Mr. O'Donnell on Saturday evening, but this was not considered to be just what the committee want.

Regarding the location of the monument it was thought that no better place could be secured than the one in front of the Crescent Avenue church in the triangle, but Mr. Buckle expressed an opinion that the proper people to decide the location would be the members of the G. A. R., and the question may be left to them to decide.

An excellent start was made Saturday evening with one subscription of $25. Inasmuch as the Sons of Veterans proposed the scheme it is likely that that organization will head the subscription with a goodly sum as an incentive to others. The councilmanic committee, consisting of Messrs. Buckle, Mellick and Smith, are very kindly disposed to assist the committee from the Sons of Veterans all that they can, and there does not seem to be any doubt but what the monument will be an assured thing.

The committee will meet again on Monday evening, March 27th, when further progress will be made in the matter. It is hoped that by that time the committee will be able to issue the proposed circular and start the ball agoing. After the subscribtion lists are started weekly reports will be made in the local papers showing the progress that is made. Any person desiring information about the affair can secure the same from any member of the committee, who will also be glad to receive suggestions.

Local Endeavor Work.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Local Union Christian Endeavor will be held Thursday night in the First Presbyterian church. Interesting reports on missionary work, junior work, social and general work will be read; also a report by the secretary of the general work of the union. The election of officers will be held, and the programme will be varied with with vocal solos. A sociable will follow the transaction of the business.

Metronome Club to Play.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church has arranged to give a concert Tuesday evening, March 28th, in the church. The celebrated Metronome Banjo and Mandolin Club, assisted by Miss Marion Short, of New York, an elocutionist of rare ability, will furnish the entertainment. The programme will be very fine.

Miss Curry to be Present

Miss Sarah Curry, matron of the Westfield Fresh Air Camp, will be present at the annual meeting of the C. E. Local Union Thursday night, to meet any of those who desire to talk with her about her work.

ANOTHER TIE AT WHIST.

VICTORY BY PARK CLUB MAKES THIRD ROUND NECESSARY.

Winners of the Three Sections in the New Jersey Whist Association are Having Trouble in Deciding Superiority.

The situation in the New Jersey Whist Association is peculiar. The winners of the three sections have twice attempted to settle the question of superiority and twice have ended in a tie. The final match in the second round was played Saturday night at the rooms of the Jersey City Club in that city. The contesting teams were the Park Club, of this city, and the Ridgewood Club. The Ridgewoods had already defeated Roseville and Roseville had defeated the Parks. Then the Parks tied the round by defeating Ridgewood by a score of 7 to 6. A third round will now have to be played.

The match Saturday night was decidedly close. The Parks were in good form and the luck was evenly divided. P. B. Matthews, Albert Woltmann, Arthur A. Freeman and Fred H. Freeman represented the Parks.

The first round of the match showed the Parks in the lead 3 tricks to 2. The result of the second was the same, 3 to 2, in favor of the Parks. The Ridgewood team braced up for the final and gained one point in the third round, winning that 2 to 1. The total score was 7 to 6 in favor of the Parks.

INDOOR CYCLE RIDING.

A NEW ENTERTAINMENT FAD ENJOYED BY LOCAL SOCIETY.

Held in the Crescent Rink and Will be Given Regularly Every Saturday Night—The Admission is by Invitation.

The first of a series of regular weekly cycling entertainments was given Saturday evening in the Crescent Riding Academy and proved a success. About forty of the society people were out and enjoyed a pleasant spin about the academy on their wheels, as well as some difficult trick riding by the Martells, of San Francisco.

The affair was arranged by Miss Maud VanBoskerck and Miss Whiton and will be followed each week by another similar entertainment until May. The young people meet there to ride and enjoy a sociable time.

The management of this, the first entertainment, was given to Frank L. C. Martin, the well-known bicycle dealer, and he made all the arrangements. Guttman's orchestra furnished the music, and refreshments were served upon the stage.

Admission was by invitation, and about eighty were invited. The storm kept half of that number away, so the attendance was not as large as was expected. The young ladies who conceived the idea were complimented highly at the success of their plan, and these Saturday night indoor rides will be looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure.

The entertainment opened with a drill or procession, which was led by Thomas VanBoskerk. Then the time was given up to individual riding until the Mantells were introduced and amused the spectators with some of the latest tricks in trick riding. The patronesses were Mrs. J. M. Whiton, Mrs. Samuel Huntington and Mrs. Joseph Meyers.

Oh, Girls, Why Did You Do It?

The girls' basket ball team of the Plainfield High School was defeated Friday afternoon by the East Orange High School girls, but not by the score published in The Daily Press Saturday. They were really defeated by a score of 32 to 2, instead of 3 to 2. The Press obtained its information regarding the game from a supposedly trustworthy source and published the reported score, supposing it to be the truth. There was much mystery about the result of the game, as the girls of the team agreed, at first, to keep the score a secret, admitting only that they were defeated.

Storm Kept Them Away.

Rev. H. W. McKane, of the Christian church, was to have preached a special sermon to the United Order of Independent Odd Ladies last night, but owing to the storm only a few members of the order were out. Mr. McKane spoke of the grandeur of women, and chose his text from the last chapter of Solomon. His special sermon will be delivered to the order April 9th. Mrs. John Manley sang one or two solos.

New Borough Council.

This evening Mayor-elect N. B. Smalley and the new Borough Council will meet for the purpose of organizing. At this meeting appointments will be made and several other important matters considered.

SHE PROMISED JUDGE TO GIVE UP DRINK.

Mrs. Kate McCleary in City Court Again.

WAS DRUNK ON STREET.

LETTER FROM HER HUSBAND SAVED HER A HEAVY SENTENCE.

She Was the Judge's First Case New Year's Day and Had Promised to Swear Off Then—Arrested Again by Patrolman Vanderweg Saturday Night—Has a Husband and Three Children

City Judge William N. Runyon had a batch of offenders, left over from Saturday to administer justice to this morning.

The first to be arraigned before the City Judge was a woman, Mrs. Kate McCleary. The first day that the Judge presided on the local bench, Mrs. McCleary was brought before him, a victim of intemperance. She had been found lying about the streets New Year's eve too drunk to care for herself. The Judge let her go with a warning.

Mrs. McCleary lives with her husband, a hard working respectable man, and three little children. Saturday night, Patrolman Vanderweg found her sprawled out on North avenue, unable to navigate. So he locked her up.

"I lead a lonely life," she began, the tears rolling down her cheeks "And I get downhearted sometimes." The Judge did not think that she could get lonely with three children. He then delivered a lecture, the most severe yet heard from him since his term began. He had received a letter from her husband, begging for clemency this time, he said, and but for that he had decided to give her a lesson that she would not forget. She had promised to give up drink forever, when he let her go the last time and here she was back again for the same offence.

The woman pleaded that now she meant it and would drink no more. Judge Runyon suspended sentence but warned her that another arrest would mean the severest sentence the law allowed.

Fred Willibald, who was arrested Saturday morning by Roundsman Frederickson and was too drunk that morning to be tried, came up this morning for a hearing. He pleaded guilty. The officer explained that he was not causing any trouble. Just fell on his back and was too drunk to change his position. So the Judge suspended sentence.

VIEWS ARE TOO LIBERAL.

Westminster Church Divides Over Calling the Rev. Mr. Ecob.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 20—The controversy in the wealthy Westminster Presbyterian church of Elizabeth over the selection of a pastor has aroused much feeling among the congregation.

The last pastor of Westminster, and who succeeded Rev. Dr. Teal, was Rev. Henry A. MacKubbin, now traveling in Europe. Since his departure the church has depended on the Presbytery for a supply of preachers. Rev. J. H. Ecob, formerly of Denver, Col., has been officiating for some time, and the movement to call him as a permanent pastor precipitated the recent clash between the two factions.

By a vote of 123 to 74 it was decided to call Rev. Dr. Ecob, but owing to the opposition his friends doubt if he will accept. However, as yet he has not replied, and the matter will go to the Presbytery.

The chief objection seems to be that his views are too liberal. He was formerly, it is said, a Congregationalist and Universalist.

Arranging for the Fair.

The joint committees of Iona Council and Miantonomoh Tribe met Saturday night in William Newcorn's office and made the final arrangements for the fair to be held in Washington Hall Easter week. The committee are making plans for something out of the ordinary in regard to this fair, and expect to have an electric display, candy makers, glass blowers etc., present. Utawan, a genuine Indian fortune teller, is expected to be present.

Blockaded the Street

During the high wind last evening a large tree on West Third street, between Liberty street and Plainfield avenue, blew down. The tree fell directly across Third street, obstructing the street. Street Commissioner Gavett was telephoned for, and he soon had a gang of men at work cutting away the tree, and before midnight the street was clear.

MRS PLACE PUT TO DEATH

PAYS THE PENALTY FOR MURDERING HER STEPDAUGHTER.

Her Sentence of Death in the Electric Chair Was Executed in Sing Sing Prison at 11:01 o'Clock This Morning.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Sing Sing, March 20—Mrs. Martha Place was put to death in the electric chair in Sing Sing Prison this morning for the murder of her stepdaughter, Ida Place, in Brooklyn, last year. The execution took place at 11:01 o'clock.

It was exactly 11:01 o'clock when this happened, and before the witesses realized that it was happening it was all over with Mrs. Place.

The voltage the electrician had used was 1,760, and that lasted but four seconds. During those four seconds the hands of the woman were clinched. In one hand she held a Testament. At the end of four seconds the current was reduced to 250 volts, and it remained at that force for fifty-six seconds.

Mrs. Place was led to the chair, which was at the west end of the room. She was backed up to it. As the bend of her knees touched the edge of the chair she sat back and the two women stood in front of her shielding her from the sight of the witnesses while the electrodes were adjusted by the men The electrodes were adjusted exactly as in the case of men condemned to death. The work of fixing them did not take a second over a minute and a half.

IN HONOR OF ST. PATRICK.

Rev. Father O'Hanlon Delivered a Lecture on Ireland's Patron Saint.

Last evening at St. Joseph's R. C. church a service was held in honor of St. Patrick, at which time Rev. Father O'Hanlon, a former rector of the church, delivered an interesting lecture bearing on the life, character and personalty of St. Patrick. The lecture was very helpful as well as instructive to all present.

Another feature of the service was the rendition of several musical numbers appropriate to the memory of St. Patrick. This programme was given under the direction of Organist James Baily and consisted chiefly of vocal solos as follows: "Come Back to Erin," Frederick LaPorte; "The Shamrock," Miss Justina Smith; "The Minstrel Boy," James Baily; "Killarny," Frederick LaPorte; "The Harp That Once Through Tara's Hall," Miss Justina Smith. The last selection was "America," and was given by Miss Smith. The entire musical programme was given in perfect style and finish and everyone thoroughly enjoyed it.

A BOOM IN THE WEST END.

Residential Improvements in the Vicinity of Monroe and Grant Avenues.

A real enterprising little building boom has been started in the section of the city bounded by Monroe and Grant avenues and West Seventh and Fourth streets. A very handsome residence is now under way on the north side of West Seventh street, just east of Monroe avenue. Manning & Son have the contract for the work. The house is being built by A. D. Thompson.

Two other houses are in process of erection on West Sixth street, in the same block. They will not be quite as elaborate as the other.

Plans for eight other houses in that section have been completed, and will be started with the beginning of good weather.

A DOUBLE WEDDING.

Two Plainfield Couples Plighted Their Troth in Elizabeth.

Announcement has just been made of a double wedding which took place Wedesday, March 1st, at Elizabeth, at which time four Plainfielders met at the marriage altar. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Baily at his home in Elizabeth.

One couple was William Dandridge and Miss Dora Hedgman. The groom is employed by Dr. Boone while the bride was employed by A. A. Taft, of the borough.

The other couple was James Whitton and Miss Tempa Morris. This groom is employed in Washington Park, as an attendant, while the bride was employed in a family on Fairview avenue.

The many friends of the contracting parties will be surprised to learn of their marrige, but they will no doubt receive the hearty congratulations of all.

LOWER INTEREST RATE GOOD FOR FARMERS

Assemblyman Cooper's Bill Attracts Much Attention.

IS LIKELY TO BE PASSED.

NEW JERSEY WILL BE TAKING A PECULIAR FINANCIAL STEP.

Legislature is in a Dilemma Over the Appropriations and Adjournment May Not be Made Until the Middle of Next Week—Pay for Soldiers is Puzzling — The Governor's Ultimatum.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 20.—Assemblyman Cooper's five per cent. interest bill is attracting widespread attention. It has already passed the House, and is in a fair way to go through the Senate. In fact, Senator Hutchinson, who will vote for it, predicts its passage. The legislation, it is stated, is particularly for the benefit of the farmers who are large borrowers from the banks. It is therefore favored by all the Legislators who represent agricultural counties, while it is opposed by the representatives of large cities. With the enactment of this law New Jersey will be placed in a peculiar position as a State lying between the larger States of Pennsylvania and New York where six per cent. will continue to be the legal rate. The loss of one per cent. to the banks of New Jersey may prove a serious blow, but then it is argued that the reduced rate will increase the number of borrowers.

That the Legislature is in a dilemma over the numerous applications for appropriations for one purpose or another is a self-evident fact. The Commissioners of the Rahway Reformatory want not less than $250,000, and that, it is stated on good authority, they will not get. A prominent member of the Appropriations Committee said a day or two ago that the reformatory would not receive a dollar this year. Then he was of the opinion, also, that unless the House receded from its amendment to the soldiers' pay bill, no appropriation at all would be made for that purpose. The Ketcham bill is all that this Legislature can afford, he said, and the Senate would never agree to the increase proposed by the House. A halt must be called in several instances or else there will not be sufficient funds left for the support of the various State departments and institutions, added this Senator.

It is problematical whether the Legislature will adjourn sine die at the end of this week or the middle of next week. Many important questions are yet pending, and some days will expire before the joint committee on appropriations finishes its work. This committee will be in session all day today, when several claimants for slices of the annual budget appear and endeavor to prove the wisdom of their demands.

The Governor's ultimatum that all bills passed by the Legislature must be submitted to him before a final adjournment, makes the question still more problematical. He means to insist upon that procedure so that the Legislature shall share an equal responsibility with him as to action on all measures enacted before the session closes.

Bags for Old Clothing.

Some time ago Mrs. A. C. Nickerson, chairman of the committee on benevolent work of All Souls' church, sent out cards to various people in the city asking permission to leave a bag at the house on March 20th, in which were to be put all the old worn out clothing. In accordance with the plan the bags were delivered today and after a certain time has elapsed will be collected and employment given to deserving poor in repairing the articles placed in them.

Died at the Hospital.

O'Donnell was employed in the Pond Machine Tool Works. He was taken ill and ordered to the hospital by his physician. O'Donnell was unmarried.

HAS SAILED FOR HOME.

DR. CARROLL LEFT SAN JUAN PORTO RICO, YESTERDAY.

His Work as a Commissioner to Investigate the Internal Affairs of the Island, is Finished — He is Pleased.

Dr. Henry K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, who has been in Porto Rico for the last two months as a special commissioner, appointed by President McKinley, for the investigation of the internal affairs of that Island for the information of Washington officials, sailed from San Juan yesterday on the transport Buford, and will arrive home the latter part of this week. Dr. Carroll is accompanied home by his wife, who has been touring the island with him, and his private secretary, C. E. Buell, of Craig place, North Plainfield.

In letters received from Dr. Carroll he expressed himself as highly pleased with the results of his work for the government. He says that he found the natives glad to afford him all the information that he desired to secure. After his first visit to the island, and when he was home through the holidays, Dr. Carroll spoke highly of the intelligence and enterprise of the Porto Ricans, and said that there was no reason why they should not be given independence the same as Cuba when the United States had established a permanent government on the island. In his experience and observation during this last visit to the island he is convinced more than ever that his estimate of their ability and character is not misplaced.

"WON BY RUM AND MONEY."

How a Prohibition Preacher Views Result of Election in Dunellen.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Dunellen, March 20 — Rev. A. L. Wilson, pastor of the Methodist church at Bound Brook, who made the address at the union temperance meeting held in the Presbyterian church here last night, made some strong alusions to the recent election, in his remarks, which have set the politicians to talking.

In speaking of the result of the election, in which R. J. Swackhamer and Peter Staats, of the People's ticket, were elected, Swackhamer especially, by so large a majority, the speaker said that the election "was won by rum and money." Mr. Swackhamer, who is spoken of by everyone in the highest terms, sat in the congregation at the time. Mr. Wilson then went on to tell what a power for evil intemperance is in this world, and what an influence for wrong it wields in the affairs of State and Nation.

MAYOR SMALLEY WANTS TO WORK IN HARMONY

Private Conference Held With the Borough Council.

TONIGHT'S SLATE IS FIXED.

FRANK ROWLEY TO SUCCEED JAS. K. ARNOLD AS CLERK.

Borough Counsel Reed to be Re-appointed—Julius J. Stahl Will be Appointed Overseer of the Poor in Place of David Weaver—Office of Chief Marshal to be Abolished as an Experiment.

Mayor N. B. Smalley and the new Borough Council met on Saturday evening in a private conference for the purpose of arranging plans and appointments to be presented at the first regular meeting to be held this evening. The caucus was in every sense a harmonious one, and no serious disagreements presented themselves at the meeting.

Mayor Smalley frankly asked the members of the Council for their unanimous support during the year, stating that he realized that he could do nothing unless he had it. He declared that he wants to do the very best for the interest of the borough, and desires to be guided in the discharge of his duty by those more experienced in the local government.

Mr. Smalley was assured by the Councilmen that he would have the hearty support of that body so long as he does the right thing, but if he does not he must expect strong opposition. The Councilmen displayed a very kindly feeling toward Mr. Smalley, and all present felt sure that everything would work harmonious and for the best interests of the borough.

After this exchange of opinion the question of appointments was taken up and discussed at length. In this matter there was no great difference of opinion and the slate was amicably fixed to the evident satisfaction of all.

It was decided not to appoint a chief marshal, but to have all marshals on an equal footing. This plan will be tried, and if it does not work satisfactory there will be a change. It is the intention to appoint the same marshals now serving, with the exception of Chief Wilson, who resigns tonight. Marshal Campbell is to have the day position, and will receive the same pay as regular marshals. He will put in the same hours as Chief Wilson did—that is, from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m.

Another important appointment to be made is that of borough clerk, the position now held by James K. Arnold. It was decided at the caucus to appoint Frank W. Rowley, the Front street druggist, who resides in the borough. There was no opposition to this selection. Julius J. Stahl, who is now borough electrician, is slated for the position of overseer of the poor in place of David Weaver, the present incumbent.

This appointment will leave the office of borough electrician vacant and it is probable that David Bodine will secure the appointment for that place.

Regarding the appointment of a chief of the fire department, this was left to the fire water and lamps committee, and it is an assured fact that Chief George Fairchild will be reappointed to the place. The next appointment considered was that of borough physician, and it was decided to appoint Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan to succeed Dr. J. H. Carman.

It was decided by those present that Councilman Swackhamer should be president of the Council and he will probably receive this honor. The several committees were arranged in a satisfactory manner and will be announced at the meeting this evening. There were several other matters discussed, the result of which will be given out at this evening's meeting.

In the selection of a man for street commissioner the name of Thomas Doud was mentioned, and it is likely that he will be appointed. Regarding the borough recordership there is not likely to be any change, as Mr. Long has given general satisfaction.

It is also understood that there will be a reduction in the amount of salary paid the borough clerk and the borough counsel.

Aged Friend Dead.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

A HUNDRED REASONS

They are in the tablet form, which retains their good qualities indefinitely, while liquid preparations become stale and useless with age.

They are convenient, can be carried in the pocket and taken when needed. They are pleasant to take.

After each meal dissolve one or two of them in the mouth, and mingling with the food, they constitute a perfect digestive, absolutely safe for the most sensitive stomach.

They digest the food before it has time to ferment, thus preventing the formation of gas and keeping the blood pure and free from the poisonous products of fermented, half digested food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the only remedy designed especially for the cure of stomach troubles and nothing else.

One disease, one remedy, the successful physician of today is the specialist, the successful medicine is the medicine prepared especially for one disease.

They increase flesh by digesting flesh forming foods.

A whole package taken at one time would not hurt one, but would simply be a waste of good material.

Over six thousand men and women in the State of Michigan alone, have been cured of indigestion and dyspepsia by the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Sold by all druggists at 50 cents per package.

WINDSOR HOTEL FIRE

The Recovery of Bodies from the Ruins Yet Incomplete.

MISS GOUD'S HOUSE OPEN

The Origin of the Fire Unknown—The Hotel Always Regarded as a Death Trap by the Authorities Who Kept There Knowledge to Themselves Until After The Catastrophy.

New York, March 20.—All day Sunday, in a drizzling rain, and last night by the glare of electric lights, workmen were searching the ruins of the Windsor Hotel for the victims of Friday's fire.

The scene of devastation in the immediate vicinity of Fifth avenue and Forty-seventh street can scarcely be imagined. Broken and blackened windows, wrecked doors, smashed railings, dirt and general debris surround almost every house. As Chief Bonner expressed it, "It was a wicked fire."

The individual losses of patrons of the hotel cannot be told. Already jewels valued at half a million have been reported missing. Thieves looted some of the rooms during the fire. Three complaints about their work were made to the police, and several men were arrested on suspicion.

Warrn F. Leland, the proprietor, had somewhat recovered yestrday, but was still in a feeble condition. He was unable to account for the origin of the fire.

Miss Helen Gould and some of her neighbors supplied hot coffee to the police and workmen. Miss Gould had an emergency cot prepared in her house, and her brother Frank personally aided in carrying an injured laborer to it while the surgeon was sent for.

Elbridge T. Gerry carried insurance policies aggregating $595,000 on the hotel building, $120,000 on the furishings and $75,000 on the rental. Mr. Leland had $100,000 insurance on his own furniture. Some of the permanent patrons of the hotel also had their effects insured.

The following is the list of thus far reported of the dead:

Gunter's Story of His Escape.

Archibald Clavering Gunter, the story writer, and his wife, Etta, occupied rooms on the parlor floor on the Forty-sixth street side. Their escape is described in a letter Mr. Gunter wrote to his mother, in which he says:

"A little after 3 o'clock, Etta had just beaten me at a game of cribbage. I walked from our parlor into Etta's bedroom, so as to look out of the window. Next to me was a big bay window which was at the end of an [illegible] hall that ran from Forty-seventh parallel with Fifth avenue [illegible] Forty-sixth street, each end of [illegible] ing a large bay window shaded by a palm, and a great flirtation place in evening. As I looked from my w[illegible] at the procession I was compelled most to look through the big [illegible] panes of the bay window in the h[illegible] In them I saw an old gentleman apparently smoking and looking at the procession, and as I looked at him he seemed to be smoking more rapidly and vigorously than any old man I had ever heard of. I heard a cry of affright and excitement up the long hall. The old gentleman jumped up and disappeared like a flash of lightning. I saw the bay window dense with smoke. I stepped out of Etta's room into the parlor and said: 'I think the house is on fire.' I then opened my parlor door into the hall and looked along it, and Leonard, my servant, ran out with me and ran up to the end of the hall. All the draperies of the bay window were in flames and the ceiling had already caught. I cried to my wife: 'We have got to get out of here quick; the house is on fire.' But I had no idea of the rapidity with which the flames would spread. Within sixty seconds after I spoke my wife, she not having time to grab her purse from the table, and I not having time to put on my overcoat, were compelled to run down a blazing stairway to the street, the burning paint falling on my hat. We had time to save nothing but our lives, but, thank God, we came out uninjured. After reaching the street, I turned around and saw our rooms in a mass of flames. That was not over one minute and thirty seconds from the time I saw the old man in the bay window. As Mrs. Gunter left her bedroom a kind of explosion of flame blew from the hall into her bedroom. Leonard, our servant, who ran to the office to give the alarm, was not over twenty seconds giving it.

"The fire spread with such rapidity that the people who lived in the rooms next us were unable to get out except through the windows and down ladders. As we came out the people were on the fire escapes.

"The heroism of the firemen was simply sublime. They climbed into almost impossible places, scaled walls six stories high with the aid of only hand ladders that they caught upon the window sills, and carried women fainting and women screaming and struggling with hysterics down in their arms. Nearly every rescue of a woman from the upper stories was at the risk of the life of some brave fireman, and I saw them take many down from almost impossible heights."

Famous Guests of the Windsor.

President and Mrs. McKinley usually stayed in the Windsor when in New York for several years before Mr. McKinley was elected President. They occupied what were known as the State Departments, on the first floor.

The house was a favorite resort for financial magnates. Just across Forty-seventh street from the residence of Jay Gould, he was accustomed to run over every evening for an hour or so semi-social engagements. There, almost any evening, could be found with Jay Gould, Henry Villard, then president of the Northern Pacific; Sam Sloan, of the Delaare, Lackawanna and Western; William A. Clark, the Montana copper king; Collis P. Huntington, of the Southern Pacific; James J. Hill, of the Great Northern; Henry B. Ledyard, of the Michigan Central; George F. Baker, of the Jersey Central; Marcus Daly, the copper magnate; W. C. Whitney, Chauncey M. Depew, William E. Perkins, of the Importers and Traders' National Bank, and many others whose names are well known in the financial world.

Among the hotel's prominent guests of the past were Lord and Lady Playfair, of England, who are due the coming week; also Lord Castlemont, Lord Benford, Marquis de Lesseps, Count de Paris, Sir Mallaber-Deely, Adelina Patti, the diva; Christine Nilsson, Ballington Booth and his father, Gen. Booth; William Jennings Bryan, Gen. Joe Wheeler, Dr. Quesada, of the Cuban Junta.

The hotel has also been the scene of many notable gatherings and conventions, among them the reception to Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Bryan in 1896, the McKinley reception in 1897 and the convention of the Theta Delta Chi Fraternity in 1898.

Some idea of the size of the building is shown by the fact that the halls of the house were over a mile and a quarter in length, and that there were over seven miles of pipes within its walls the hotel contained over 600 rooms in all, including 139 bathrooms.

It is said that the entire cost of the Windsor, including everything, before the doors were opened, was over $2,500,000. The land it occupied was at that time valued at $800,000, but is worth far more to-day.

Mystery About the Fire's Origin.

There was almost universal [illegible] yesterday on the marvelous rapidity with which the hotel was wrapped in flames. So fast was the fire's progress that it gave rise to the belief on the part of some that there were two fires burning at the same time, one on the parlor floor and one on the top floor. No one seems to know definitely where the fire started unless the statement of John Foy, a waiter, be accepted as true. He says that he saw it start on the floor above the office—the parlor floor—at the end of the hall on the Forty-sixth street side. He says he yelled "Fire" and ran down stairs out the Fifth avenue door, and across to the northwest corner of Forty-seventh street. He says he could not have been more than three minutes, and yet when he reached the corner he saw flames coming from the roof on the Forty-seventh street side. This seems incredible.

Miss Helen Gould's chef says that he saw smoke around the flagstaff fifteen minutes before the general alarm was given and so reported to the hotel office. Warren Leland, the hotel's proprietor, says that he went upstairs and found the whole parlor floor ablaze, and yet on this very floor there was a dancing school in progress, the members of which knew nothing of the fire until men and women began jumping from the upper stories.

Fireproof When Built.

The hotel was intended, when it was built, to be as nearly as fireproof as possible, but on each floor five broad corridors intersected and in the middle of the building were two wide shafts, constructed for the purpose of admitting additional light and air. Broad staircases led from the office floor to the parlor floor and other broad staircases connected the succeeding floors. This scheme of architecture could hardly have been improved upon in hastening the destruction of the hotel by fire should wind be blowing from any direction. This was shown, when with a west wind bloing, the entire staircase as in ruins in a little over an hour.

The Building Department was aware of the unsafe condition of the hotel, and they and the Fire Department had had many discussions regarding necessary alterations. In 1888 the building was condemned. The proprietors had placed a water tank holding 8,000 gallons over the air well that lighted the office, and the weight caused the walls to warp. Nothing was done to remedy this, though the matter was agitated in the newspapers at the time.

A circumstance not known to the general public was the existence of a tunnel, leading from the hotel, under Forty-seventh street, to the house of Jay Gould. This was built at Mr. Gould's expense after the riot caused by his withholding the returns of the Blaine-Cleveland election. At that time Mr. Gould escaped from his house in a closed carriage, unnoticed by the rioters, and, not wishing to risk his life again in view of the possibility of a similar circumstance, had the tunnel cut through.

To Operate on the Pope Again.

Paris, March 20.—The Figaro's Rome correspondent says that Drs. Lapponi and Mazzoni decided to perform a fresh operation upon the Pope. It is made necessary by the inability of the physicians to sew the first wound. The Pope is beginning to gain strength. The doctors were unanimous regarding the second operation, which will not be a painful one. The Pope's consent to the operation was easily obtained.

It is stated at the Vatican that there is no truth in the report that the Pope underwent an operation Saturday. His Holiness received a number of visitors, among them Bishop Brindle, the coadjutor Bishop of Cardinal Vaughan.

Secretary Alger Going to Cuba.

Washington, March 20.—Secretary Alger will leave here probably on Wednesday next for Savannah, whence he will sail later in the week on the transport Ingalls for an inspection trip to Cuban and Porto Rican ports. In Loveland, Colorado, there is a man named Park, who is engaged in merchandising, and he calls his place the "Golden Rule Store." When opportunity offers, this gentleman never fails to recommend Ripans Tabules and to give his own experience with them, which he relates as follows: "For fully twenty-five years I have been an asthmatic. As a general thing throughout the winter, I have to remain indoors at least three or four days in each month. I have suffered a great deal—yet all the precautions I might take did not keep me free from these terrible attacks. About eighteen months ago I commenced taking RIPANS TABULES to regulate my stomach. I am of a bilious temperament, and as soon as I become bilious I am sure to have attacks of asthma. The Tabules keeps my stomach all right, and for the past year I have not been confined to the house at all. My asthma is not cured—but the attacks are very slight. I use on an average two Tabules every Sunday, one on Wednesday and one on Friday."

Mr. Archbold Says No Books of Importance Were Burned.

CALLS FLAGG A WHELP

Oil Man Says the Attorney-General of Ohio Malignantly Perverts the Truth, and That Assistant Flagg is After Money—Cooked Testimony About Burned Books'

New York, March 20.—John D. Archbold, director of the Standard Oil Company and one of the trustees of the Trust Liquidating Committee, who was examined all day Friday by Attorney-General Monnett of Ohio and Monnet's two assistants, Bennett and Flagg, was on the stand again all day Saturday before the Master Commissioner of the Ohio Supreme Court at the Hoffman House. After being denounced as a "cur" by Monnett's assistant, Flagg, Mr. Archbold took occasion to sail out on his own hook and characterize the whole Ohio crowd. For a few minutes it looked as if there would be a personal encounter, but it didn't come.

The case in which testimony was taken was the contempt of court proceedings instituted by the Ohio Attorney-General, who asserts that the Standard Oil Company of Ohio has not dissolved its connection with the trust as the Supreme Court of that State ordered it to do, and that therefore it is in contempt. On Friday Mr. Archbold asserted that the prosecution was instigated and fostered by George Rice of Marietta and that Rice had tried to blackmail the company into buying his $25,000 oil plant for $500,000. He minced no words in his testimony and the session before its conclusion was a warm one. Mr. Archbold finally propounded the conundrum:

"If the Gould family lived in Ohio would the Attorney-General begin an action against it for putting Mrs. Cody out of business?"

The things that Mr. Archbold was permitted to testify to were that the Standard Oil Company of Ohio had absolutely disentangled itself from the Standard Oil Trust and that it had been, since 1892, when the Ohio court made its order, an independent company in every sense of the word, managing all its affairs itself and independently of the trust. Mr. Elliot, who, with Virgil Kline of Cleveland, represented the Oil Company, got up with a copy of the World in his hand. This paper printed a two-column signed statement from the Attorney-General denouncing the Oil Company and telling what "the people" of Ohio were doing and were going to do. Mr. Elliot said:

"Mr. Archbold, I find a statement in the New York World of this morning purporting to be an interview with Attorney-General Monnett, in which it is declared that you knew that the Standard Oil Company of Ohio had destroyed sixteen cases of books soon after the Ohio court had ordered the production of those books in court. Is that statement true?"

Mr. Archbold settled back in his chair and said, with particular emphasis on each word:

It is not true, and the statement in that respect is of the same character that the Attorney-General has persistently put out; that is, false and malicious and calculated to mislead public sentiment in reference to this matter."

"Don't you know that McEnnery testified to the size and weight of the books?" demanded Monnett.

"He didn't," said Mr. Archbold, leaning forward again. "He simply swore to the bringing of a certain accumulation of waste matter to the shop."

"Do you swear under oath"—began Monnett, while Assistant Flagg grew apoplectic—"do you swear under oath that he did not swear to the bringing of books of the size of ledgers and the weight of books, etc.?"

"All I say is," said Mr. Archbold, "that whatever he swore to had nothing to do with this issue, and you know it." He leaned forward and shook his finger at the Attorney-General. "And you know it," he repeated, "and when testimony was offered that would have cleared the whole thing up you declined to let it be given. And you know that, too."

"Do you deny that there was testimony that he hauled those sixteen boxes of books to the shop furnace?"

"In respect to that and any other testimony of the kind," said Mr. Archbold, "any testimony that those employees gave had no reference to this issue. "There were no books burned that could by any means help this issue and there were no books of any importance affecting the issue there. There were no books burned that could by any means help this issue. The Attorney-General knows it, and he would not allow testimony to be introduced that would prove it. He got a lot of fellows of low character, semi-Anarchists, to give the testimony and has been exploiting it ever since in the newspapers of the country."

"Were not all the people who gave this testimony your own employees?"

"Any employee who testified gave it as I have answered," said Mr. Archbold.

"Any you say they are Anarchists?"

"I say one of them confessed he was an Anarchist."

"To whom did he make that confession? Who was it who confessed he was an Anarchist? Was it McEnnery?"

"I don't know who it was. You must know. You hired them all."

Here Monnett exploded again. "You say I hired them?" he demanded.

Mr. Archbold smiled. "I have every reason to believe you did," he said. "You have shown nothing but malignity all the way through these proceedings. I say you succeeded in getting these fellows to give this testimony about matters of which they could know nothing and refused to admit testimony that would clear the whole matter up, and you go on making these statements in yellow journals all the time. It is a nice professional thing for you to do."

Flagg said something at this point that was not heard beyond the table where Mr. Archbold and the stenographer were sitting, and Mr. Archbold said quickly: "You keep still, sir, or I'll will expose you right here. I know you, and I will expose you—you——"

This aroused Mr. Flagg to the sputtering point. His face grew as red as a beet and he snorted back: "I should consider it a pleasure to be exposed by a cur like you, you cur."

"Cur!" exclaimed Mr. Archbold. "Why, you — you — you — miserable whelp, you, you're not fit to look at, you whelp—you dog."

Apoplexy was imminent everywhere at this time. The Master stuttered and the Attorney-General and the other assistant, Bennett, tried to speak, but ouldn't.

"Dog!" snorted Flagg.

"Yes, dog!" said Archbold.

"Dog!" snorted Flagg again, "only a dog isn't so low compared with a Standard Oil magnate. Why, you loafer, the people are ashamed to walk the streets with you. Dog—dog—you—you—why, you, try to say anything about me; you try to; you are a coward and anl you know it. You may have a million dollars, but your money don't talk. I don't care for your money."

Archbold leaned forward on the table, and shaking his finger under Flagg's nose, said:

"Well, you can't get any of my money. You have tried to get it."

"oYu are a liar!" shouted back Flagg, almost beside himself.

Archbold by this time was in deadly earnest, and shaking his finger still he retorted: "I am not. You stinking, dirty liar; you miserable whelp to assault a man as you have!"

"Bah!" snorted Flagg. "Bah! You think everybody is trying to blackmail you."

The duel went on for a few minutes longer, and at its end the whole matter was stricken from the record and the hearing was adjourned until Monday morning.

"Didn't I give it to him?" asked Flagg of the reporters. "Wasn't it hot? I don't see how he could stand it, do you? Do you, now? That was pretty hot. I tell you, to say to a man worth ten millions, wasn't it?"

GEN. WEEELER DEFENDS HIS RECORD

Washington, D. C., March 20.—Major General Joseph Wheeler has made his defense of his conduct in the Santiago campaign. He filed in the War Department a statement in regard to the assertions that he fought the battle of Las Guasimas in disobedience of orders and that he wanted to retreat from before Santiago on the night of July 2.

The text of General Wheeler's statement will not be given out at the War Department until the return of Secretary Alger, but it is known that the statement sets forth that the battle of Las Guasimas was not fought in disobedience of orders, but, on the contrary, was fought in strict compliance with orders. It also brings evidence to disprove the assertion that General Wheeler wished to retreat on July 2 or at any other time.

On these points the General presents the testimony of other officers to support his statement.

Incorporated in the statement is a letter from Governor Roosevelt, in which surprise is expressed that any of the statements detrimental to General Wheeler's record in the Santiago campaign should have been instigated, and in which the Governor says that General Wheeler was the backbone of the campaign.

Several other letters and telegrams are included, all sustaining General Wheeler's record.

An effort has been made to have it appear that Major General Miles was responsible for the reports adverse to General Wheeler, but it is not shown that General Miles had anything more to do with the matter than to repeat what General Lawton had said when he was asked by the War Investigation Commission to say what several officers had reported to him. He expressed no opinion.

As a matter of fact, General Miles is very friendly to General Wheeler, and it is by the advice of General Miles that General Wheeler has filed his statement.

As the matter now stands it is asserted that some one associated with General Lawton was responsible for both statements to the discredit of General Wheeler. The statement that he wished to retreat was contained in a book written by a man who was on General Lawton's staff, and who gave General Kent as authority.

General Wheeler has a letter from General Kent denying that he ever made such a statement. As General Lawton is in the Philippines what he knows of the case cannot be given at this time.

MCKINLEY GOES TO JEKYL ISLAND.

Mr. Hobart, Senator Hanna and and Judge Day Accompany Him.

Thomasville, Ga., March 20.—President McKinley, Vice President Hobart, Senator Hanna and Judge William R. Day are scheduled to go to Jekyl Island this morning, leaving Thomasville at 9 o'clock. They will spend spend Tuesday, and perhaps a part of Wednesday the guests of the club there. The fact that Speaker Reed is at Jekyl has given rise to a report here that there may be a meeting of the Thomasville party and the Speaker and perhaps Senator Platt and Senator Quay at Jekyl Island.

Senators Platt and Quay are reported to be in Florida, and I am told they will probably see the President before he returns to Washington, and that they will either come here or find it convenient to spend Tuesday at Jekyl Island. Senator Hanna declares there is no plan for a meeting and that there will be no conference, but some very close friends of the President and Mr. Hanna say there will be some business talked over by the Republican leaders now in the South. Judge Day arrived in Thomasville this afternoon. He did not go to Senator Hanna's house, but went to the Piney Woods Hotel. His arrival is said to be of little significance, and Assistant Secretary Cortelyou tells me Judge Day is the only big Republican who was or is expected here. Mrs. Day accompanied her husband.

Vice President Hobart says he knows nothing about Speaker Reed's trip to Jekyl Island. He said he was willing to wager a suit of clothing that Mr. Reed would not be there, but this was before the Speaker was reported at Brunswick.

THE OREGON AT MANILA

"In Fit Condition for Any Duty,' Says Dewey.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S MISSION

False Stories of Cruelty Foster Hatred—Natives of Panay Are Told That the Americans Continue the Old Spanish Tyranny, Supplemented by Yarns About Filipino Victories Over Otis.

Manila, March 20.—The Filipinos in force attacked a company of the Washington volunteers at Taguig on Sunday. Two companies of the Washington and Oregon regiments were sent to the assistance of their comrades and drove the rebels back in front of the Twenty-second regulars, who also engaged the enemy.

Two American soliders were killed and an officer and thirteen privates were wounded. The enemy's loss was severe.

The entire American force has been reorganized, two divisions of three brigades each being formed. Gen. Lawton assumed command of the first, which consists of the Washington, North Dakota and California volunteers, under Gen. King; six troops of the Fourth Cavalry, the Fourteenth regulars, the Idaho volunteers and a battalion of the Iowa troops, under Gen. Ovenshine; the Third and Twenty-second regular infantry and the Oregon regiment, under Gen. Wheaton and Dyer's and Hawthorne's light batteries.

Gen. MacArthur's division consists of two batteries of the Third Artillery, the Kansas and Montana volunteers, under Gen. H. G. Otis; the Colorado, Nebraska and South Dakota regiments, and six companies of the Pennsylvania regiment, under Gen. Hale; the Fourth and Seventeenth regulars, the Minnesota and Wyoming volunteers and the Uath artillery.

The Oregon There.

Washington, D. C., March 20.—This despatch was received Saturday from Admiral Dewey:

Secretary of the Navy, Washington:

The Oregon and the Iris arrived today. The Oregon is in fit condition for any duty. DEWEY.

The arrival of the Oregon and her attachment to Admiral Dewey's command has wonderfully eased the official mind as to the international aspect of the Philippine situation, although since the German Government placed her interests in the care of the United States the authorities have not believed that there was any immediate danger of intervention by another power, in the affairs of this Government.

According to the information of the department the Oregon and Iris went direct to Guam from Honolulu. The Iris had taken sufficient coal on board at Honolulu to refill the bunkers of the Oregon at Guam, so that they were able to cover the distance separating Honolulu and Manila without trouble on account of fuel. The run made by the two vessels is considered by the authorities to have been quite satisfactory, and it is no secret now that the orders of the Oregon, sent her before her departure from Callao, required her to lose no time in proceeding to Manila.

An Englishman's Mission Fails.

Manila, March 20.—Lieut. Commander Cowper, of the British gunboat Plover, accompanied by an English resident and Raimundo Melliza, former President of the Filipino Congress for Panay, crossed the lines unofficially and attempted to advise the natives to abandon their opposition to the Americans, their intention to do so having been previously communicated to Gen. Miller, who granted them the facilities. Senor Melliza is a leading merchant, having large interests in Iloilo and the surrounding country. When a collision with the Americans seemed inevitable Senor Melliza resigned the Presidency, which is now held by Victorino Mapa.

The party went by way of Molo to the town of Mandurriao, where they dismounted, and, under a flag of true, walked two miles to the first insurgent trenches. There they were met by sixteen of the leading political and military insurgents, but not by Pablo Arreta, the principal Visayan general; by President Mapa or by Diogno, the Tagalo general, who acts as adviser and as Aguinaldo's representative.

Lieut. Commander Cowper was much impressed by the youthfulness and smartness of the leaders. He counseled an agreement with the Americans, who, he said, had no intention to rule in the spirit old Spain did, but to improve the country for the benefit of the people.

The natives reiterated their charges that the Americans were guilty of acting in bad faith; that their acts were not in accordance with fair words. They assured Lieut. Commander Cowper they were not fighting from choice—were desirous of renewing their business and peaceful pursuits, but determined to make no compromise without consulting Aguinaldo. They will stand or fall with the Island of Luzon. They treated Lieut. Commander Cowper and his companions courteously. When asked by him, as a dernier ressort, what suggestions they had to make toward a solution they assured him frankly they were willing to negotiate for a basis of peace through one of the great powers, preferably Great Britain. Lieut. Commander Cowper reported the result of the conference to Gen. Miller.

Despite this failure, the kind treatment by Americans under Gen. Miller's express orders is having an excellent effect on the lower classes of the natives whose daily occupations are conducted in the fields close to the American lines. The natives come and go, bringing produce, and the only precaution taken is a search to prevent the introduction of weapons. Owing to the daily increase in the number of laborers in the city, it is hoped that business will soon resume its former scale. The volume of trade is now only one-eighth its usual limit.

It is evident that the military and Tagal element is preventing a collapse of the hostile movement. They are circulating absurd stories of Filipino success in the vicinity of Manila and the capture of numerous American prisoners.

Cremating Garbage.

In discussing the question of sewage disposal as suggested in the decision of Chancellor McGill on the pollution of the Passaic river by the towns and cities along its course, the Elizabeth Journal makes the following comment on one phase of the sewage question:

Plainfield and Summit have tried—or are trying—disposal beds, and these promise a harvest of litigation, with the possible result that they will be condemned as nuisances and damaging to public health and private property contiguous. Vast sewer systems from the inland cities to the salt water outlets on the coast will be impossible, for they will be in violation of the law. What remains to be done? There is one way always open, that is, the cremation of all the waste of cities. It has been tried and has been successful in every instance, save in one respect—the cost. But the proper disposal of sewage is no longer a question of cost, any more than is the proper disposal of our dead. It is simply an absolute, unavoidable necessity. No matter what the cost, we cannot get rid of this duty, this necessity. It must be done. We may do it as cheaply as possible, but at whatever cost, it has got to be done.

To the minds of many Plainfielders, who have studied the question of sewage disposal since this city has been undergoing the experience of sewage beds, with widely differing opinions as to their success, the plan suggested by the Journal, as the only proper and permanently successful solution of the problem, has been accepted in the same light as the Journal puts it.

In view of the contemplated purchase of the garbage disposal plant of the Plainfield Sanitary Company by the city, it is undoubtedly true that this city could dispose of its sewage at a nominal cost where other cities without such a plant would be put to extraordinary expenditure to obtain such a system. Readers of The Daily Press will remember that several months ago we printed an article describing a plan, originated by Eddy Clark, whereby the sewage of this city, now flowing on the sewage beds, and becoming a public nuisance according to the ideas of the people living in the proximity of the beds, could be run through the garbage crematory plant by a series of vats and pipes and the solids separated from the fluids and consumed by fire to the utter satisfaction of all concerned. The fluid, if treated scientifically, would become harmless and could be diverted to the present sewage beds to be absorbed by the ground without any of the disagreeable affects observed in their present operation.

Of course, the cost of such a system is mere conjecture at present, but with a plant fully capable of handling the sewage of the city already in existence—and the city in prospect of becoming the owners—the change could be made with an expenditure immeasurably less than other cities would have to undergo without the same existing facilities.

When Senator Reed was chosen to preside over the Senate The Daily Press predicted that he would make one of the best Presidents of the Senate that New Jersey has ever experienced. Our ideas of Senator Reed are borne out by the following written by the Trenton correspondent of the Matawan Republican:

I do not want to close this letter without offering a disinterested tribute to President Reed's administration of the duties of the chair of the Senate. His habitual urbanity and conspicuous fairness are commending themselves to general approval. He keeps the business of the Senate well in hand and neither affects any top lofty airs nor permits any trifling with the dignity of his office or the decorum of the Senate. He will retire with the respect of his colleagues and receive the encomiums of his political opponents.

The Newark Call says that Vice-President Hobart would prefer to be elected United States Senator from New Jersey in 1901, to occupy the seat now held by Senator Sewell, rather than be named for his present office again. Mr. Hobart's training in his present office peculiarly fits him for service in the United States Senate, of which he is the presiding officer now. The Call intimates that Mr. Sewell will not be anxious for re-election to the Senatorship.

Governor Voorhees' memory seems to have lapsed over that part of his inaugural message in which he admitted the increasing influence of combines of capital, and his promise to submit a special message to the Legislature later on with reference to legislation looking to the curbing of trusts. Thus far the Governor has evidenced no intention of following out the plan he mentioned in his first message.

The New York Herald has discovered that there are several establishments near Jersey City where horses are slaughtered for food purposes, the meat being canned and exported to Norway and France. The health authorities within whose jurisdiction these slaughter houses are located say that there is no law in New Jersey whereby the preparation of horse meat for food can be prevented.

In debating the question of "Shall the United States Permanently Control the Philippines?" Rutgers College students, who represented the negative side of the question, were victorious over the arguers of the New York University. Aguinaldo may now take courage, since such a momentous matter has been settled by the Rutgers Sophs.

Hon. John Wanamaker has donated two handsome silver collection plates to the new Methodist church in Bridgeport, N. J. The Hon. John has an eye to business. The few dollars that the plates cost will be immeasurably returned in advertising results. This very item is evidence of it.

Morristown is much agitated over a proposed trolley. The sentiment there is much in favor of it, though a few merchants oppose it on the ground that it would take business away, which is a penny wise and pound foolish way of looking at it.

The plow manufacturers of the country are forming a combination. It will be capitalized in New Jersey at $60,000,000. To make the trust complete it will be necessary for the promoters to control the earth.

Some things come cheap by comparison. For instance, the difference in cost between a seat in the New York stock exchange and a seat in the United States Senate from some States.

A southern writer describes Tom Reed as a great big open-looking man with a shut mouth.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Trolley liberty in Union is building up vast sections that formerly were unimproved land. The whole face of the interior of the county is changing; roads are opening through farms and handsome homes are springing up on every hand. The trolley may be enriching the few, but it is making homes for the many.—New York Press.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Here is a mathematical curiosity that is worth trying. Write on a piece of paper the number representing your age, multiply by two, add 3,797, divide by two, then substract the number representing your age, and before your eyes will be something you will never see again.

A decidedly original sentence was given by a Western judge recently. A man who did not know how to read or write was sentenced for a minor offense to be imprisoned until he learned. The next prisoner could do both, and he was sentenced to stay in jail until he had taught his predecessor in the dock. After three weeks they were discharged, both having fulfilled their task to the satisfaction of the judge.

Tom Fee, of Washington avenue, Elizabeth, is going to open an undertaker's shop. Tom is a native of Canton. Twenty years ago he cut off his queue and began to learn English. Now he parts his hair in the middle, wears a luxuriant mustache and clothes cut in the latest style. A year ago he forsook the washtub and began to work in Martin's undertaker's shop. He will soon take a course of study in New York and then open a shop in Chinatown. Fee has joined St. Mary's Catholic church, in Elizabeth. He will be baptized on Easter Sunday. He says he likes the Catholic faith because he observed the heroism and devotion of priests among the lepers in China.

According to the Trenton Times, Speaker David O Watkins has a double, and unfortunately for him, however, he keeps him right under his eye so that he cannot be running around mixing things up for him. This double is Journal Clerk Morrison, from Union county, who sits at the clerk's desk directly in front of the speaker. They look very much alike and the members have grown accustomed to the slight differences of resemblance. Early in the session Morrison was frequently taken for the speaker by those connected with the different State House offices. When called the speaker he usually blushed to the top of his bald head, but he gradually grew accustomed to it and could accept the honor without giving himself away.

No Right to Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvet skin, rich complexion. It will make a good looking, charming woman of a run down invalid. Only 50 cents at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

A MONOMANIACAL WITNESS.

"That calls to mind a queer experience of my own," said a lawyer who had listened to the story. "Some years ago I defended a fellow for murder in a little Southern town, and the worst witness we had against us was an old German who was a stack builder by trade. A stack, by the way, is merely another name for a big chimney. The old fellow was perfectly honest and gave his story in such a clear, straightforward manner that I felt my client was doomed unless I could think of some way to break him down. While I was cudgeling my brains a friend whispered to me to ask him how high he could build a stack. 'What do you mean?' I asked, in surprise. 'Never mind,' said my friend. 'Just slip in that question and see.' So at the tail end of the cross examination I paused, as if struck by an afterthought, and said: 'You are a stack builder, I believe?' 'Yes, sir,' replied the witness. 'Well, sir,' I continued, 'about how high can you build—' I never got any further. A swift inscrutable change flashed over the German's face and he rose excitedly from his chair. 'As high as der sky!' he roared. 'So high dose angels come around it like birds!' In five seconds he was raving. You see, the man was a monomaniac— sane on every subject but one, and my friend happened to know his weak spot. It is hardly necessary to say that his evidence in regard to the homicide was promptly ruled out by the Judge, and as there was no other witness of importance my man was cleared. The rascal should have been hanged, and would have been but for the lucky reference to the stack."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Appropriate Text.

A little girl who lives up town went to church last Sunday. She is a bright little maiden and, considering her tender age, only six, she is decidedly intelligent. Her mother has been suffering from the grip and didn't accompany her, and as her father was away from home she went alone.

Whether it was the loneliness of the big pew or whether the church was poorly heated, mamma wasn't quite sure, but, anyway, the little maid came home and declared she was very chilly.

"My toes got so cold while I was sitting there, mamma," she declared. "And so did my fingers and my nose. I don't believe there was hardly a speck of fire in the furnace."

"That was too bad," said mamma; "did the other people seem to suffer, too?"

"Oh, yes, they did," cried the little maid. "They just shivered!"

Then mamma thought she would divert the little maid's attention.

"What was the text, dear?" she asked; "can you remember it?"

"I should think I could," was the quick answer: "'I can 'member every word of it."

"Well, what was it?"

The little maid put her head on one side and screwing up her face, shrilly intoned:

"'Many are cold, but few are frozen.'"

And mamma had to admit that it seemed remarkably appropriate.

Willing to Concede.

At a convival party, recently, a gentleman who had returned from a lengthened tour in the East, was relating some of the wonderful things he had seen on his travels. The yarns he spun were decidedly "steep," but the guests politely accepted his statements as true. Encouraged by the reception accorded to his tallest stories he ventured to state that he had seen at the foot of the Himalayas a tiger forty-three feet long, from the tip of the nose to the tip of the tail. This was too much, and everybody kept silence, until a gentleman from Oban dryly remarked:

"Oh, yes, the works of Nature are very wonderful and very large whatever. Just last week I saw a skate brought ashore at Oban, which covered a quarter of an acre of ground."

Nobody spoke, and amid the silence the Eastern traveler left the room. The host, perceiving that something was amiss, rose and followed him.

"Is there anything wrong?" he asked.

"I have been insulted," said the traveler. "That Scotch gentleman has dealt a blow at my veracity, and I cannot return until he apologizes."

Anxious that harmony should prevail among his guests, the host returned to the room, and explaining matters to the company, asked the Highlander to make an apology, if merely for form's sake.

"Weel," said he, "I'll no just apologize, but tell him to come back and take a few feet off the teegur, and we'll see what can be done wi' the skate."

He Could Wait.

A boy was sitting lazily in the stern of a boat dangling his feet in the water, when a man from the dock called sharply to him:

"What are you doin' there?"

"Nothin'," responded the boy.

"Do you get any pay for it?"

"No," and he drew one foot out of the water, ready to run if necessary.

"Why don't you go to work?"

"Will you get me a job?"

"Yes."

"Steady?"

"Yes."

"Pay anything?"

"Well, no," hesitated the man—"not the first week."

"How about the second?"

"Then I will."

"All right; I'll come round the second week. This is good enough for me now," and the boy put his foot back into the water, and winked at the man on the dock.

Bayern.

München. Der Raubmörder, der vor etlichen Wochen eine Pfandversetzerin und Handlerin mit alten Sachen Nachmittags in ihrem Laden ermordete und beraubte, ist jetzt verhaftet worden. Auf seine Spur kam man, als er in einem Juwelierladen einen aus einem Ring ausgebrochenen Stein verkaufen wollte. Er ist ein 16jähriger Metzgerlehrling, ein kleines, unansehnliches Bürschchen mit verschmitztem Gesicht. Er hat bereits gestanden. Die gestohlenen Werthsachen fand man in seiner Schlafstätte. Die gestohlenen 500 Mark hat er verbraucht. —Der frühere erste Assistent des Professors Behring und Privatdozent in Marburg, Dr. Knorr, ist bei Untersuchungen an der Landwirthschaftlichen Hochschule dahier durch Infizirung mit Rotzkrankheit gestorben.

Aschaffenburg. Außer der katholischen St. Agathakirche, deren Umbau seit einigen Wochen beschlossen ist, soll nun auch ein Kirchenneubau für die Protestanten ausgeführt werden. Ein evangelischer Kirchenneubau ist bereits unter lebhafter Antheilnahme der Evangelischen in's Leben getreten.

Bad Reichenhall. Griesbach. In das hiesige Amtsgerichtsgefängniß wurde ein kaum 12jähriger Knabe aus Tettenweis eingeliefert, der dringend verdächtig ist, den letzten Brand in Hundshaupten verursacht zu haben. Verschiedene Gerüchte gaben dem Lehrer Wallisch Veranlassung, nach dem Schreiber von Brandbriefen zu fahnden, in denen angekündigt wurde, daß noch vor Pfingsten drei Anwesen, darunter auch der Pfarrhof, niederbrennen würden. Als Schreiber dieser Briefe hat sich der verhaftete Schulknabe entpuppt. Auf ihm ruht auch der dringende Verdacht, den Brand in Oberschwärzenbach gelegt zu haben.

Kitzingen. Der hiesige Rangschiffer August Lenz hatte in einem Schiffe 2500 Centner Mehl verladen und fuhr damit im dichten Nebel zwischen Eibelstadt und Randesacker auf einen sogenannten Wasserbau. Das Schiff brach entzwei und versank mit der ganzen Ladung. Nur mit Mühe konnte sich Lenz retten. Er reiste hierher, und am anderen Tage fand man ihn als Leiche in der Nähe des Maines; er hatte sich erschossen. Lenz hinterläßt Frau und sechs Kinder.

CHAPTER IV.

The court martial that met at Camp Cooke in compliance with orders from division headquarters at Frisco had three weeks later practically finished the case of Brevet Captain Nevins, and that debonair person, who had appeared before it on the first day suave, laughing and almost insolently defiant, had wilted visibly as day after day the judge advocate unfolded the mass of evidence against him.

All that Nevins thought to be tried for was a charge of misappropriation of public funds and property, and it was his purpose to plead in bar of trial that he had offered to make complete restitution, to replace every missing item and doubly replace if need be every dollar. This indeed he had lost no time in doing the moment he was handed over to the post commander two days after the exciting episode at Sancho's, but he coupled with the offer a condition that all proceedings against him should be dropped, and the veteran major commanding, while expressing entire willingness to receipt for any funds the accused might offer, would promise nothing whatever in return.

That Nevins should be charged with desertion and breach of arrest the accused officer regarded as of small importance. He was merely going to Tucson as fast as he could to get from business associates, as he termed them, the money deposited with them and owed to him, and this must also excuse his having borrowed the major's best horse.

His friends in congress would square all that for him, even if the court should prove obdurate. That grave charges should have followed him from a former sphere of operations; that his record, while retained in the volunteer service until the spring of 1866 and assigned to some mysterious bureau functions in the south, should have been ventilated and made part and parcel of the charges; that it should be shown that he as a newly commissioned officer of the army had made the journey from New Orleans to the isthmus and thence to San Francisco with men whom he knew to be deserters from commands stationed in the Crescent City; that he should have gambled with them and associated with them and brought one of them all the way with him to Yuma and concealed from the military authorities his knowledge of their crime; that it should be proved that he was a professional "card sharp," expert manipulator and blackleg he never had contemplated as even possible, and yet, with calm and relentless deliberation, "that cold blooded, merciless martinet of a West Pointer," as he referred to the judge advocate at an early stage in the proceedings, had laid proof after proof before the court and left the case of the defense at the last without a leg to stand on.

And then Nevins dropped the debonair and donned the abject, for the one friend or adviser left to him in the crowded camp, an officer who said he always took the side of the under dog in a fight, had told him that in its present temper that court, with old Turnbull as one of its leaders, would surely sentence him to a term of years at Alcatraz, as well as to dismissal from the military service of the United States. Dismissal he expected, but cared little for that. He had money and valuables more than enough to begin life on anywhere, and the pickings of his accustomed trade were all too scant in Arizona. He needed a broader field and a crowding population for the proper exercise of his talents, and the uniform of the officer, after all, had not proved to be so potent in lulling the suspicions of prospective victims as he had expected it might be.

But Alcatraz, a rock bound prison, a convict's garb, hard labor on soft diet—that was indeed appalling.

"That man Loring has made you out an innate blackguard, Nevins. You've got to plead for mercy," said his shrewd adviser, and Nevins saw the point and pleaded. He laid before the court letters from officers of rank speaking gratefully of his aid during the prevalence of yellow fever in the gulf states. He begged the court to wait until he could show them the affidavits of many statesmen and soldiers, whom it would take months to hear from by mail, and there was then no telegraph in Arizona. He begged for time, for pity, and the court was moved and wrote to Drum barracks for instructions and adjourned until the answer came, which it did by swift stages and special courier within a week. "Advices from Washington say that the congressional backers of the accused have declared themselves well rid of him and suggest the extreme penalty of the law." And this being the advice of Washington, it was simply human nature that the court should experience a revulsion of feeling and consider itself bound to see that the poor fellow was not made to suffer martyrdom.

Most of the members were men from the volunteers or from the ranks. West Pointers were the exception, not the rule, in the line of the army for years after the war. Most of the court had been the recipients of Nevins' exuberant hospitality at one time or other. He had objected to the few who had lost heavily to him at cards, and the objection had been sustained, and when the last day of the long session arrived and the sad eyed, pale faced, scrupulously groomed and dressed accused arose before the dignified array and the little line of curious spectators to make his last plea a silence, not unmixed with a certain sympathy, fell upon all hearers, as in low voice and faltering accents the friendless fellow began his story. Partly from manuscript, which he seemed to find hard reading, but mainly as an extemporaneous effort, his remarks were substantially as follows:

"I've come to make a clean breast of it, gentlemen. I'm not fit to wear your uniform. I never was. I never wanted to. It was practically forced upon me by men who ought to have known better, who did know better, but who did not care so long as they got me out of the way. My father as much as owned more than one congressman in York state. The Hon. Mr. Cadger of the military committee couldn't have been renominated if it hadn't been for him, and he didn't want me round home any more. He got me kept on bureau work long after all but a few volunteers were mustered out, and shoved me down to New Orleans, where I'd often been steamboating before the war.

"I had the fever there when I was only 20. Perhaps he thought I could get it again and that would be the end of me. If there's a worse place for a young officer to start in than that infernal town was just after the war, it ain't on the map of these United States. I had the luck and the opportunities of the devil for nigh on to a year. I got more money and learned more ways of getting it than I knew how to use, and then I got married.

"A homeless woman, a woman with brains and good looks and education, married me for the position I could give her, I suppose. They told me afterward she did it out of spite or desperation; that she was a northern girl who had been employed as governess in an old southern family that was ruined by the war; that she had a younger sister in New York whom she was educating—a girl who had a magnificent voice and wanted to go on the stage—and all the money she could save went to her. She got employment when Ben Butler took command, for she knew all the southern families that had money and plate and jewels and those that had nothing but niggers.

"She fell in love, they told me afterward, with a swell colonel who came there on staff duty, for he cut a dash and made desperate love to her, until his wife got wind of it and came down there all of a sudden, just after the smash up of the Confederacy, and put a stop to his fun. That was in May, and I got there in July. We were married that winter, and I loaded her with the best I could buy and gave her all she could spend on her sister until she found out how my money was made there in cotton and cards. She thought—and I'd let her think so—that I had big property in the north. It was another woman gave her the tip, and then the trouble began. She swore we must give up the house we lived in, the horses and carriage and go to a cheap boarding house. She got the jewelers to take back the watch and all the trinkets I'd given her at their own valuation—about a quarter of what they cost me. She argued and pleaded and prayed and swore she'd confess the whole thing to General Sheridan, who came there right after the riots of 1866 and took command—and that would have sent me to the penitentiary.

"There were regular officers in the deals besides me, and they got wind of it and tried to bribe her, and she'd cry all night and mope all day and swear she'd leave me unless I cut loose from the whole business and restored what I'd made. By God! I couldn't! I'd spent it! I was no worse than three or four others who had eyes open to their opportunities—two of 'em in the regular army now—bang up swells, and at last I couldn't stand it and got to drinking, and then I lost my card nerve, and the money went with it, and it made me desperate—crazy, I reckon, for one night when I came home drunk and she made a scene, I suppose I must have struck her, and then she took sick and got delirious, and I was horribly afraid, and so were my partners, that she'd give up the whole business; so they got me leave of absence.

"They saw me aboard the steamer for New York. My money was running short and they gave me enough to place her in a sanitarium on the Hudson and get her sister with her, and then I came back and bad luck followed. I was strapped, when the old man told me I'd have to go out and join my regiment, for he'd got me appointed in the regulars. Why, some of Sheridan's officers, when they saw my name in the papers, wrote to stop it, but it was no use. The military committee in congress couldn't go back on Mr. Cadger, and he daren't go back on my father. But they got me sent out here to be as far away as possible, and, yes, there were three deserters from Cram's battery aboard the steamer, so I learned, and one of them, the man you call Higgins, who was betrayed to Lieutenant Blake by another deserter just as bad as him, was staking the other two, for he had money in plenty until after I had done with him.

"What my life's been out here you know well enough—same as it was in New Orleans, all luck and plenty at first, then all a collapse. I'm ruined now. When I had hundreds and thousands, I helped everybody who wanted it. There are men in Yuma and Tucson now whom I set on their pins, and they give me the cold shoulder. All that offer to the major was a bluff. They've got all my money. I haven't a cent anywhere, and so far as I'm personally concerned I don't care. If there was no one on earth dependent on me, I'd as lief you'd shoot me tomorrow.

"But, gentlemen, there's the rub. I own it now. There's my poor wife and her sister. I've lied to them both. She got well at the sanitarium. She's believed my promises and she's come all the way to San Francisco and was expecting me there when—when the bottom fell out of the whole business. She's there now—she and her sister. They've got enough to pay their expenses perhaps a month or so, and that's all. I can make a living. I can get along and provide for her if you'll only give me a chance. I know I deserve dismissal. That's all right, but for God's sake, gentlemen, don't send me to Alcatraz, don't put me in jail. Leave me free to work. There's men in this territory that owe me nearly $1,000 today. Let me gather that up and go to my wife—I— She's a good woman, gentlemen"—

And here the tears came starting from the pleading culprit's eyes, and one or two sympathetic souls about the rude tables sniffed suspiciously.

"It ain't for me to talk of such things. Perhaps you won't believe me, but"—and he fingered the leaves of the blue bound copy of the regulations that lay to the left of the judge advocate's elbow—"I—I love that woman and I want to care for her, and take good care of her. Look here," he continued, as with sudden, impulsive movement he unbuttoned his trim fitting, single breasted frock coat and displayed a snowy shirt bosom, on which sparkled and glistened a great diamond set in the style much affected by the "sporting gent" of the day.

"See this diamond. It cost $1,100 in San Francisco six months ago, and here this solitary," and he produced from an inner pocket an unquestionably valuable ring and, with trembling hands, laid them upon the table in front of the judge advocate, "and here," and he whipped from the waistband of his trousers a massive and beautiful watch. "There are all the valuables I have in the world. These I place in the hands of the worthy officer and gentleman who has only done his duty in representing the government through this long and painful trial. These I publicly turn over to him with the request that he personally hand them to my poor wife as soon as he reaches San Francisco as earnest of my intention to lead an honest life and to care for her in the future. And now, gentlemen, I've nothing to ask for myself—nothing but liberty to go and work for her. I'm not fit to sit with such as you."

He finished and, quivering as with suppressed emotion, turned his back upon the court, pressed his handkerchief to his streaming eyes and groped his way to the little table set apart for him a few yards to the left of the judge advocate. The silence among the members and along the benches whereon were seated the dozen spectators was for a moment unbroken by a sound except a little shuffling of feet. Then one veteran member cleared his throat with a "hem" of preparation to speak, yet hesitated.

The junior officer of the court, a lieutenant of cavalry, slowly stretched forth his hand, picked up the solitaire and eyed it with an assumption of critical yet respectful interest. The president, a grizzled, red faced veteran, presently stole a glance at Turnbull, who sat with stolid features immediately on his right. One by one the nine members (two of the original 11 having been challenged an excused) began to look cautiously about them.

"Gentlemen, I've nothing to ask for myself."

A captain of infantry was observed to be very red about the eyelids, but that might have been, and possibly was, the result of cocktails. Loring alone remained in the same position. He had half turned his back to Nevins when the latter began to speak, rested his left elbow on the table and his head on his hand, his eyes shaded under the curving palm against the glare of light that came from without. There was no room or building big enough for the purpose at the post, and the court had held its session under a brace of hospital tent flies stretched on a framework adjoining the office of the major commanding, and Camp Cooke, as a rule, looked on from afar.

The spectators who ventured beneath the shade were officers of the little garrison, the sutler and half a dozen "casuals" of the civilian persuasion, among whom, if not among the members of the court, Nevins' harangue had created an undoubted sensation, for glances indicative of surprise if not of incredulity passed among them.

At last, as though he felt that something must be said rather than that he knew what was appropriate to say, the presiding officer addressed the member who had cleared his throat.

"You were about to say something, major?"

"I—er—should like to ask the accused whether his wife is informed of his—er—predicament."

And Nevins, slowly turning, answered: "I wrote last week confessing everything. It will be a relief to her that I am no longer in the army. She said she could never look an officer in the face." There was another pause, then Nevins spoke again:

"I hope I have not imposed too much on the judge advocate. I have asked because he is the only gentleman here who is not entirely a stranger to my poor wife."

Then all eyes were on Loring as he slowly dropped his hand and looked with undisguised astonishment at the accused. Blake, a spectator, suddenly drew his long legs under him and straightened up in his seat. It was needless for Loring to speak. His eyes questioned.

"I do not mean that Mr. Loring knows my wife, but she has heard of him from her sister. They hoped to find him in San Francisco."

Loring had picked up a pencil as he turned. Its point was resting on the pine topped table. He never spoke. His eyes, still steadily fixed upon the twitching face of Nevins, questioned further, and every man present strained his ears for the next word.

And with a snap that was heard all over the assemblage the lead of Loring's pencil broke short off. He sat staring at Nevins, white and stunned.

Tyrolese Marriage Proposals.

There is an old custom prevailing among the Tyrolese regarding proposals for marriage. The first time a young man pays a visit as an avowed lover he brings with him a bottle of wine, of which he pours out a glass and presents it to the object of his desire.

If she accepts it the whole affair is settled. Very often the girl has not yet made up her mind; and then she will take refuge in excuses, so as not to drink the wine, and yet not refuse it point blank, for that is considered a gross insult, proving that she has been merely trifling with the affections of her lover.

She will, for instance, maintain that the wine "looks sour," or that wine disagrees with her, or that she is afraid of getting tipsy, or that the priest has forbidden her to take any; in fact, she makes use of any subterfuge that presents itself at that moment.

This purport of these excuses is that she has not come to a decision, and that the wine offering is premature.

This strange custom, dating very far back (according to one account, it was known as early as the ninth century), is called "bringing the wine," and is synonomous with the act of proposing.

Shy lovers, loath to make sure of their case beforehand, find at a very happy institution. Not a word need be spoken, and the girl is spared the painful "No" of civilization.

If any of the wine is spilled or the glass of bottle broken, it is considered a most unhappy omen; in fact, there is a peasant's saying for an unhappy marriage: "They have spilled the wine between them."

He Couldn't Fool Her.

As Mr. Krewskin was going home the other day at noon, he saw the wagon of a traveling photographer.

"I will stop and have a few tintypes taken just for fun," he mentally remarked, entering the peripatetic establishment.

"There," said the photographer, showing him a "proof." "I think that a pretty good likeness."

Krewskin looked at it with a puzzled expression, and finally said: "I guess it'll do." When he got home he showed the tintype to his wife and jokingly told her it was a picture of the "Wild Man from Borneo," down at the dime museum.

"You can't fool me," said his wife, examining the picture critically. "I've seen the Wild Man from Borneo, and he is not half so homely and frightful looking as this."

The Only Way.

Father—"I understand you think of getting married?"

Son—"Yes, sir."

Father—"Have you given the matter your calm consideration, and deliberated thoroughly upon the gravity and importance of the step, as well as upon the uncertainties and possibilities of the new relation?"

Son—"No, sir."

Father—"You have not? And why have you not?"

Son—"Because, sir, I really want to get married."

Father—"Um—er—ah—I guess you are right about it. Go ahead; it's the only way, I fancy."—Detroit Free Press.

EXAMINE BEFORE YOU BUY.

When in a grocer's store you stand
And cakes of Ivory Soap demand,
Be careful not to be mislead
And imitations take instead.
For dealers oft will praises sing
Of that which may more profit bring.
Examine well with careful eye
The cake until the name you spy,
And always thus be well assured
That Ivory Soap you have procured;
And should a lingering doubt remain,
'Twill vanish like the darkest stain,
When in the tub on washing day
That cake of soap is brought in play.

SPORTING.

THE GREAT INDOOR GAME

WHAT IS GOING ON IN LOCAL BASKET BALL CIRCLES.

Happenings of Interest to Plainfield Enthusiasts—What the Local Teams are Doing—Gossip Among the Players.

It is yet undecided whether the girls of the Montclair High School will play a return game in this city against the local High School team.

The girls' basket ball team of the East Orange High School, which defeated the girls' team of the Plainfield High School last Friday afternoon, is one of the strongest in the metropolitan district. A short time before the game with Plainfield, the East Orange girls defeated the team from the Columbia Teacher's College by a score of 8 to 4.

The first game at home of the season with any outside team, will be played by the Plainfield High School girls Saturday afternoon, April 8th. On that day, the East Orange High School team will play a return game in this city. The match will be played in the gymnasium on the second floor of the Whittier building and a small admission will be charged.

Manager George E Fuller, of the Y. M. C. A. basket ball team, has only one more game definitely scheduled and one in prospect. The team from the School of Mines, Columbia College, will play here on Monday evening, March 27th. The team from the Eastern District of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. owes Plainfield a return game but no date for the match has yet been fixed.

There will probably be a change in the management of the Y. M. C. A. basket ball team next season. George E. Fuller, who has been so successful in that capacity for the past two years, feels that he will not have the time to devote to the team next season owing to the increased demands of his business affairs. The relations between Mr. Fuller and the members of the team has always been the most cordial and his decision, if adhered to, will cause much regret among the boys. His resignation is not caused in any way by the trouble over the Yale game. Mr. Fuller has proved a very efficient manager and the team will have trouble in filling the place as satisfactorily as it has been looked after in the past. Much pressure will undoubtedly be brought to bear to persuade Mr. Fuller to change his decision.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The next and probably the last of the indoor competitions at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium will be held there next Saturday evening, when the open dumb-bell and bar-bell contests will be held. Owing to the few competitors that are expected in each, the two contests will be held on the same evening. The visitors' gallery will then be free to all who are interested enough to be present.

Since the proposed gymnastic contest between the Plainfield and New Brunswick Y. M. C. A.'s was called off on account of Plainfield's protest against professionalism, there seems little prospect of a renewal of the negotiations between the two associations on the subject of athletics. Plainfield sent a challenge to New Brunswick for a strictly amateur meet and no reply has been received yet, and it seems far from likely that it will be accepted.

ROD AND GUN.

There will be another shoot at Scott Terry's farm, near Fanwood, Wednesday, March 20th.

Root and Branch.

Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, was accustomed to make an annual feast, to which she invited all her relations. At one of these family meetings she drank their health, adding, "What a glorious sight it is to see such a number of branches flourishing from one root!" But observing Jack Spencer laugh, she insisted on knowing what had occasioned his mirth, and promised to forgive him, be it what it would.

"Why, then, madam," said he, "I was thinking how much more the branches would flourish if the root were under ground."

HORSE FELT "HIS OATS"

BILLY VANSICKLE'S EXCITING RUNAWAY IN METUCHEN.

Was Treating His Father to a Short Spin When a Wheel Collapsed—Elder VanSickle Thrown Out and Injured.

The Metuchen Record prints the following story of an exciting runaway in which William VanSickel, the North avenue meat dealer, was engaged in:

On Tuesday William VanSickle, a prosperous butcher of Plainfield, drove his wife to Metuchen with his fine trotting horse. The horse, which was always a spirited animal, had not been out of the stable for several days, and was "feeling his oats."

While waiting for his wife, who was making a call on Mrs. Bennett, his sister, Mr. VanSickle drove his father around. As the carriage turned into William street several of the spokes of the wheel flew out. This caused the wheel to bend and the father was thrown to the ground. The frightened horse commenced to plunge and rear, when the wagon completely collapsed and Mr. VanSickle was thrown out. He clung to the reins for about 50 feet, but was finally obliged to let go after having a wheel pass over his body and his head badly cut and many scratches about his mouth. All this the terrified women at Mrs. Bennett's beheld from the window. On went the now maddened horse, dragging the clattering vehicle behind him. When he heached Voohees' the wagon lurched over and the animal became mixed up in some of the trappings, falling on his knees. Men hurried from Almond's and Martin and jumped to the animal's head.

In the meanwhile Dr. Hunt, who opportunely happened by, attended to the men. Mr. VanSickle, the elder, had picked himself up and seemed all right. The younger man was taken by train to his home in Plainfield, where after a few days in bed, he expects to be himself again.

The horse, which was slightly lamed, stayed at Becker's stable's over night. On Wednesday morning Mrs. VanSickle drove from Plainfield with the man and although when they started out the horse stood straight up, his lameness soon quieted him down.

Yesterday Mr. VanSickle, Sr., was suffering from a pain his hip.

L. E. HOWARD'S FUNERAL.

Held From Grace P. E. Church This Morning—Interment in Brooklyn.

The funeral services of the late Louis Emerson Howard were held this morning at 10:45 o'clock from Grace P. E. church, where he was a member and attendant. Rev. Floyd Appleton, curate, officiated and conducted the regular burial service of the church. There was a very large attendance of friends present. The church choir assisted in the services and made a circle of the edifice preceding the funeral cortege up the centre singing "Softly Now the Light of Day." The recessional was "Awake My Soul Stretch Every Nerve." The remains were conveyed to and from the church by colored bearers.

The mourners accompanied the remains to the North Avenue station and occupied the club car "Netherwood" to New York attached to the 12:09 train. This car was placed into service through Mr. Howard's efforts. Interment took place this afternoon in Greenwood Cemetery.

Always at the Proctor shows visitors find ample enjoyment no matter if they linger for an entire entertainment of several hours duration, or happen in just for a brief respite from the irksome task of shopping. The features at the Palace, where the best seats in the afternoon for ladies and children are only 25 cents now, are: James Thornton, Montgomery and Stone, (the Caucasian Williams and Walker,) and twenty other crackajacks in the continuous. REPARTEE ON DRESS PARADE

During some manouevres at Aldershot to gain practice in the vedette system of employing cavalry to watch and report the movements of an enemy the mounted troops employed on the occasion were extended at intervals in a long line reaching some miles.

The major at one end of the line had occasion to send a message to the captain, who was at the opposite end:

"The enemy are in force in front."

The signal was passed along the line all right till it came to a man stationed about midway, who thought fit to add a private message of his own, intended for the benefit of his neighbor:

"Have you a chaw of tobacco?"

Unluckily, his comrade thought these words were part of the signal message, and they were passsed from man to man until they reached the captain.

The latter was somewhat astonished at this request, but sent back this answer:

"I don't use tobacco, but there are two cigars."

The major found the cigars welcome, and as he lighted one, sent back the answer: "Who said you did?"

M. Faure's Irreverence.

Here is a laughable and true little anectdote about President Faure's historic visit to St. Petersburg. It seems that the Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul at St. Petersburg has a remarkable repeating echo, which is nowhere so pronounced as in the passages leading to the subterranean crypt where the famous collection of holy relics is stored. Moreover, as might be expected, the approaches to the crypt are somewhat drafty. Just at the moment when in solemn silence the group of ecclesiastical and other dignitaries in attendance on the president and czar were ushering their illustrious visitors into the hallowed vaults, M. Faure's voice was heard in the half darkness to this effect: "Mollard!"

Immediately and as if by enchantment, innumerable other eerie voices resounded and re-echoed the word on all sides.

"Mollard! Mollard! Mo-oll-a-rd!"

M. Mollard is a diplomatist of parts, but it was distinctly uncanny to hear his homely name thundering away thus in the obscurity of the crypt. The Russian clergy present were scandalized, the laymen were astounded.

But the astonishment became more intense when the president's voice droned out once more:

"My hat!!"

And once more the noisy echoes took up the words and bandied them to and fro among the gloomy arches: "My hat! My hat! My ha-at!"

M. Mollard brought the president's hat. And M. Faure immediately and unconsciously did the cause of the third republic much mischief by putting it on while he made his obeisance to the sacred relics of the imperial church of Russia.

Sauce for the Gander.

He was very practical, and in order to have everything fair and square beforehand, he said:

"You know, darling, I promised my mother that my wife should be a good housekeeper and a domestic woman. Can you cook?"

"I can," she said, swallowing a great lump in her throat.

"Can you make good bread? That is the fundamental principle of all housekeeping."

"Yes, I went into a bakery and learned how to make all kinds of bread." She added, under her breath, "Maybe."

"And can you do your own dressmaking? I am comparatively a poor man, love, and dressmakers' bills would soon bankrupt me."

"Yes," she said, frankly, "I can make everything I wear, especially pattern bonnets."

"You are a jewel," he cried, with enthusiasm, "come to my arms——"

"Wait a minute, there's no hurry," she coldly said. "It's my turn to ask a few questions. Can you saw wood and carry in coals?"

"Why, my love, I should have that work done."

"Can you make your coats, vests, trousers, and other wearing apparel?"

"But that isn't to the purpose."

"Can you build a house, dig ditches, weave carpets and——"

"I am not a professional."

"Neither am I. It has taken the most of my life to acquire the education and accomplishments that attracted you to me. But as soon as I have learned all the professions you speak of I will send you my card. Au revoir," and she swept away.

And the disconsolate young man went to the nearest cigar store and bought a cheap cigar, with which he speedily solaced himself.—Illustrated American.

Neighbor—"Mercy! What's happened?"

"My husband's watch stopped last night."

"I don't see why that——"

"No, neither could we. It never stopped before, and we didn't know it was stopped this morning, because it stopped at seven o'clock last evening, and so I set the clock by it, and that was wrong and my husband missed the train to the city and the children were late to school."

"Not pleasant, of course, but——"

"Oh! but I haven't told you. You see, my husband, after missing his regular train concluded to take a day off and mend all the furniture."

"I see."

"Yes. He's got everything in the house apart and can't get them together again."—New York Weekly.

ALL WAS HARMONY IN NEW BOROUGH COUNCIL

Mayor's Nominations Were as Predicted by The Daily Press.

THE COMMITTEES NAMED.

LARGE CROWD OF INTERESTING CITIZENS WATCHED PROCEEDINGS

Mayor Smalley Presided With Dignity and Grace Over the Meeting—Mayor Swore in the New Councilmen—Councilman Swackhamer Made President of the Council—Salaries Fixed for the Year.

Surrounded by a large crowd of interesting spectators, most of whom are residents of the borough, and some of this city, Mayor Newton B. B. Smalley and the new Borough Council met last evening for the first time to organize and take the preliminary steps for the year's work. Mayor Smalley presided with dignity and grace over the deliberations and showed from the start that he is perfectly capable of occupying the chair recently vacated by a man of unquestioned ability. He exercised careful judgment and showed that he desired to be cautious.

The Mayor's desk was graced by two beautiful bouquets, the gifts of admiring friends.

The first business transacted was that of swearing in the new councilmen, Messrs. Robert Clark, Jr., Harrison Coddington and S. S. Swackhamer. This was performed by Mayor Smalley. After the new councilmen were seated the Mayor presented his message which is printed in another column.

Following the reading of the message there were presented a number of resolutions, all of which were unanimously adopted. Mr. Valiant offered one making S. S. Swackhamer president of the Council. Mr. Clark offered one making the by-laws and rules of the Council of 1895, with one exception, the rules for the Council of 1899. The one exception provides for a committee on laws, ordinances and taxation.

Another resolution offered by Mr. Clark made the salaries of borough officials as follows: Clerk and auditor, $500; attorney, $350; physician, $125; marshals, $300 each; special marshals, 25 cents an hour or $2 per day when on duty; recorder, $200; superintendent of highways, $50 per year and $2 per day extra duty; chief of fire department, $100; engineer Warren Engine Company, $50; janitor Warren engine house, $70; janitor West End house, $25; borough electrician, $125; overseer of the poor, $100.

Still another resolution by Mr. Clark makes it necessary for the clerk and auditor to furnish a bond in the sum of $1,000 for the faithful performance of his duties. A similar resolution was offered by Mr. Burtis which provides that the marshals shall each furnish a bond in the sum of $500 for the faithful performance of duty.

Mr. Rogers offered a resolution abolishing the offices of borough engineer and delinquent tax collector, and Mr. Coddington presented a resolution fixing the date of meeting for the Council the first Friday of each month at 8 o'clock in the evening.

At this time Mayor Smalley appointed the several committees and the several officers for the coming year. With the appointments of officials resolutions were offered confirming each one, and with the exception of electrician each appointment is exactly as published in The Daily Press yesterday. The appointments are as follows:

Streets and Public Health—Messrs Clark, Coddington, Valiant.

WORK OF ENDEAVORERS.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LOCAL UNION TO BE HELD THURSDAY.

Interesting Reports to be Made by the Officers in the Various Departments—A Sociable to Follow the Business.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Local Union will take place this Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church. The committee has arranged a programme of much interest to Christian Endeavorers, consisting of an account of the past year's missionary work by Mrs. Alice S. Runyon, superintendent of the missionary department; Junior work, by Mrs. W. S. Lowry, superintendent of the Plainfield Junior Christian Endeavor Union; social work, by I. W. Travell, superintendent of the social department. The secretary, Miss Ernestine Smith, will report on the general work of the union during the past year.

Miss Sara Curry, matron of the Westfield Fresh Air Camp, will be present, and an opportunity will be given those present to talk with her concerning the "fresh air" and "New York day nursery" work in which she is engaged. Many Endeavorers of the Local Union are identified with Miss Curry's work and her presence in Plainfield just at this time will tend to increase their interest in fresh air work during the coming summer.

Music will be made a feature of the evening. Will N. Runyon and Charles Lewis will sing. A Local Union sociable, with refreshments, will follow the meeting proper. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend both meeting and sociable.

DUTIES OF CITIZENSHIP.

REV. C. E. HERRING DISCOURSES ON VERY TIMELY THOUGHTS.

Pointed Out Many of the Evils That Stand in the Way of Better Government—Questions Taking the Philippines.

The Christian Endeavor meeting in the Trinity Reformed church last night was in charge of the Temperance and Good Citizenship Committee and was led by Frederick E. Smith. Rev. C. E. Herring gave a talk on "Good Citizenship," and presented to hearers what he called a resume of Dr. Josiah Strong's book, "The Twentieth Century City." Mr. Herring spoke of the great advances made in material things during the present century, especially in the United States. Wealth has increased to a wonderful extent; the population has increased 1,200 per cent. during the past 100 years; the working power of these States is two times as great as Britain. When we look at these things we are apt to be impressed with our greatness, the speaker said.

Mr. Herring pointed out that the tide of humanity is drifting towards the cities, and asked if they had an ideal government. The best brains do not rule there, he said, but the bosses are in power. He spoke of the ignorance often found in applicants for Government positions; of Chicago's Mayor being considered one of the worst men in the city; of the increase of crime and vice in the large cities during the past few years, and said that some point these things out as signs of a dissolution of the Republic.

In treating of the saloons Mr. Herring denounced the free lunch counter as a temptation to poor young men. He said that not long ago he took a trip through that section of New York where the free lunch counter reigns, and found that in some places the customer had to pay for his lunch in addition to his glass of beer, while in other places the lunch was free. But, he said, he found these places great political centres, where political schemes were being rushed through, and in this connection said that the Philippines may not be a wise acquisition, as there will be many millions of ignorant voters for some one to dupe.

In closing, Mr. Herring urged his hearers, especially the men, to take more interest in the great questions of the day. He said that so much of the harm comes through indifference.

Mr. Smith followed Mr. Herring with a few words, and E. E. Anthony spoke for the committee.

Miss Minnie Williams rendered a solo at the opening and close of the meeting. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Lillian A. Force.

It is called "The Swarming of the Bees," and is arranged by the young men. Every body is requested to bring seven cents or some amount that is a multiple of seven.

HERALD ADVANTAGES OF CITY TO THE WORLD

Board of Trade to Make Another Spurt of Activity.

ADVERTISING TO BE DONE.

THE GREAT BOOMER, SI DRAKE, EXPLOITS HIS IDEAS.

A Little New Life Infused Into the Board of Trade at a Meeting Held Last Night—Mr Drake Says That Trolley Lines Will Help This Section Develop—Advertising in Greater New York Papers.

The time for action has come. So says the Board of Trade. While that organization has made the same decision several times before, this will be a particularly strong effort to rouse the Board into activity. The Board held a regular monthly meeting last evening, and, after listening to the vivid vocal pyrotechnics of the renowned Silas D Drake, of Lincoln, prepared the opening steps for an active campaign for the good of Plainfield.

Resignations were received from Woodhull & Martin and Frank J. Hubbard and accepted. The application of O. S. Rogers was favorably reported by the membership committee and elected into the Board. There were no communications or other committee reports.

Then President F. C. Lounsbury introduced Silas D. Drake. The promoter removed his overcoat and opened fire at the Board. The keynote of his discourse was that no city could expect to grow if it was never heard of and that advertising was the golden rod to success in city and town booming. To back his assertions, Mr. Drake told some of his own experiences and told the story of how he had started Lincoln on an 85 cent advertisement in a New York paper.

Another season of prosperity had just begun, he explained, so that this was just the time for Plainfield to begin a campaign of activity. Then the trolley lines and the county boulevard would open up this section. He also referred to Mountain Park as a place not appreciated by most of Plainfield. It was capable of magnificent development. He concluded with some very laudatory remarks about Plainfield and its attractions.

The members then talked over the situation and decided that it was time the Board woke up or died altogether. Various plans for the waking process were proposed but the scheme of raising an advertising fund found the most favor. A committee composed of C. H. Hand, R. B. Rogers and J. Fred MacDonald was appointed to solicit the funds which will be spent in advertising Plainfield and its advantages in the Brooklyn and New York papers. The board will arrange further details of its campaign at the next meeting.

FINE QUARTETTE SINGING.

Star Course Entertainment Was a Very Successful Affair.

Another of the Star Course entertainments was given in the Y. M. C. A. last night, at which the "Old Homestead Quartette," of New York, and Miss Addie Parker Jackson, of this city, appeared. The entertainment was one of the most successful ones ever given in this course, and the hall was filled to overflowing.

The quartette came prepared with a set programme which they attempted to follow, but encores were so frequent and persistent that they had to introduce several selections that were not down on the bill. There was solo singing as well as selections by the quartette, and every number was rendered with a fininish that took the house by storm.

Miss Jackson, too, was well received, and amused her hearers with several sketches in which humor and pathos were equally combined. The programme was divided in two parts, and the entertainment lasted until nearly 10 o'clock.

Epworth League Rally.

The Epworth Leagues of Plainfield, Dunellen, Scotch Plains and Westfield will hold a grand rally in Vincent chapel Friday evening. The affair will be under the auspices of Chapter No. 1, of the First M. E. church, of this city. There will be talks by members of the different leagues, some kind of entertainment, and refreshments and sociability with which to conalude.

Vice President Far Away.

Miss Rachel Maire, a missionary in India, has been elected president of the Foreign Missionary Society of Warren chapel. The society frequently receives interesting letters from Miss Maire who tells about her work.

CALL FOR ECONOMY BY MAYOR SMALLEY.

His First Message Read to Borough Council Last Night.

BRIEF AND TO THE POINT.

RECOGNIZES THE NEED OF HAVING STREETS IN GOOD CONDITION.

He Says There is no Ground for Apprehension That the Laws and Ordinances Will Not be Enforced—Would Like to See the Tax Rate Reduced—Acts, Not Words, Will Tell the Right Story.

The following is the complete text of Mayor Smalley's first message to the Borough Council which was read last night:

Gentlemen of the Council:—It is not my purpose at this time to make any extensive recommendations as to the future. It is my earnest desire, and I am sure it is yours also, to transact the business of the Borough in a manner that will give satisfaction to the public, and to deserve the continued confidence of the tax payers.

One of the most important matters will be the care and maintenance of our streets. This will require constant vigilance on the part of those in charge in order that the most benefit can be derived from the limited fund at our disposal for that purpose. We have many miles of macadamized streets, and it is absolutely necessary that a considerable part of the appropriation shall be used in making repairs which are needed to preserve them.

The present excellent condition of our fire department should be maintained, and the police department continued on its present efficient basis.

While rumors to the contrary have been recently afloat, and some apprehension may be felt in that regard, it will be my effort to see that the laws and borough ordinances are enforced, and that the peace and good order of the borough shall be preserved to the entire satisfaction of our citizens.

Without intending to reflect on any previous administration, nor to intimate that excessive salaries have been paid in all instances, I feel that certain reductions can be made without lessening the efficiency of the borough force, and in this I believe you agree with me as will be shown by your action.

The tax rate is high, and I believe that every effort should be made to economize in every direction where economy is possible without lowering the standard to which we are accustomed, and our officers should be, and doubtless are, willing to aid in this direction.

The ordinance compelling the tying of horses is, in my judgment, entirely too severe, and I recommend that it be modified so as to make it possible to adequately protect the public without working hardship to the individual.

Words will not improve the condition of our Borough, nor lessen our taxes. It will be our actions by which we will be judged, and with the belief that each of us is determined to do his full share toward making the coming year's work commend itself to the public, I will not take up further time except to say that I realize I am taking the place of a man of unquestioned ability, and require your cordial support in my efforts.

N. B. Smalley, Mayor.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR ELECT.

Prosecutor Nelson Dungan, of Somerset County, Chosen Eminent Commander.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., held a regular conclave last evening and elected officers for the ensuing year as follows: Eminent Commander, N. Y. Dungan; generalissimo, Walter H. Freeman; captain general, Harry W. Marshall; prelate, C. C. Howard; senior warden, Samuel Bingham; junior warden, Robert Meeker; standard bearer, G. T. Dunham; sword bearer, Clarence Goss; warden, E. J. Smith; sentinel, Caspar Bolsterli; treasurer, C. H. Rugg; recorder, F. K. VanAuken.

The New Borough Clerk.

Frank Rowley, the new borough clerk, will be at the Mayor's office every morning where he can be seen by anyone having business to transact that comes in his department. It is quite likely that a telephone will be put in the Mayor's office and thus officials can be reached easily.

Supper in New Parsonage.

On Thursday and Friday evenings of this week the Epworth League members of Grace M. E. church will give a supper in the new parsonage. An opportunity will be given those attending to inspect the new building.

ASSESSMENTS WERE SETTLED BY COURT

Opinion Filed on Borough Watchung Avenue Assessments.

ALL BUT FIVE SUSTAINED.

BOROUGH WAS VICTORIOUS IN FIFTY CASES.

Senator Charles A. Reed Represented the Borough in the Fight—Craig A. Marsh and Judge McCarter for the Contestants — Matter Has Been Held in Supreme Court for Several Terms.

The objections that some of the interested property owners found to the assessments as levied by the Watchung Avenue Commissioners of the borough have been settled by the Supreme Court of the State. The opinion was filed at Trenton yesterday afternoon. Of the some fifty-five assessments which the Court was asked to review all but five were sustained.

Among the five contestants who were successful in having their assessments revoked was Mrs. Sarah A. Coward, whose assessment of $1,242 was the largest of any. The other contestants successful were Alexander Shotwell, Wm. Boe, Andrew Lutkins and Louis A. Hummer, who had small assessments.

These assessments were all set aside with costs, on the ground that the Commissioners had arbitrarily divided the lots of the contestants by an imaginary line drawn parallel with the line of the street.

All the other assessments in the present cases were decided in favor of the borough and were affirmed with costs. The decision, it is said, will enable a number of the other assessments to be set aside on the same ground if the cases are brought into court.

The two judges who decided the case held the matter for two or three terms of court before rendering an opinion. Some of the unsuccessful contestants desire to have the case taken to the Court of Errors and Appeals. Either the borough or the contestants can take the case up to that court and possibly both sides may decide to take the opinion of the highest court.

Judge Thomas N. McCarter, of Newark, represented one of the contestants. The others were represented by Craig A. Marsh, of this city. The borough of North Plainfield was represented alone by Senator Charles A. Reed, borough counsel.

THIRD TIME BEFORE A JURY.

Chapot Chamois Company Prove Their Right to Property.

For the third time, yesterday, the Chapot Chamois Company had to face a jury in Justice Mosher's court and proved to their satisfaction that the goods levied upon by a former workman to satisfy a judgment secured against the Chapot & Sons' Leather, Chamois and Glove Company, belonged to them. This time the judgment was given to Charles Reuger.

The same testimony given in court at the two preceding trials was given yesterday, and the jury were only out a few minutes when they returned with a verdict for the claimants. W. S. Angleman appeared for Reuger and W. A. Coddington for the claimants.

The jurymen were Harry Fraleigh, U. B. Crane, J. E. Clarkson, W. E. Alpaugh, J. N. Anderson and George Cook.

No Promises Made.

Mayor Smalley set at rest many minds last evening when he announced at the meeting of the Borough Council that not one of his appointees had been promised the office they received, notwithstanding reports to the contrary. Each man was selected on the ground of efficiency and ability which he believes the appointees have.

Plainfield Birds Won.

Several sports attended a cocking main held at Garwood Saturday evening between birds from Stirling and Plainfield. Plainfield won six straight battles and all the money the mountain sports had with them, so the battle ended with the sixth main, although several others had been arranged.

Marshal Campbell on Day Duty.

Marshall Campbell, of the borough, went on duty today in place of ex Chief Wilson, who has resigned. He will practically fill Mr. Wilson's position doing day duty all time.

LIVELY TIME EXPECTED AT BOROUGH SCHOOL MEETING.

Those Who are Opposed to the Present Administration Will do Their Best to Win — James B. Joy a Candidate.

This evening the annual borough school meeting will be held and a lively time is promised. Five members of the Board of Education retire this year and it is said that there will be an attempt made to side-track them and elect others in their place. It is also thought that there will be considerable controversy over the appropriations for the schools. This is one of the borough institutions that generally furnishes an exciting time and this evening promises to be no exception to the rule.

Among those named as possible candidates for the position of school commissioner is James B. Joy, of Washington Park. Mr. Joy is an available candidate, as he is a person of high educational attainments. There are many people in the borough who think that this is a time when great care should be exercised in the selection of school commissioners and they will attend the meeting this evening for the purpose of seeing that the right men are chosen to fill the vacancies. The friends of Mr. Joy claim that it would be an honor to have such a man in the Board of Education and compliment themselves that they have been able to secure his consent to have his name mentioned.

MIND WRECKED BY LOVE.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD YOUNG MAN NOW A RAVING MANIAC.

Chains Used to Restrain Jilted John Moscow From Killing Himself in the County Jail Where He is Confined.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, March 21—With his hands manacled at his sides, John Moscow, a native of Austria, twenty-five years old, sits in a cell in the Middlesex county jail moaning wildly about the cruelty of his lady love, who has ruthlessly jilted him.

Moscow is a young man of good education and address, and lived at South Plainfield. He was deeply in love with a young lady residing at Roselle. Shortly after the announcement of the engagement the young couple had a quarrel, and the young woman broke the engagement. Moscow took it very much to heart, and his mind became unbalanced. Sunday the young fellow became violent, and was with difficulty restrained from harming himself.

Finally his friends had him committed to the county jail to have an inquiry made into his sanity. Throughout Sunday night the prisoner raved wildly, and by his cries kept the jail in constant uproar. The necessary papers for his transfer to the insane asylum have been made out, and he will be removed today.

WORTHY PATRIARCH IS A WOMAN.

Mrs. Emma Cox Chosen to Head Howell Division, Sons of Temperance.

The election of officers of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, took place last night and was followed by a grab bag sociable. The business was transacted first, and the election resulted as follows: Worthy patriarch, Mrs. Emma Cox; worthy assistant, Miss Dora Bennett; recording secretary, Benjamin W. Hand; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth Cox; financial secretary, Miss Alice Scribner; treasurer, Mrs. Sarah Mattox; chaplain, Miss Maggie Moore; conductor, Mrs. W. E. Koyer; assistant conductor, Miss Sadie Mattox; inside sentinel, Andrew Cox; outside sentinel, William E. Koyer.

Mrs. Nestor Corwin, who has been chaplain of the order for ten years, was obliged to decline re-nomination on account of illness.

The committee in charge of the sociable, consisted of Mrs. Emma Cox, Miss Try Mattox, Mrs. Annie Angleman, Mrs. Radin and Miss May Thompson.

Seeks a Trolley Franchise.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 21.—The City Council will tonight give a public hearing to the Elizabeth Street Railway Company, of which Senator Kean is the leading spirit, and which wants to construct a double track trolley from the Elizabethport and Staten Island ferry to Cranford. The company intends ultimately to extend its line to Plainfield.

Fox Hunt Postponed.

The fox hunt that was to have been held from Campbell's roadhouse Saturday afternoon, was postponed a week on account of the rain. There were a few sportsmen who turned up and for their benefit the dogs were given a two mile run on a trail of anise seed drag.

JOLLY TIMES UP IN THE ELKWOOD FLATS.

Mrs. Beerman Accused of Assaulting Minnie Barrie.

IT STARTED AT A BALL.

MRS. BEERMAN ENTERED IN THE DISCUSSION THAT FOLLOWED.

Minnie Barrie Says That the Married Woman Did Things to Her Face and Neck—Mrs. Beerman Claims That it Wasn't Assault at All—Judge Runyon Did Not Agree to the Truth of That.

The trouble began at a dance last week. Minnie Barrie's partner said some things to Jessie Drake that, perhaps, he ought not to have said. Jessie said that Minnie put him up to it. Words were exchanged. Saturday they talked it over again in Mrs. Kate Beerman's rooms in the second story of the Elkwood building. Somehow it wound up in a fracas in which Minnie Barrie had her face discolored by alleged blows. Mrs. Beerman was consequently called to answer for it before City Judge William N. Runyon this morning.

Jessie Drake and another young woman named Dunn lodge with Mrs. Beerman. They thought it about time that the girls moved away. Then Minnie Barrie, who is employed at Ross' restaurant, went to live there.

Minnie Barrie says that "that horrid Drake girl" took her to task for her conduct at the ball. Mrs. Beerman, she says, took Jessie's part. It ended, she claims, by Mrs. Beerman assaulting her and beating her across the face and squeezing her neck, which was uncomfortable to the victim.

This morning, Boundsman Frederickson arrested Mrs. Beerman on complaint of Minnie Barrie. The trial took place at once, Mrs Beerman pleading not guilty. She explained she did not assault the Barrie girl but laid hands on her with a perfectly honest intent. The Judge didn't agree with her. She was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $10 or go to jail for thirty days. Later in the morning the Judge agreed to remand the sentence if the prisoner would agree to go back, care for her two little children and reform her ways. She promised and was set free.

SUMMIT TO HAVE TWO WARDS.

Commission Appointed to Make the Division Reports.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Summit, March 21.—On Friday last Judge Vail, of the Union County Court of Common Pleas, appointed George H. Williams, William F. Bailey and George H. Hodenpl commissioners to divide the city of Summit into wards. Yesterday the report of these commissioners, with the necessary maps showing the outlines of the wards, was filed with County Clerk William Howard at Elizabeth. The comissioners have divided the city into two wards, with the same bounderies as the present election districts. That part of Summit lying to the north of the railroad track is to be known as the First Ward, the remainder of the city is to be the Second Ward. Under this division into wards there will be a Chosen Freeholder elected from each.

THE NAVAL RESERVES.

Volunteer Sailors to Receive Extra Pay Very Soon.

Some question has been raised in Washington as to the proper construction of the law authorizing the paying of the volunteer Navy two months' extra pay, but Congressman Parker informed Lieutenant Goldingay, of the Newark division, last week that payment will be made just as soon as practicable. The Naval Reserves will receive their pay in the order in which the applications are received. A certain form of application blank has to be filled out and duly vouched for. Lieutenant Goldingay has sent for the blanks and will lose no time in gathering the necessary particulars. This money will come very handy to many of the Plainfield boys, the greater part of whom had about come to the conclusion that the bill would never become a law.

Not Yet Decided on Plans.

The Daily Press is informed on excellent authority that the members of the Church of the Redeemer have not yet decided upon plans for their new church, notwithstanding contrary reports.

—The members of the home department of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday school are invited to attend the regular session of the school this week, and take part in the review exercises.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

Mr. H. C Lippencott of 39 Chatham street, says: "After my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills I cannot do otherwise than speak in the highest terms of them. I was a victim of kidney complaint and dreadful backache, which was so bad in damp weather or when I caught cold I could not get about. I was in the hardware business at this time and the heavy lifting and being on my feet so much greatly aggravated the troubles. I was at my worst when I concluded to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and I got them at L. W. Randolph's drug store. It only required a few doses to convince me that I had the right remedy. My backache disappeared before I had finished the first box. You are at liberty to refer anyone to me and I will gladly give my experience in detail."

MRS. PLACE EXECUTED

She is the First Woman to Meet Death in the Electric Chair.

SECRECY AS TO THE TIME

Gov. Roosevet Would Not Disregard the Physicians' Report of Sanity and Mrs. Place Paid the Penalty for Murdering Her Stepdaughter--Usual Decorum Was Observed by the Unfortunate Woman.

Sing Sing, N. Y., March 21.—Mrs. Martha Place was put to death in the electric chair in Sing Sing Prison yesterday for the murder of her stepdaughter, Ida Place, in Brooklyn, last year.

In preparing for the execution Warden Sage had observed the greatest secrecy, and none but those especially sumoned knew the time that Mrs. Place was to meet her death. In fact it was generally supposed that the fatal act would occur in the early hours of Tuesday.

The witnesses, eighteen in number, waited impatiently in the death chamber for ten minutes. Then there was a knock on the door through which the condemned entered. The door swung open. Warden Sage came first. He held Mrs. Place by the left arm. On her right was the clergyman who has been attending her.

Mrs. Place very pale, and her eyes were closed. She walked firmly, however. Behind her were two young women. They were physicians who had been invited at the request of the Governor to attend the condemned woman on her last journey. They were both determined looking. One was very short and the other tall. They did not show any sign of nervousness.

Mrs. Place wore a black dress. It was plain. There was a piece of white flannel around her throat. She had received no stimulant other than a cup of strong coffee before the walk to the death chair was begun.

Mrs. Place was led to the chair, which was at the west end of the room. She was backed up to it. As the bend of her knees touched the edge of the chair she sat back and then the two women stood in front of her shielding her from the sight of the witnesses while the electrodes were adjusted exactly as in the case of men condemned to death. The work of fixing them did not occupy a second over a minute and a half.

All this time Mrs. Place kept her eyes closed. Now and then there was a movement of her lips, and once she murmured "God have mercy." It was hardly loud enough to be heard. It was not heard except by those who stood very close to her.

When the electrodes were fastened the women physicians arranged the clothing so that the one fastened at the leg was not to be seen at all.

Then the Warden beckoned them to step back and they moved away about five feet. The other witnesses, except the prison physician and the guards, were seated along the wall on three sides of the room. The guards stepped back, and as they did the current was turned on. There was not a movement of the body—not a quiver. Not half the witnesses in the room knew that the shock had been given, so quick and silent was it.

The voltage the electrician had used was 1,760, and that lasted but four seconds. During these four seconds the hands of the woman were clenched. In one hand she held a Testament. At the end of four seconds the current was reduced to 250 volts, and it remained at that force for fifty-six seconds. One minute was the total time taken. The current was then turned off entirely.

Dr. Irvine, the prison physician, stepped to the chair and placed his finger on the throat of the woman to find if there was any pulse. There was none. Life was extinct. It had been practically so from the second that the current entered the body. Then there was a wait of a moment or two and the customary second shock was given.

This was not necessary, the physicians agreed, but it is the custom and the custom was followed.

The current was kept on this time only a few seconds. When it was turned off Dr. Irvine again examined the throat for a pulse, and then called the women physicians up. He took a stethescope from his pocket, and one of the women opened the bosom of Mrs. Place's dress. Dr. Irvine examined the heart then with the aid of the instrument. He found no life. Calling one of the women to his side he placed the stethescope in her hand, and she listened for a moment. As she straightened up she shook her head.

The witnesses who had been present at other executions of the death sentence by electricity all said that this was the most successful that had been held. The Warden said it was the same as all of them. There was not an incident from the beginning to the end that was other than had been expected. Mrs. Place was killed humanely.

Just as soon as the witnesses were released from the death chamber, a messenger from the Warden telephoned to Gov. Roosevelt and Suprintendent of Prisons Collins that the execution had taken place; that it was in all ways successful, and that the autopsy was to be completed within the hour.

While the execution was going on a crowd of upward of twenty-five representatives of newspapers stood on the hill overlooking the prison yard, hoping to get some glimpse of the witnesses when they left the death chamber. They were unsuccessful. The witnesses were taken out by a back way and were not seen from the outside.

Mrs. Place's crime was the murder of her 17-year-old stepdaughter, Ida Place, at their home, 598 Hancock street, Brooklyn, on Feb. 8, 1898. The murder was committed on the afternoon of that day, and when the woman's husband, William W. Place, came home from his office in Manhattan early in the evening she attached him with an axe and he had to flee from the house to save himself from being murdered, too. The woman struck him several blows as he entered the dark hallway of his home, and he ran into the street covered with blood. Mrs. Place had locked the door when her husband ran out. When it was forced open she was found in a bedroom, covered with a sheet, and with the gas turned on and escaping into the room. Ida Place lay on her bed dead, with carbolic acid burns on her face and mouth.

Mrs. Place was discovered before the gas had had any serious effect on her.

The motive of the crime was believed to have been the woman's jealousy of her young stepdaughter. Mrs. Place had been a housekeeper in Mr. Place's home before she became his wife. There were frequent and bitter quarrels, it is said, between the girl and her stepmother. Mrs. Place was tried before Judge Hurd in Brooklyn, last summer, and was found guilty of murder in the first degree.

The Court of Appeals on appeal affirmed the decision, and a subsequent petition to Gov. Roosevelt for executive clemency was rejected after a commission in lunacy, appointed by the Governor, had reported that the woman was of sound mind when she committed the crime.

PRESIDENT AND SPEAKER.

No Great Significance Attached to Their Presence at Jekyl Island

Washington, March 21.—From a Republican source it is learned that there is not much excitement among the friends either of the President or of Mr. Reed at Washington over the possibility of the two meeting at Jekyl Island. The President and Mr. Reed have lived within three squares of each other during an entire Congress without becoming more attached by reason of their proximity.

With every opportunity for intimacy Mr. Reed has been at the White House but once, and that was at a time when the war cloud was bursting, and it was hardly possible that there should not be some sort of co-operation between the Executive and the Speaker of the House. It is felt, therefore, that Jekyl Island is big enough for both to visit at the same time without significance necessarily attaching to their being there. Every assurance that could possibly be desired is given that, as far as the President and Mr. Reed are concerned, at least, their being on the island at the same time is without design. If there was any design in the mind of any one else it is a thing that cannot be accounted for.

Friends of the President say that so far as he is concerned there is no motive to avoid Mr. Reed and no disposition to be less friendly than the conduct of the Speaker may compel. The White House door has always been open for Mr. Reed to enter whenever he might desire, and there has never been any open personal difficulty between them that would require a clandestine meeting for reconciliation. It is intimated that Mr. McKinley can hardly be expected to apologize for having been nominated and elected President, and that so far as the interests of the Republican party at large are concerned both men ought to be desirous of preserving them.

It is suggested that it would be difficult to find a conciliatory tender the President could make to Mr. Reed, unless it were a promise not to run again for the Presidency, or else an offer to abandon the entire policy of expansion, including not only the possession of the Philippines and Porto Rico, but that of Hawaii, and the abandonment forever of the idea of constructing the Nicaragua Canal.

As to his candidacy for renomination, the President is quoted as saying just before his departure for the South that it was of 1899, not of 1900, he was thinking. This the President's friends say truly represents his state of mind. He wants his present administration to be a success, both for his own credit and for the good of the country.

BURIED ARMY BEEF.

Disposal of Refrigerated Meat Issued Before Santiago.

Chicago, March 21.—The government court of inquiry returned from Fort Leavenworth Monday and resumed the examination of witnesses in the matter of canned and refrigerated beef. It is probable that the court will remain in session in Chicago two or three days. The greater portion of the witnesses summonedare those suggested by Major Lee, the representative of Major-Gen. Miles before the court. His list includes seven names, among them that of Dr. Nicholas Senn. In addition, Lieut.-Col. Davis, Judge-Advocate of the court, has a list of several persons whom he purposes calling.

The first witness was Col. D. Jack Foster of the Sixth Illinois Infantry. He testified that at Ponce he drew refrigerator beef once. When the meat reached camp it was pronounced bad, and a board of inquiry condemned it and it was buried. He did not try it again. The regiment was about six miles from port.

Capt. Edward J. Demmick of the First Illinois, testified that some of the canned roast beef he saw was spoiled, and was thrown overboard on the voyage to Cuba. After the surrender of Santiago refrigerator beef was issued. The regiment was about three miles from port. One lot was buried as soon as unloaded, and this occurred on two other occasions.

Last week Col. E. A. Garlington, one of the U. S. A. Inspector-Generals, was in the city to see a number of prospective witnesses with the view of ascertaining if their testimony would be material before the court of inquiry now investigating Gen. Miles's army-beef charges. It is unofficially announced that he discovered testimony of an interesting character. He proceeded to Omaha, where he is said also to be engaged in obtaining evidence.

It is probable that in the remaining session of the court the cause of Gen. Miles will be advanced by the employment of an attorney skilled in cross-questioning.

Major Lee, however, will continue to represent the commanding General.

Schley Passes One Test.

Washington, March 21.—Winfield S. Schley has passed the physical examination for promotion to the rank of rear-admiral in the navy before a medical board convened at the Washington Navy Yard.

To complete the legal test he must pass also a moral, mental and professional examination. His papers are before a board of rear-admirals which convened at the Navy Department today. It is said to be an unprecedented thing for an officer to fail in a professional examination for promotion to the rank of rear-admiral.

HAVANA TOUGHS ACT BADLY.

Have a Secret Society that Does Not Like Police.

Havana, March 21.—During the continuation of the trouble between the Havana police and the populace, three policemen were killed and about twenty-five persons wounded on both sides. Public opinion supports the police, without reserve.

There seems to be concerted action among the Nanigos, the secret society of the low class of colored men here, to attack the police upon every possible occasion. The trouble of the last two nights occurred in the outlying wards, inhabited by the worst classes of people.

The bravery and determination shown by the police is much commended, and the force is rapidly regaining the prestige which it had lost among the better classes.

The police station at Cerro was attacked yesterday evening by a number of colored men, bad characters from the city slaughter houses. The police repelled the attack, and the rioters left three men badly wounded. No policemen were hurt.

Chief of Police Menocal gave orders to suspend public dances Sunday night, and Gen. Ludlow, in command of the city of Havana, sustains him. At the ball of the Society of Pilar, near Cerro, the police approached for the purpose of discontinuing it, when the people fired on the officers from the house. It was returned by the police. Two policemen were seriously wounded, as were eighteen of their opponents.

In different wards three policemen were assassinatd while on duty. The murderers crept behind and stabbed them to death. Three negroes in Gallano street attacked a policeman with knives. The officer defended himself with his revolver, killed one of his assailants and wounded another. The third man escaped.

A Cuban officer attached to the command of Col. Acea attacked a policeman on San Rafael street with a machete. The officer shot him through the heart and killed him. An American negress was killed by a stray bullet.

The police in all cases of conflict with the populace have followed orders. When approaching disturbers of the peace courteously in many cases they were attacked before they had finished speaking. The agitation promises to continue.

Two of the captured prisoners admit that there was a conspiracy to drive the police out of the city by a series of Cuban outrages. Fifty Cuban soldiers from Marianao, belonging to the command of Gen. Rodriguez, kidnaped three former Spanish guerrillas, employes of the Toledo plantation, on Saturday, and took them into the bush, where they were maltreated and, it is supposed, killed one of them. The other two, who were slashed with machetes, were rescued by a detachment of the Second Illinois Regiment. Three Cubans were captured and are in Marianao jail, charged with murder.

The Cubans set fire to the plantation in five places on Saturday night, but Major Russell B. Harrison, the provost marshal, and a party of horsemen extinguished the flames and captured several of the Cubans. The Toledo plantation, which is situated two miles from the camp of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, was partly destroyed.

A Cleveland Hotel Burned.

Cleveland, O., March 21.—The Brooklawn Hotel, corner of Fairmount street and Euclid avenue, was partly burned just after 5 o'clock Monday morning. More than fifty persons were asleep in the building when the fire broke out. A high wind was blowing, and the flames had gained a great headway when discovered by a policeman. He promptly ran through the building, awakening the guests. In many cases it was necessary to break in doors in order to arouse the sleepers. A panic ensued, but all the occupants finally escaped without injury. Several women were carried down the fire escapes by firemen. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is about $10,000.

Wreck on the Lake Shore.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 21.—The Southwestern limited train on the Lake Shore Road was wrecked at West Seneca Monday morning by an ice-clogged switch. The engineer, Henry S. Shattuck, was killed, and a brakeman named George W. Roberts was severely injured. While the passengers were roughly shaken up, none was injured.

MR. SHERMAN GROWS WEAKER

His Symptoms Not Favorable and the Doctors Discouraged.

Kingston, Jamaica, March 21.—The condition of Mr. John Sherman, who is a passenger here on the American tour of the West Indies with a party of Americans, is not favorable. He is much weaker and the doctors are discouraged.

The United States cruiser Chicago, which has been detailed to convey him back to the United States, was expected here yesterday.

Mr. Magee will have charge of the case until they reach Old Point Comfort.

It may not be possible to transfer Mr. Sherman to the Chicago until the Paris reaches Santiago de Cuba. He appreciates that his strength is declining and is desirous of getting home.

State Department Informed.

Washington, March 21.—The State Department received a cable message from Consul Dent, at Kingston, Jamaica, saying that ex-Secretary Sherman was not so well.

TWELVE ON THE DEATH LIST.

Two More Charred Bodies Found in the Windsor Hotel Ruins.

New York, March 21.—The search of the ruins of the Windsor Hotel for bodies of victims of the disaster was continued yesterday with increased energy. One body was found just before 10 o'clock and sent to the morgue at Bellevue. It was merely a trunk, the head and parts of the limbs having been burned away. After the finding of the first body the search was pushed more vigorously than ever.

Just before 11 o'clock parts of the limbs of a body which may have belonged to the trunk of the one discovered an hour earlier were unearthed.

Some of those who went to the morgue said that they thought that the body was that of Frederick Leland. He was a cousin of Warren F. Leland, and was employed in the wine room.

Another body was found near the centre of the ruins on the Fifth avenue side at 11 o'clock.

The second body was evidently that of a woman. It was as badly charred as the other, the head and limbs being burned away. A corset steel was found imbedded in the side. A small plain gold ring with no inscription upon it, and a part of a kid glove were found near the body. This body was also sent to the morgue.

On the body were found parts of a black serge jacket and of a black silk shirt. On the jacket was a button covered with black silk, on which was the mark "W. K. & Co., extra."

The revised police list, as given out this morning, shows that twelve persons have actually perished. In all sixty-four persons are missing. Of these forty-seven are thought to have perished, and seventeen others, whose names were found on the hotel register on Saturday, have not been heard of. The police will venture no opinion as to the probable fate of this last number. They confine the names on the list of persons actually missing to those for whom repeated inquiries have come, coupled with reports that at the time of the fire they were in positions of extreme danger.

The missing, aside from residents of New York city and servants, are:

Adams, Mr., and three daughters, of Cleveland, O.

Bradley, Mrs. N. C., of Pittsburg, sister to Mrs. Andrew Carnegie; was ill in a room on the sixth floor with Miss Fuller; inquired for by Mrs. Fuller and Miss Bradley, who escaped and are at the Hotel Manhattan; name not on register.

Fuller, Miss Margaret, of Pittsburg, a niece of Mrs. Andrew Carnegie; was ill in a room with Mrs. Brady.

Welche, Miss Nora or Margaret, a guest, 22 years old, daughter of the late Eugene Welche, an officer in the French army, from whom she inherited $50,000. For a time she was an inmate of Bloomingdale Asylum, but for several years had lived at the Windsor. On being informed that she was to be discharged from Bloomingdale she begged to be allowed to remain there; name not on register.

CLASH OVER THE JEFFERSON FEAST

Doller Dinner Democrats Believe That Croker is Working Against Them.

New York, March 21.—There is today a threat of open war between the $10-diner Democrats and the $1-dinner Democrats. The leaders of the latter are disturbed by reports that Richard Croker is trying to break up their Jefferson day feast.

At a meeting of representatives of the organizations interested in the dollar Democratic dinner, the men present representing organized labor, protested against the proposed political features of the affair. They said they could not attend the dinner if it was to have any political significance, and they objected to an indorsement of the Chicago platform as a part of the programme. This unexpected protest left the arrangements for the $1 dinner in a somewhat unsettled state.

To-day it is rumored that the men who objected to the introduction of politics and party platforms at the feast are working in the interest of Richard Croker and his man Belmont, who are in charge of the $10 dinner. The reports that have reached the leaders of the $1-dinner Democrats say that Croker is determined to break up their feast in order that his own affair may appear to be the only Jefferson day dinner. It is understood that the widespread interest in the cheaper dinner threatened to completely upset the plans of the Tammany chief and make his expensive feast a failure. He is now credited with suggesting and backing the movement to prevent an indorsement of the Chicago platform at the other Jefferson day meal.

The men in charge of the $1 dinner say that Mr. Croker cannot break up their affair any more than he can disrupt the Democratic party by repudiating the national platform and policy of that organization. They are going ahead with their arrangements, and are still confident that their dinner will be so successful that the Croker-Belmont feast will look like a Democratic club free lunch. They regard Croker's attempt to interfere with their plans through the delegates from labor organizations as a confession that his own dinner is going to be a failure.

WHO OFFERED BRIBE

Standard Oil Company Ask Attorney-General Monnett.

NO ANSWER TO QUESTION

The Ohio Official Who Published the Story that He Had Been Approached With an Offer of $400,000 to Stop His Prosecution of the Standard Oil Company.

New York, March 21.—The Standard Oil inquiry before Master Commissioner Brinsmade, which has been in progress at the Hoffman House since last Friday, was abruptly stopped yesterday by the Standard Oil Company's attorneys. The hearing was for the purpose of taking evidence for the Supreme Court calling on the Standard Oil Company by the Attorney-General of Ohio for alleged failure to obey the decree of the Supreme Court calling on the Standard Oil Company to sever its relations with the Standard Oil Trust Company.

Instead of going on with the hearing Attorneys Virgil P. Cline and M. F. Elliott, representing the Standard Oil Company, presented a letter to Attorney-General Monnett demanding that he name the man who, according to his statement, offered him a bribe of $400,000 to stop or delay the suits now pending in the Ohio Supreme Court against the Standard Oil Company.

Attorney-General Monnett read the letter, which was handed to him by Attorney Cline, with flushed face, and pocketing it he left the Hoffman House without saying a word. With him was George W. Rice, the Ohio man who is said to be responsible for most of the litigation against the Standard Oil Company, and who said that he was disappointed at not receiving an opportunity to answer John D. Archbold's charges made on the stand last Friday that Rice had tried to blackmail the Standard Oil Company.

The letter of Attorneys Cline and Elliott to Mr. Monnett was as follows:

"New York, March 20, 1899.

"Hon. F. S. Monnett, Attorney-General of Ohio:

"On March 4 inst. George Rice announced to the public press that a bribe of $500,000, less $100,000 commission, had been offered to you to induce you to stop or delay proceedings against the Standard Oil Company now pending in the Supreme Court of Ohio.

"You are reported to have denied entirely at Toledo the Rice story, but by the time you arrived at Columbus, on the evening of the same day, you concluded that the story was true, and accordingly in various newspapers on the morning of the 5th inst. you made the statement that the Standard Oil Company, through some friend of yours, had offered you $400,000 to influence your action with respect to the cases pending against it and other companies in the Supreme Court of Ohio. Reputable newspapers of the State, notably the Cleveland Leader, the Toledo Blade and the Ohio State Journal, have called upon you to disclose the name of the 'friend' who thus corruptly approached you.

"You are reported in the Cleveland Plain Dealer of the 7th inst. as saying that 'if you were to give out the name of your friend half a dozen departments of the trust would be after him at once, and it might be they could force or persuade him to keep his mouth shut.' You do not seem to realize that the reason given by you for refusing to disclose the name of your friend is an admission that the company does not know the name of the party whom you say it commissioned to offer you $400,000, and therefore you must have known that the alleged friend made the offer to you without the authority or knowledge of the Standard Oil Company.

"In the New York World of the 9th inst. you are reported as saying that you had written the friend who tried to bribe you that you would not expose him until public interest demanded it.

"In another interview in the Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune of the 6th inst. you are reported as saying that 'your friend had agreed to protect you, but also of others acting with him, because on the 14th inst. you said in the public prints that 'these men were telegraphing you from New York.'

"While nothing in your story has directly connected the Sandard Oil Company with the attempted bribery, you have desired the public to assume such connection. We now demand that you give the name or names of the person or persons who made such an offer to you, claiming to represent the Standard Oil Company, that we may take steps to quiet this last and most vicious of the many false and sensational stories to which you have given currency. Respectfully,

"VIRGIL P. CLINE,
"M. F. ELLIOTT,
"Attorneys for Standard Oil Company."

After leaving the Hoffman House, Attorney-General Monnett held a long conference at the Fifth Avenue Hotel with his associate counsel, W. L. Flagg and S. W. Bennett and George D. Rice. He was not inclined to discuss the letter he had received from Attorneys Cline and Elliott.

"It will be answered at the proper time and to their entire satisfaction," he said. "I do not care to say when that time will be. They say in their letter to me that in talking to a reporter for one Ohio paper I denied the story that a bribe had been offered to me. You may say that I do not remember any such interview."

"You never did deny it," said Attorney Bennett, who was present.

"Is the charge true that a bribe was offered to you?" Mr. Monnett was asked.

"I do not care to talk about the matter any further at present," was the reply.

STOCKS GO HIGHER.

Wall Street Full of Rumors About Sugar Beats and Union Pacific.

New York, March 21.—There was another wild scramble on the Stock Exchange yesterday for Sugar stock. The day was an eventful one. Interest was not confined to a jump of 10 points in Sugar, of 6 points in Brooklyn Rapid Transit, or to a decline of nearly 15 points in Continental Tobacco. Many people were more concerned in the advance of New York Central from 132¾ Saturday noon to 137, in a gain of over 2 points in both Union Pacific common and preferred, and of 3 points in Jersey Central. There was gambling, and there was legitimate buying. Seldom are the two Stock Exchange elements of speculation and investment buying as clearly controlled as they were today.

Sugar opened with a whirl, 4,500 shares selling from 180 to 178. The stock closed Saturday at 172. Later in the day the price went up to 182 on the report that Norman B. Ream, of Chicago, is in the city to negotiate the sale of the Glucose trust to the Sugar trust. After Sugar had displayed its climbing abilities Continental Tobacco was brought forward for a tumbling act. This stock sold at 57¾ Saturday. Monday it opened at 54¾, and in a very short time after business started dropped to 43. Then it rushed back to 56. American Tobacco in the meantime fell from 209 to 203½, subsequently going back to 211. An accumulation of buying orders in Brooklyn Rapid Transit, which has just secured control of the Brooklyn Elevated, caused that stock to open at 105 and shortly after go to 110½.

Played in the advance in the Vanderbilt stocks, which have been weak lately. The return of W. K. Vanderbilt from Florida and the conference here Saturday of the presidents and operaing officials of the Vanderbilt lines started anew the stories of a complete amalgamation of the roads in the Vanderbilt system, which form a connecting link across the continent. New York Central and Union Pacific were the especially strong features of the strictly investment securities. The story in Wall Street concerning these two properties was that the Central road would take over the Union Pacific, giving in return a 3½ per cent. bond for each share of Union Pacific preferred or for two shares of common. This is practically the basis on which the Lake Shore consolidation was made.

China Friendly to Italy.

Rome, March 21.—Admiral Canevaro, Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, today returned the visit of the Chinese Minister, Sir Chih-Chen, with whom he had a prolonged interview yesterday, presumably regarding the Italian demand for a concession of San-Mun Bay. Sir Chih-Chen will be received by King Humbert to-morrow.

According to the Tribune, the Chinese Minister expressed to Admiral Canevaro the apologies of the Tsung-li-Yamen for returning the note of Signor Martino, then Italy's Minister at Pekin, embodying the Italian Government's request, and said that if another note were presented it would be examined with the "greatest friendship toward Italy." Regarding this the paper remarks:

"The presentation of a new note would show that the Minister has no further mission and that the matter would be arranged between the Tsung-li-Yamen and the Italian Foreign Office."

Admiral Grenet has received a telegram of congratulation from Emperor William upon his appointment to the command of the Italian squadron in Chinese waters.

How the Main Blew Up.

Cincinnati, March 21.—A local paper prints a story that the location of the key board by which the Maine was blown up in Havana harbor has been found by an American engineer officer. The story is that Capt. T. L. Huston, of the Volunteer Engineers, who entered the service from Cincinnati, and who was assigned to the duty of cleaning out fortifications of Havana, discovered in the gun room of the Cuartel de Fuerte a wooden box or hut, in which he found a gutta percha tube containing one large copper wire and several smaller wires. He also found evidence of a keyboard having been torn away.

Capt. Huston confided his discovery to Mr. Warren J. Lynch, newly appointed general passenger agent of the Big Four, who was visiting Havana, and said he was about to trace the wires to prove his theory that the Maine was exploded from that point. The wreck of the vessel can be seen from this gun room not more than a hundred yards distant. The room was in a part of the prison to which access was allowed only to a few officers.

Mr. Bryan's First Gun.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 21.—Hon. W. J. Bryan arrived here from Knoxville with Gov. McMillin and attended a banquet last night given by the Bryan Birthday Association. Its members give each year on March 20, Mr. Bryan's birthday, a dinner, to which leading Democrats of the State are invited. This event is the first the Nebraskan has attended.

In the afternoon Mr. Bryan delivered a speech at the City Auditorium, which his friends say, is the first gun of the campaign of 1900.

First Snow in London.

London, March 21.—The first snow of the winter fell yesterday. The weather is cold. Last night the temperature was 13 degrees below freezing. Work in the shipbuilding yards on the northeast cost is at a standstill, owing to the heavy snow storm prevailing in that section.

Say Pope's Life is Ebbing.

London, March 21.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily Chronicle says: "Although there is no immediate alarm, it is generally felt that the Pope's life is ebbing away. Communications have recently passed between the different Cabinets relative to the eventuality of a conclave."

The Easiest Way

To rent your house if it is in prospect of remaining vacant for the next twelve months is to step into or send to The Daily Press office a small advertisement for the Cent-a-word Column.

The Cost Is Trifling

When you consider the profitable results that may come from such publicity. Thousands of Plainfield people have tried it and found that the plan

Works and Pays Well.

Mayor Smalley's Bow.

Without attempting to expound high and new ideas for the municipal government of North Plainfield, Mayor Smalley made his official bow last night with a message to the Borough Council that makes a favorable impression because of the business-like treatment he gives the situation that confronts him and the new Council. It is brief and to the point, and therein is in keeping with the ideas that should gauge his official conduct at the outset. It would be assuming more than is so if one was to believe that Mayor Smalley possessed an intimate and ready knowledge of the official affairs of the borough now. The words of his message indicate that Mr. Smalley has a keen realization of this fact, and in it he deals in a purely informal manner with the administration that confronts him.

In one particular part of his message he sets at rest the ill stories, circulated during the campaign, that if he was elected the borough would become a "wide-open" town in respect to a loose and liberal enforcement of the ordinances relating to the good morals and peace of the community. While there were few who really believed that such gossip was more than passing campaign fiction, it is reassuring to read Mr. Smalley's own utterances that every law and ordinance will be enforced if he has anything to do with it.

The message indicates that Mr. Smalley has ideas that the present is a favorable time for economy, and a reduction in tax rate if that is possible. Such changes are always welcomed by the taxpayers if the municipal service is not lessened to a degree where discomfort and inconvenience is caused. The progressive spirit of the members of the Council and the Mayor precludes such a result, however.

Lower Rate of Interest.

The Merchants' Association, of New York, is vigorously opposed to the passing of a law by the New York Legislature reducing the legal rate of interest from six to five per cent. The opposition of this association to a change of the New York law obtains contemporaneous interest in New Jersey, where Assemblyman Cooper's bill, with the same object in view, is likely to be passed. A portion of the Merchants' Association circular says:

The average merchant or manufacturer with small capital is accommodated by local banks and at the same time enjoys every facility for purchasing goods at the lowest possible prices. If the legal rate of interest is five per cent. bankers will not be willing to accommodate the small merchants and manufacturers, as a consequence of which they will go to the wall.

Very much the same argument was introduced in New Jersey several years ago when the bill reducing the rate from seven to six per cent. was pending before the Legislature. The moneyed men of the State, and especially the banks, declared that a six per cent. rate of interest would be ruinous to their profits and would necessitate the cancelling of mortgages and compel the borrowers to negotiate new loans, which would be hard to secure and would doubtless cause many business failures.

The Legislature, however, was prevailed upon not to heed such statements, and as a result six per cent. was made the legal rate of interest. The banks and the borrowers soon adjusted themselves to the new condition of affairs, and since then no one will attempt to say that either side has suffered by the change.

Recently we witnessed what was thought to be some very warm politics in North Plainfield, but the borough will take a back seat when compared with political affairs in Passaic, if the following from the News of that city is true: "The fight in the First ward has been on for some time, and a Welsh man can hardly get a light for his pipe from anti-Welsh man. Small boys of Democratic rearing in the Third ward are careful to throw stones only at dogs which belong to people suspected of being Republicans."

The exports of the United States now exceed those of Great Britain, and lead all other countries by several million dollars. American push and intelligence cannot be retarded even by the constant see-sawing tariff policy which we have been undergoing for years. But how much greater we would be in that class of trade if we had a permanent tariff policy is mere conjecture, but the present record is evidence enough that there would be a wide difference in our favor.

In Pittsburg eggs are selling for five cents a dozen owing to rivalry between produce dealers. Such competition as this needs the attention of the authorities. How can the aristocratic hens of New Jersey attempt to compete with such a price as this? Even the pauper hens of Canada and Novia Scotia may be expected to go on a strike rather than lay eggs to be sold at such prices.

If the Organized Aid Association of Plainfield carries out its plan of establishing a soap factory in which the poor of the community may find employment, the local counterparts of the genus hobo may be expected to give the enterprise a wide berth.

It is a very good thing for the members of the New Jersey Legislature to regard their office as a public trust. But when they allow capitalists to make a trust out of nearly all the public commodities, they are carrying the idea too far.

A camera that will take a picture in one-six hundredth part of a second is being made in Chicago. At last we may be able to catch some of the lightning-like editorials changes of our esteemed contemporary, The News.

"Policeman Called a Brute." So reads a heading over an item in a New York newspaper. The cop doubtless regards such an appellation as a pleasant variation from being called a blackmailer and a rogue.

The Atchison Globe thinks it curious that though a woman picks out her own husband she takes three of her own sex along to pick out a hat.

Capital punishment is not inflicted in five States—Colorado, Maine, Michigan, Rhode Island and Wisconsin.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Of 513 bills introduced in the Legislature and placed on the calendar, less than 200 have received any attention and few of these are of any importance. And yet the leaders in the Legislature have fixed upon Friday of this week for adjournment.—Newark Advertiser.

THEATRICAL.

When Miss Anna Northend Benjamin started for the front as a special correspondent for Leslie's Weekly, she had no thought of turning the results of her trying experiences to such excellent public use as is now being accomplished through the delivery of her engrossing illustrated lecture on "Tampa, Key West and Cuba During the War." Aided by the Plainfield Camera Club, through whose efforts the lecture will be illustrated by the stereopticon process, Miss Benjamin will appear at Stillman Music Hall on Wednesday night, March 22d. Society has promised to give the lady liberal patronage and it is hoped the house will be completely sold out before the opening night.

Pope Leo XIII was 89 years of age on March 2. Owing to the pope's great age and recent illness the question of his successor is one that attracts considerable attention. WESTFIELD

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press)

Westfield, March 20—The annual school meeting will take place this evening in the Westfield Club Hall at 8 o'clock. Two new trustees are to be elected to take the places of Martin Welles, Harry Taylor and Harry Knight, whose terms have expired. At the meeting held last spring it was decided that the board of trustees should consist of five members instead of six, and that is why only two trustees will be elected at the meeting this evening. It is expected that there will be an exciting time at the meeting this evening, for it is known that the representatives of Mountainside borough will try hard to elect their candidate, while a large number of We tfielders want Knight and Welles re-elected. Then there is another faction in the race in the shape of the women of the district, who intend, if possible, to put a woman in the board. Under the law a woman may be elected a trustee, but cannot vote for that office.

The members of the board of election are very much surprised at the action of the Township Committee in refusing to pay them the $3 asked for their work in canvassing the vote at the last election. The law says that they shall be paid $7 for their work on election day and does not provide for the cost of canvassing the vote.

Mrs. Fanny Crosby, the blind poetess, gave a delightful lecture at the Presbyterian chapel last evening and the choir of the church, for whose benefit the lecture was given, will add a neat sum to its treasury as there was a large attendance present.

Ex-Chief of the Fire Department James P. English, who was injured by falling from the top of a building Saturday morning, is getting along nicely as can be expected of a man with three ribs broken.

Fred Winters is the new clerk at the postoffice, Loyal West having left to accept a position with the New York Life Insurance Company.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

A little attention at night before retiring will work wonders with the most neglected hands. Wash them in warm soft water, using plenty of good soap to get them clean. Ivory soap is excellent for toilet purposes, because of its purity. When thoroughly cleansed, anoint with a lotion made as follows: One-half ounce of glycerine, one-half an ounce of bay rum, one-eighth ounce benzoin, one-fourth ounce vaseline, one-fourth ounce of borax. Rub this well into the skin and put on a pair of loose gloves to sleep in. This treatment will keep them soft and white.

It is not necessary to pay for the services of a professional manicure, for with a few tools and a little practice you can do the work quite as well yourself. Buy a pair of curved nail scissors, a small file with a handle, a nail polisher, a box of paste and one of polishing powder. After the hands are washed push the skin back from the nails with a pointed stick of hard wood or an instrument made of ivory and sold for that purpose. Trim the nails evenly and smooth the edges with the file. Rub a little paste on each nail, dust with the powder, then rub lightly with the polisher. This should be done once a week, and after the nails are in good condition it will require very little work to keep them so.

The Queen's Maids of Honor.

The duties of Queen Victoria's maids of honor are by no means light. During their period of service, they must be in readiness to appear before her majesty immediately after breakfast. The first task of the day is to read aloud marked passages in a great pile of daily papers. As soon as this reading is over, the maid in attendance has to hurry away and dress herself for a drive with her royal mistress. After lunch there generally comes a leisure space; but even then she cannot leave the palace, as she may be called upon to walk or drive with the queen during the afternoon. If, however, her majesty goes out alone, the maid is free until six o'clock. Then, as a rule, there is more reading. Sometimes the order is changed, and the maid of honor may have a pile of photographs or sketches to arrange; if not, the charity needlework, upon which her majesty spends so much time, is brought out and she sews until it is time to dress for dinner. The long suffering waiting lady then gets another brief respite, as the queen dines without her. The position needs culture, patience and tact to enable them to discharge their duties successfully.—Puritan.

A Two-Inch Traveling Clock.

The newest travelling clock comes in a leather case only two inches long. It is a decided thing of beauty as well as one of the novelties of the season. The face of the clock is only as large as a ten cent piece, and it forms the center of an enamelled flower.

As far as outward appearances go, the new travelling clock might easily be mistaken for a court plaster case. It was made to be carried in the pocket.

When the case is opened an enamelled flower is seen, in the center of which is the timepiece. The case is so arranged that the part which carries the flower may be pulled out and made to stand up, thus forming a unique little desk clock.

These clocks come incased in three shades of leather, brown, green and deep red. The green cases open to disclose a green enamelled lucky clover leaf with the face of the clock in the center. Others show a chrysanthemum in white enamel, still others pansies both in purple and yellow. These novel travelling clocks cost $7.95 and at Christmas time one would make a charming little gift.—New York Journal.

A Sensible Fad.

One of the most sensible "fads" among the girls just now is to save up all their old jewelry, old gold thimbles which have the tops worn off, gold fob chains, gold bracelets and pins, and even necklaces, and take them to some chains, gold bracelets and pins, and reliable jeweler, who will either melt them down and make what she wants out of them, or else will exchange them allowing her for the weight of the gold. One girl made a collection for several years of broken bits of jewelry, and, with some of her grandmother's added to them, sold them to her own jeweler, and now is the happy possessor of a beautiful pearl necklace which she got in exchange.—Harper's Bazar

Cocoa Icing.

Cocoa is now much used in the place of chocolate for icing cake. The icing is made by beating the whites of two eggs and mixing with them nearly a cupful of powdered sugar. Add two teaspoonsful of cocoa. An icing that many prefer is made without any eggs. Boil four tablespoonsful of granulated sugar with the same quantity of water for a minute, then add a teaspoonful of vanilla, and two tablespoonsful of cocoa, boil a minute longer, and the icing will be ready to use.

"No," said the man who is careful not to overstate, "I will not say that since I have been learning the wheel I have become a new man, but I can truthfully state that I have been compelled to grow at least ten square inches of new cuticle."—Boston Herald.

OUR YOUTHS DEPARTMENT

THE GOBLIN'S PARTY.

The Grisly Grum and the Wam-bel-lee Woe
And the fierce old Ketch-a-boy M n
Got together one day in a dark, lonesome way,
A nice little party to plan.
The party came off in the Wirebrier wood,
And the big Boo-boo was there,
And the Gilly-go-lump, with the two story hump,
Came creeping forth out of his lair.
The Hip-pi-o-hop-pi-o-nos-si-ri-n s,
And the pink eyed Pil-li-cum-blame;
The monstros Miff and the Bil-li-go-biff,
And the Snip-snap-siz-zor all came.
The supper was served in remarkable style;
There were fricassees, roasts and plain stews
Made of girls and of boys full of mischief and noise,
Who advice of their parents refuse.
The party broke up at an hour very late,
And all the goblins agreed
That cantankerous boys, full of mischief and noise,
And bad girls are blessings, indeed.
—Arthur J. Burdick.

Veronita.

Since the beginning of the revolution one privileged character has shared the tent of the President and Vice President of the Cuban republic. He is little Venancio Verona, or "Veronita." He is the youngest soldier in the "army of liberty," and has passed through all the dangers, trials and hardships of that awful struggle. A few months after the war broke out a boy not more than 12 years old rode into the insurgent camp in Najassa. He had escaped from the city of Puerto Principe the night before. Halting in front of President Cisneros' headquarters, he said: "I have come to join the 'insurrectos.' The Spaniards have killed my father, and I am the only one left in our family old enough to fight. If I can have a gun I would like as far as possible to take my father's place and fight for Cuba." He got the gun, and with it the love and protection of Salvador Cisneros, that grand old man who gave up all to battle for his country's freedom. A special order was sent to the United States for one light rifle for a young soldier of 12 years. When the gun was placed in Veronita's hands he was undoubtedly the proudest boy in Cuba. The president became very much attached to him, and each night had a pile of sarones (large bags made of palm leaves) placed under his tent for Veronita's bed. The bond of affection between them grew so be as strong as between father and son. Many times I have seen them, the boy of 12 and the man of 72, asleep in the same hammock. While on the march Veronita rides one of the President's spare horses, and never complains, no matter how fatiguing the journey may be, or how sharp the pangs of hunger.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The Dandelion.

Just before commencement a class, in which there were a good many little girls were told to write an essay on flowers. One little girl of 8 told her mamma afterward that all the other children picked on such beautiful flowers as they loved best, but that no one thought of the poor little dandelion. Her thoughts of that meek little flower were so sweet, we now give it to other little ones to think over:

"The dandelion did its best to be bright and gay all day long; it had a broad, happy, golden face, that was not admired by all who looked at it.

"'Oh, I wonder why nobody loves me!' it said sadly. 'It must be other flowers are better than I. Will anybody ever care for me? Will I close my leaves and die?'

"'No, no,' said the gentle wind, passing o'er. 'Keep hoping.' Just then a busy bee came buzzing o'er the tall meadow grass and rested on the dandelion, for the dandelion had honey in its heart. 'Ah!' said the bee, 'I am so glad I found you. You are so sweet.' The dandelion turned its face to the sun, saying, 'I have not lived in vain.' Each of us can do some good for somebody."

A Queer Pet.

William Simpson, who lives at Pine Castle, Fla., near Lake Marie, has a small boy named Rob, who tamed an alligator and loved him as dearly as if he had been a goat. The 'gator was called "Pete," and proudly sported a copper ring in his head as a civilized 'gator who knows his tricks should. One day Pete disappeared, and he stayed for three years. In the meantime Robert received many spankings because he was continually playing with alligators and getting all sorts of scratches and bites. Now comes the queer part of the story, that recalls the interposition of fairy godmothers. Bob was making overtures to a big alligator one day, and the saurian came at him with his large, open countenance, and the little boy began to say his prayers. Just in the nick of time another 'gator appeared, and the first 'gator had a fight on his hands. When the fight was over Rob discovered that his alligator ally was the long-lost Pete grown indeed, but still wearing his stamped copper ring. This time Pete stayed, and people go for miles to see youngster ride on his back.

FUN AND SENTIMENT.

"I don't think that Mr. Eatington ever declines an invitation to dinner." "Oh, no! He's a sort of social lion seeking what he may devour."—Puck.

"I see it is becoming the fad to have your wedding cinematographed." "But a feller doesn't have to have his courtship cinematographed, thank heaven!"

"Pa, what is a lineal descendant?" "A lineal descendant is a person who has to fall back on some praiseworthy ancestor for his own importance."—Detroit Free Press.

"As to the emperor," said the empress dowager, "the silly boy hardly knows whether he is dead or alive." "From which," remarked Li Hung Chang, "I infer that he reads the papers."—Puck.

Visitor—"What is the meaning of this large and enthusiastic demonstration? Is there a peace jubilee being he'd?" Boy—"Naw, sir. De local football club wiped de earth up wid dere rivals."—Norristown Herald.

Book Canvasser—Pardon me, madame, but are you interested in the study of prehistoric man? Miss Antique—No indeed! It keeps me busy trying to get the man of to-day interested in me.—Chicago News.

"Young Populare is the most self-possessed man I ever saw. He never gets the least bit rattled under any circumstances." "Why, in what exigency did you ever see him tried, to have such confidence in him?" "I saw him exhibiting his first baby to half a dozen women at once, and answering every question rationally."

A Tart Old Lady.

Out in Indiana a good many years ago a certain old lady, summoned as a witness, came into court wearing a large poke bonnet, such as was then much affected by rural folks. Her answers to the questions put to her being rather indistinct, the court requested her to speak louder, though without much success.

"The court cannot hear a word you say, my good woman," said the judge. "Please to take off that huge bonnet of yours."

"Sir," she said composedly and distinctly enough this time, "the court has a perfect right to bid a gentleman take off his hat, but it has no right to make a woman remove her bonnet."

"Madam," replied the judge, "you seem so well acquainted with the law that I think you had better come up and take a seat with us on the bench."

"I thank your honor kindly," she responded, dropping a low courtesy to the court, "but there are old women enough there already."—Law Notes.

Mistakes in Telegraph Messages.

Two funny telegraph stories are printed by the Pittsburg Disptach on the authority of a former employe of the Western Union company.

He was receiving a dispatch from Albany, in which the sender was not overcareful in spacing his letters. Lawton took the address as follows:

"Dr. A. Wing, room car agent, Central depot, New York."

The dispatch came back with the marginal report that there was no such person at the address named. The operator at Albany was called up and explanations followed, in consequence of which the address was changed to "drawing room car agent, central depot."

A still more absurd mistake was once made in the same office when a telegram was received for "James W. Giles, pie clerk, Brooklyn navy yard." This was afterward amended to read, "James W. Gillespie, clerk, Brooklyn navy yard."

A Correction.

An amusing double-barreled case of heterophemy occurred not long ago at a meeting of the licensing sessions in an English city. The chairman, discussing the law requiring the bona fide travelers to go a certain distance before being entitled to liquid refreshment, referred to it as being "three miles as the flow cries."

A superior person hastily rose to correct his worship, but could get no nearer than "Your worship means 'as the fly crows,' or rather," he added hastily, "'as the cry flows.'"

No one was rash enough to make a further attempt, and the magistrates went on in their efforts in behalf of sobriety.

Honest Advice.

The Rev. Mr. Perkins being called upon suddenly to address a Sunday school, thought he would get a few original ideas from his young hearers. "Children," said he, "I want some of you to tell me what I shall talk to you about to-night. What shall I say?" At first there was no response. "That bright little fellow over there," said he, pointing to a youngster on a back seat, "What shall I say to you to-night?" In a little, piping voice came the answer:—"Say amen and sit down."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A Resourceful Bride.

"Can we afford," he faltered, sadly, "to have a skeleton in our closet?"

As for the woman, she wept, for they were indeed wretchedly poor, but she was not, therefore, altogether unresourceful.

"We might keep it in the hall and use it for a hat rack!" exclaimed the bride, for her mind was giving way under the constant effort to practice economy.—Detroit Journal.

His Purpose.

"What are you assuming such a belligerent air for?" said the small potentate's adviser. "Don't you know that we don't want to fight?"

"Of course, I know it. And I realize that we've got to do something exceedingly plausible to keep the other people from finding it out."—Washington Star.

Speyer. In Roxheim brach bei einem Brande in ihrem Hause die 80-jährige Frau Kapper durch das Gebälk des Speichers durch und wurde tödtlich verletzt.

Landau. Die Stadtgemeinde erwarb von der Militärbehörde die mit der Zeit in Folge Neubaus von Kasernen frei werdenden vier alten Kasernen, sowie eine Reithalle und den früheren Pionier-Uebungsplatz um den Gesammtpreis von 442,723 Mark. Spätestens in zehn Jahren wird die Stadtgemeinde ihren neuen Besitzstand antreten. Eine gute Einnahmequelle besitzt die Stadt Landau in ihren Bauplätzen aus ehemaligem Festungsgelände, aus denen wohl schon über 2,000,000 Mark gelöst wurden. Der gleiche Betrag kann sich noch aus den zur Verfügung stehenden Bauplätzen ergeben. Als die Festung der 1870 geschleift wurde, erhielt die Stadtgemeinde das sämmtliche Festungsgelände gegen die Verpflichtung, den Exerzierplatz an der weißen Kaserne und jenen an der Reiterkaserne anzulegen, was mit etwa 200,000 Mark abgemacht war.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Die Bestrebungen des Kaufmännischen Vereins um Einführung der durchgehenden Arbeitszeit erfahren auch in Beamtenkreisen lebhafte Unterstützung. Sämmtliche Bureaus der Generaldirektion der Staatseisenbahnen haben in einer Eingabe um versuchsweise Einführung der siebenstündigen ununterbrochenen Arbeitszeit nachgesucht; 95 Prozent der Beamten der Generaldirektion sollen unterschrieben haben.

Krailsheim. Wie alljährlich, so wurde auch heuer wieder das „Haraffenfest" gefeiert (Erinnerungsfeier an die vor 520 Jahren stattgefundene, siegreich abgewiesene Belagerung von Krailsheim durch die damaligen Reichsstädte Hall, Rothenburg und Dinkelsbühl) durch Zapfenstreich am Vorabend, Tagwache, Festzug in die Johanniskirche, Festpredigt von Stadtpfarrer Hummel und Vertheilung der „Haraffen" an die Schuljugend.

Ludwigsburg. Der Generalvertreter der bekannten großen Cichorienfabriken von Frank u. Sohnen hierselbst, A. Gutscher, wurde in Frankfurt auf dem Hauptbahnhof verhaftet, als er im Begriff stand, mit dem Ostende-Expreß nach Wien abzureisen. Er soll in zwei Jahren an die 13,000 Mark Kundengelder unterschlagen haben. Er bezog an Gehalt und Provisionen gegen 10,000 Mark jährlich, behauptet aber, durch Repräsentationspflichten zu höheren Ausgaben gezwungen gewesen zu sein.

Rottenburg. Das unlängst hier in einem Plattengrab gefundene römische Steindenkmal ist von Professor Dr. Sirt, Vorstand des Lapidariums in Stuttgart, besichtigt und erworben worden. Nach dem Urtheil Sachverständiger stellt das Relief eine in den württembergischen Römerfunden bisher nicht vertretene mythologische Szene dar, nämlich Herkules' Abschied von der lydischen Königin Omphale.

Schwenningen. Als kürzlich der Fastnachtsumzug beginnen sollte, wollte ein junger Bursche in die Luft schießen, hielt aber die Pistole nicht hoch genug und traf einen in den zwanziger Jahren stehenden jungen Mann, Namens Bühler, so unglücklich in den Hinterkopf, daß dieser bewußtlos und lebensgefährlich verletzt vom Platze getragen werden mußte.

Ulm. Die bürgerlichen Kollegien beschlossen, auf der unteren Bleiche weitere 36 Arbeiterwohnhäuser zu errichten, und zwar einstöckige Einfamilienhäuser, die aus verschiedenen Gründen den zweistöckigen Gebäuden vorzuziehen sind.

CHAPTER V.

The sutler's "shack" at Camp Cooke was crowded with officers that evening, and the episode of Nevins' address was the talk of all tongues. Certain civilians were there, too, frequently of Sancho's place, but they were silent, observant and unusually abstemious. To say that Nevins had astonished everybody by an exhibition of feeling and an excess of conscience would be putting it mildly. But the fact was indisputable. He himself, after adjournment, exhibited to the interrogative major two long letters, recently received from San Francisco, in graceful feminine hand and signed, "Your sad but devoted wife, Naomi." One of these referred to Lieutenant Loring, "whom Geraldine met at West Point and saw frequently the summer and fall that followed his graduation."

There were members of the court who sought to hear what Loring had to say on the subject, but he proved unapproachable. All men noted the amaze—indeed, the shock—that resulted from Nevins' public and somewhat abrupt mention of the sister's name. The judge advocate sat for a moment as though stricken dumb, his eyes fixed and staring, his face pallid, the muscles of his compressed lips twitching perceptibly, his hand clinched and bearing hard upon the table.

There were few army women at Camp Cooke in those days—only two or three veteran campaigners and one misguided bride—but had the post been full of them there could hardly have been curiosity more lively than was exhibited by most of the court all that long afternoon and evening. Conjecture, comment and suggestion passed from lip to lip. One or two men even went so far as to drop in at the tent assigned to the lonely accused, and, after expressing interest and sympathy and a desire to see that he got "fair play and a fresh start," they ventured to inquire if Nevins knew why Mr. Loring had been so much astonished, if not overcome, by the mention of the name of Nevins' sister-in-law.

Nevins didn't know, but at that moment he would have given his hopes of mercy to find out. He was writing to his wife when his visitors came, demanding explanation. He could think of several possibilities, any of which in his unenlightened mind might give him a claim, even a hold, on the hitherto intractable West Pointer. Why, why had he not heard or dreamed before this long trial came to its dramatic close that there was some strong and mysterious connection between him and Loring, between the prosecutor and accused? The one plausible theory was that Loring and Geraldine were or had been affianced.

From all his wife had told him in their few days of moderate content and apparent bliss he knew Geraldine to be beautiful, gifted and attractive to any man despite her poverty. That she had been petted and spoiled, that she was selfish to the core, grasping and ambitious, he had never heard, yet might have inferred from Naomi's faltering pleas on her sister's behalf early in the days of their wedded life. In his eagerness to learn something of the truth he sent a messenger during the afternoon, after the final adjournment, and begged that Mr. Loring should come to see him. The reply was that Mr. Loring would do so later. Only two men succeeded in seeing Loring that afternoon and evening—the post commander, Major Starke, at whose quarters he was housed, and the veteran president of the court. On the plea of being very busy writing the record of the week's session he had excused himself to everybody else.

There had been something of a scene before the adjournment that morning. The court was ordered to try "such other prisoners as might properly be brought before it," and it was understood that two deserters, captured at Tucson, had announced their intention of pleading guilty and throwing themselves on the mercy of the court. Higgins had been sent to Fort Yuma. It would take long weeks to get the evidence in his case from New Orleans, but the two victims at Cooke knew well that their case was clear. There was no use in fighting. The sooner they were tried the shorter terms would they serve as prisoners. Nevins finished at 10 o'clock. Loring's brief stupefaction was conquered not without evident effort. Vouchsafing no response to the plea of the accused for mercy, he announced that he submitted the case without remark, and the president nodded to Nevins the intimation that he might retire. Nevins slowly gained his feet, took a long look about the silent array, hesitated, and then with his eyes on Loring said:

"I should like to be assured that the judge advocate accepts the trust. It will be two or three months before the orders in my case can get back from Washington, meantime my pay is stopped and has been for three months back. My wife must have means to live on, and that's all I have to offer. There is no other way of getting it to her that I consider safe."

Loring's white hand was trembling visibly, but his head was bowed as though in painful thought. The president had to speak. "I presume you will not refuse, Mr. Loring?"

For another moment there was silence. At last, slowly, the judge advocate looked up, turned to the accused and said, "Write Mrs. Nevins' address on that," holding forth as he did so a heavy official envelope. Wrapping the pin and ring together in note paper, he stowed them in a smaller envelope, moistened the gummed flap, closed it and slid it within the heavier one which Nevins, later addressing, laid before him. Then, turning to the president, Loring calmly bowed and said, "I will accept, sir."

Nevins' watch, with the envelope containing the diamonds, was stored away.

Five minutes later, cleared of all persons except the members and the judge advocate, who in those days did not withdraw during the deliberations of the court, this open air temple of military justice was given over to the discussion on the findings and the determination of the sentence. In low, grave tones those members who had opinions to express gave utterance to their views. The votes on each specification and to the various charges were recorded, and finally the sentence was arrived at. By 11:30 the case of Brevet Captain Nevins was practically concluded, and the president, eager as were his associates to finish their work after their long detention at this hot, barren, yet not inhospitable post, looked briskly up at the silent, somber young officer at the opposite end of the long table.

"Shall we take ten minutes' recess and have a stretch before you go on with the next case, Mr. Judge Advocate? I understand both victims plead guilty, and we can do 'em up in 30 minutes."

Nevins' watch was going the rounds of the court at the moment, its beautiful and costly case and workmanship exciting general admiration. Again the judge advocate was slow and hesitant in his reply, utterly unlike the prompt, alert official whose conduct of the trial had won golden opinions from every man, old or young, in the service. It was nearly half a minute before he spoke, and then only after the president reminded him that several officers wished to start that afternoon for the Gila, so as to meet the eastward stage at Sancho's two days later.

"Give me—an hour, sir. I cannot go on sooner."

Out under the canvas shelter at the adjutant's office stood the two prisoners with their guards. For an hour or more they had been waiting their turn. A shade of disappointment stole over one or two faces, but the president's answer was prompt.

"Certainly, Mr. Loring. The court owes it to you," and the recess was declared accordingly. The post quartermaster was one of the junior members, and Loring detained him. Bidding the orderly remain in charge of the premises, he turned to this official.

"You have a safe at your office. Will you permit me to place these in it—and come with me until I do so?"

"Certainly. Come right along. It's but a step."

Wrapped in a silken handkerchief, Nevins' watch, with the envelope containing the diamonds, was stored in a little drawer within the safe and securely locked. "You need a drink," said the quartermaster to the engineer, noting again his pallid face.

"None, I thank you," said Loring briefly, and without another word took himself straightway to Major Starke's. At 12:30, when court reconvened, the judge advocate went swiftly and methodically through his work, read the orders, propounded the usual questions, swore the court, took his own oath, read the charges and recorded the pleas without loss of a second of time or use of a superfluous word. At 1:15 the court stood adjourned sine die, leaving the president and judge advocate to finish and sign the record. By 3 p. m. five of its members, in the "four mile" road wagon belonging at Cooke, were speeding southward, hoping to catch the stage to take them to their posts lying far to the east. By midnight the record was well nigh complete, and Loring, locking up the papers, stepped softly out into the starlight.

Over across the contracted parade a lamp was burning dimly at the guard tents, and several others flared at the brush and canvas shack of the sutler. Everywhere else about Camp Cooke there were silence and slumber. The muttered word of command as the 12:30 relief formed at the guard tent, the clink of glasses and murmur of voices, sometimes accentuated by laughter, came drifting on the night from the open clubroom. Beyond the guard tents the dim walls of the corral loomed darkly against the dry, cloudless, star dotted sky that bordered the eastern horizon.

The sentry, slowly pacing his beaten path along the acequia that conducted the cool waters of the Yavapai from the northward hills to the troughs in the corral, moved noiseless, dim and ghostly, and Loring, listening for a moment to the faint sounds of revelry at the shack, turned away to the north, passed the rude shelters which had been built by the labor of troops for the accommodation of the officers and the few families there abiding and found himself presently on the open plain full 100 yards out from the buildings and beyond the post of the sentry on that flank, who, far over at the west end of his long beat, at the moment was dreaming of the revels he'd have when his discharge came, and neither heard nor saw the solitary officer whose one desire was to get away by himself to some point where he could calmly think. He needed to be alone. Even Blake, whom he had grown to like and whom he believed to be still at the camp, would have been in the way.

A strange fellow was Loring, a man grown, so far as judgment and experience were concerned, when at the age of 20 he entered West Point, and from the very start became one of the leaders of his class in scholarship and later one of the prominent officers of the battalion of cadets. In scientific and mathematical studies indeed he had no superior among his comrades, but languages and drawing, as taught in those days at the academy, threw him out of the head of the class, but could not prevent his landing a close second to the leader in general standing.

Never a popular man in the corps, he commanded nevertheless the respect and esteem of the entire battalion, and little by little won a deeper regard from his immediate associates. He was a man of marked gravity of demeanor. He rarely laughed. His smile was only a trifle more frequent. He was taciturnity personified and for two years at least was held to be morose. Of his antecedents little was known, for he never spoke of them and seldom of himself. He was methodical in the last degree, exercising just so long in the gymnasium every morning during the barrack days and putting on the gloves for 15 minutes every evening with the best middleweight in the corps.

There were times in his early cadet days when he was suspected of having an ugly temper, and perhaps with reason. Exasperated at some prank played at his expense by a little "yearling" toward the close of his first—the "plebe"—encampment, Loring actually kicked the offender out of his tent. The boy was no match for the older, heavier man, but flew at him like a wildcat then and there, and Loring suddenly found himself in a fierce and spirited battle. The little fellow had pluck, science and training, and Loring's eyes and nose were objects to behold in less than a minute. For that moment, shame stricken, he fought on the defensive, then stung by the taunts of the swift gathering third class men he rushed like a bull, and two heavy blows sent the yearling to grass, and that fight was ended. But challenges rained on him from "men of his size" and weight, and the very next evening he went out to Fort Clinton with one of the champions of the upper class, and in 15 minutes was carried away to hospital, a total wreck. It was ten days before he was reported fit for duty.

Then camp was over and barrack life began. Not a word would he or did he say about his severe defeat, but systematically he went to work to master the noble art of self defense, and two years from that time the corps was treated to a sensation. Loring, back from cadet furlough, had been made first sergeant of Company D, in which as a private and first class man was the very cadet who had so soundly thrashed him. Loring proved strict. Certain "first class privates" undertook to rebel against his authority, his former antagonist being the ringleader. Matters came to a crisis when Loring entered the names of three of the seniors on the delinquency book for "slow taking place in ranks at formation for dinner."

It was declared an affront. His old antagonist demanded satisfaction in the name of the aggrieved ones, and that fight was the talk of the corps for six months. Loring named the old battleground at Fort Clinton as the place, and in ten minutes utterly reversed the issue of his "plebe" effort, and the first class man was the worst whipped victim seen in years, for he fought until fairly knocked senseless. That was Loring's last affair of the kind. He went about his duties next day as seriously and methodically as ever, without the faintest show of triumph, and when the vanquished cadet finally returned from hospital treated him with scrupulous courtesy that before the winter wore away warmed even to kindliness, and when the springtime came the two were cordial friends.

The summer of his graduation Loring was ordered on temporary duty as an instructor during the encampment of cadets. He did not dance. He cared little for society, but one evening at Cozzens' he was thrilled by the sweetness of a woman's song, and, gazing in at her as she sang to an applauding audience in the great parlor, Loring saw a face as sweet as the voice. Several evenings he spent on the broad veranda, for every night she sang, and ere long noticed him. So did prominent society women, and read his unspoken admiration.

"Let me present you to her, Mr. Loring," said one of the latter. "She is a lovely girl, and so lonely, you know. She is engaged as companion, it seems, to Miss Haight—a dragon of an old maid, who is a good deal of an invalid and seldom out of her room. That is why you never see the girl at the 'hops' at the Point, yet I know she'd love to go."

Loring felt that he blushed with eagerness and pleasure, though he merely said "Please," and so Miss Geraldine Allyn met Lieutenant Loring of the engineers, and within the fortnight he knew, though he strove to hide it, that he was madly in love with her. Such beauty, such a voice, such appealing loneliness were too much for him. Six long weeks, though he became her shadow, Loring struggled against his passion. He had planned that for years he should remain single until he had saved a modest nest egg. Then, when he had rank and experience, had moved in the world and had ample opportunity to study women, he would select for himself and deliberately lay siege to the girl he thought to make his wife.

But when his duties were completed with the 28th of August and he should have gone to his home, Loring remained at the Point, fascinated, for Miss Haight and her musical companion staid at Cozzens' through September. In October they were to go to Lenox, and, before the parting, Loring's ring was on that little finger—she had promised to be his wife. Home then he hurried in response to the pleading of his sister, but the moment the Lenox visit was over and Miss Haight returned to New York thither went Loring, to find his fiancee at the piano, with a middle aged, somewhat portly civilian bending eagerly over her, and so engrossed that he never saw or heard the intruder.

This was Nov. 4. The engagement was barely six weeks old, but Loring's ring was not on her finger as she rose in confusion to greet him. More than that, she wrote a piteous letter to him begging for her release. She "really had not known her own mind." Loring gave it without a word to or without other sight of her, packed his trunk and left New York on the morning train. There was a sensation at the Point when it was announced that Miss Allyn was to marry Mr. Forbes Crosby, a wealthy "board of trade man" of 40.

Loring reappeared no more. He got his orders for San Francisco, and he sailed late in the fall, and barely had he gone than the story spread from lip to lip that Mr. Crosby had broken the engagement, that Miss Haight had decided to go abroad and would not require a companion—what was more, that Forbes Crosby had been making very judicious investments for Miss Haight herself, and people really would not be surprised if—and then Geraldine Allyn, too, disappeared from New York and was next heard of living very quietly with a married sister, herself an invalid, a Mrs. Nevins, whose husband was said to be somewhere in the army.

And so that girl whom Loring had so deeply loved was sister to the wife of this military castaway, this unprincipled gambler, swindler and thief, and he, Loring, had charged himself with a commission that might bring him once more face to face with her who had duped him.

Circling the camp at wide distance, he had crossed the acequia and reached the Gila road. To the north now lay the camp, and the twinkling lights of the sutler's bar, and between him and these twinkling lights two dark objects bobbed into view, some 30 yards distant and as plain as he could hear his own heart beat Loring heard a voice say, "Then I'll count on you not to let him out of your sight," and the voice was that of Nevins—Nevins, who was supposed to confine himself day and night in arrest to the limits of the garrison.

THE NOSE.

The nose which is furrowed reveals kindness and benevolence.

The broad nose, with spreading nostrils, indicates great sensuality.

The fleshy, arched nose indicates cruelty, the spirit of domineering.

The blunt, slender nose is the sign of a quick wit, ironical, but light and shallow.

The retrousse (pug) nose is the mark of a feeble mind, even gross, but cheerful and gay.

The long nose is a sign of power, even of genius. This is quite a consolation for those so blessed.

The straight nose indicates a just mind, serious, fine, judicial and energetic. The nose like an eagle's beak is the sign of an adventurous spirit, greedy for gain.

SPORTING.

THE GREAT INDOOR GAME

WHAT IS GOING ON IN LOCAL BASKET BALL CIRCLES.

Happenings of Interest to Plainfield Enthusiasts—What the Local Teams are Doing—Gossip Among the Players.

It is greatly to be regretted when a team in basket ball or any game cannot meet defeat in the spirit of true sport, but seeks to cover up the story of its loss. No team should prepare to encounter outside adversaries unless it is willing to bravely face defeat as well as victory. A fair defeat is just as honorable as a fair victory, and it certainly doesn't look right to boast over a victory and then hide away the story of a defeat.

The basket ball team of the School of Mines, Columbia College, has made an excellent record this season, defeating several of the big teams. Mon. evening, the team comes to this city to play the local Y. M. C. A. boys. Manager George E. Fuller says it will be one of the best games of the season and also one of the last. The game is called for 8:15 o'clock.

GOLF.

Last evening there was a meeting of the Board of Trustees and the greens committee of the Park Golf Club and several matters of interest were discussed. In the first place it was decided that the clubhouse will have to be enlarged to provide for the increase in membership. This will be attended to at once. It was also decided to have the course in shape as soon as possible for spring and summer play. An interesting schedule of events will be arranged and the coming season will be a lively one. A large number of new members were elected last evening and the membership is constantly growing. James C. Peck was elected a member of the board of trustees by virtue of his office as treasurer of the Park Club. Plans for enlarging the clubhouse have not yet been decided upon, but will be at an early date and the improvements will be such that another change will not be necessary for the present.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss Emma Gillem, of Duer street, is riding a new Cleveland wheel purchased from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

William Simmons, the crack colored rider of this city, is out on the road again on his wheel. He expects to do some fast work again this season.

Miss Wilhemena Vroom, of Chas. L Moffett's law office, is the proud possessor of a "Nassau" wheel and will soon join the throng of wheelers.

L H. Bill, eastern manager of the Lozier Manufacturing Company, makers of the Cleveland wheels, was the guest of F. L. C. Martin, local agent for the Clevelands, Saturday.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

With the approach of spring interest in bowling is fast dying. Since the conclusion of the Central Journal Bowling League there has been but little interest among the members of the Park Club in the sport. There is some talk, however, of starting it up again by a series with the Roselle Casinos.

Suit Against the Central Railroad.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 21 — A suit for $10,000 damages has been brought by Isador Levis, of Newark, against the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey. December 14th last, the plaintiff says he was driving across the Bond street crossing of the Central Railroad in Elizabeth, when his wagon was struck by a train. The vehicle was smashed and Levis declares that he was permanently injured. In the declaration which has been filed, it is alleged that no flagman was stationed at the crossing and that the accident was wholly due to the negligence of the defendant company.

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says: "I was taken with Typhoid Fever, that ran into Pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even set up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of Consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief. I continued to use it, and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." This marvelous medicine is the surest and quickest cure in the world for all Throat and Lung Trouble. Regular sizes 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store; every bottle guaranteed.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

PERSONAL GOSSIP OF INTEREST TO CITY AND BOROUGH.

In Brief are Told the Daily Doings of Many Residents and Visitors Who Go and Come in a Social and Business Way

Miss Frances Wier, of Philadelphia, is visiting friends in town.

Mrs Robert Rushmore, of this city, is stopping in New York for a short time.

Stacy Raynolds, of Jackson avenue, is confined to his home with a serious illness.

Mrs. A. R. Switzer, of Somerville, is visiting Mrs. J. W. VanHorn, of Duer street.

Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, of East Front street, has been entertaining company from out of town.

Robert A. Suffren, of Sycamore avenue, has returned after a stay at the Laurels, Lakewood.

James Walker, of West Fourth street, is gradually failing, and there is no hope of his recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Blimm, of East Third street, are rejoicing over the arrival of a bouncing baby boy. The little fellow arrived last evening.

HE CAPPED IT.

The Englishman Was no Match for the Yankee.

A Yankee had been bragging for some time in the smoking room of the hotel about various marvelous feats of performed, when an Englishman, who had listened, bethought himself that he would defeat the boastful "colonel" with his own weapons, so he suddenly spoke up.

"Well, yes, Colonel," struck in the Britisher, "Those were big swims, I admit, that you say you've seen; but I've known one that beats all yours hollow!

"Two years ago I started from Liverpool for New York in one of the Cunard boats. There was a little commotion and excitement on the wharf at leaving, and a man dived into the water; but we took no particular heed of it.

"Next morning we remembered it, though, for sure enough there was a man swimming abreast of us at the rate of fifteen knots an hour. We called out to him and heaved him a rope, but he refused all assistance. At night, of course, we lost sight of him, but when the sun rose, there he was again, striking out as lively as possible. And so he stood by us all the way across, sometimes diving under our keel and coming up on the other side; sometimes playing round us like a dolphin, now on his back, now on his side, now turning head over heels, wheel fashion.

"But two hours before we reached New York he began to forge ahead, and soon distanced us altogether; and when we got alongside we found him standing on the quay dressed to receive us."

The Yankee had eyed the speaker fixedly during his narration.

"That's a true yarn, I s'pose, stranger?" he said, interrogatively.

"Oh, yes, quite true; I saw it myself," was the reply.

"You saw that man swim across from Liverpoool to New York alongside yer steamer all the way?"

"Exactly."

"Stranger, did yer know that man?"

"Well, no," answered the Englishman, cautiously. "I didn't know him; but I saw him, nevertheless."

"Stranger, I was that man!"

A Lesson That Failed.

"My wife has a disagreeable habit of leaving her pocketboook in exposed places," said the man who was telling the story. "I have cautioned her more than once that she would lose it if she wasn't more careful.

"I came down town with her the other morning, and the first thing she did after boarding the car was to deposit her purse upon the car seat while she relieved herself of the terrible suspicion that her hat wasn't on straight. A movement of her arms knocked the purse on the floor, where it remained until I picked it up.

"I rescued that purse no less than a dozen times before we reached the bargain counter that was the goal of my wife's ambition.

"Events around a bargain counter occur with kaleidoscopic swiftness, and I soon found myself the sole guardian of my wife's purse, which lay before me on the counter, where it had been deserted by her in a mad rush for the other end of the counter.

"To teach her a lesson, I emptied the contents of the purse in my pocket and retreated to the edge of the crowd to await developments.

"It wasn't long before my wife crowded her way out, triumphantly holding aloft a twenty-five cent cream jug that she had succeeded in buying for forty-nine cents.

"'I didn't know that they charged things here,' I began, feebly.

"'They don't," she answered. 'I have money left for three ice cream sodas and a strip of car tickets.' And she exhibited the contents of her purse to proved her assertion.

"I nearly fainted when it dawned upon me that I had taken the contents from a purse belonging to some other woman.

"I have no desire to retain possession, and if the woman who lost seventy-nine cents, a postage stamp, three hairpins and a recipe for making angel food will call at my office she may have her property."—Detroit Free Press.

YOUTHFUL GREAT MEN.

Famous at an Age When Most Men Begin Their Career.

Many of the greatest careers have been made by young men. Washington was but forty three when he was called to the command of the American Revolutionary army. Henry Clay was Speaker of the House of Representatives at 34. Stephen A. Douglas was but 39 when he first became a candidate for the Presidency. John Jay was Chief Justice of the United States at 45.

James G. Blaine was only 39 when he became Speaker of the House of Representatives. Alexander Hamilton took charge of the Treasury at 32 years of age. Martin Van Buren, at 36, organized the famous Albany Regency, and was Governor of New York at 40.

John C. Calhoun, in his 42d year, was Vice President of the United States. John C. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, was Vice President at 32, and a candidate for the Presidency at 35. George B. McClellan was only 38 when nominated for the Presidency.

In military life, especially, young men have been most conspicuous. Gen. Grant was but 40 years of age when he began winning a name for himself in our civil war, and was only 43 when the war closed.

Napoleon was master of France and Europe before his 30th birthday. Alexander the Great had conquered the world and left it before he was 33 years old. Fremont, the "Pathfinder," had explored the Rocky Mountains before he was 30, and was running for the Presidency at 43.

Columbus was in the 30's when he explained his ideas of the Western passage and enlisted the Spanish sovereigns in the project that led to the discovery of America.

Richard Cobden was but 34 when he founded the Anti-Corn Law League, which revolutionized the commercial policy of Great Britain.

William Pitt, ranked by some historians as the greatest of modern British premiers, was practically ruler of England at 24.

John Followed Copy.

Capt. Ed Todd of Hultneyville has sailed the world round, and visited many countries. He tells among his experiences the following: Once, while in China, he gave a native Chinese tailor an order for a pair of silk pantaloons. The tailor didn't understand science of taking measurements for the garment, so Todd gave him an old pair of trousers to pattern after. When the pantaloons were finished the sailor was astonished at finding a large patch set into the seat. The tailor had copied the old trousers in every detail.—Post Express.

A Remarkable Clock.

One of the most extraordinary mechanical wonders of the world is a clock built by a Russian Pole named Goldfadon. He was at work upon it six years. The clock represents a railway station, with all of its appointments and details carefully carried out. On the central tower is a dial which shows the time at New York, London, Warsaw and Pekin. Every quarter of an hour the station begins to bustle, telegraph operators click their machines, the station master and his assistants appear, porters bustle about with luggage, and a miniature train dashes out of a tunnel on one side of the platform. All the routine of a railway station is gone through, after which the train disappears into another tunnel, to reappear at the next quarter of an hour.

A Record in Watermelon Eating.

A good example to refer to of the negro's capacity for eating watermelon is that of a Dalton, Ga., negro, who ate at one sitting recently, on a wager, a fifty five pound watermelon of last season's crop that had been preserved in cotton seed.

WIND PULLED HIS TOOTH.

Was This the Effect of Kentucky Wind, or Whiskey?

One of the queerest pranks of the wind during the cyclone the other night happened at the corner of Sixth and Jefferson streets. Jonn Gazzollo, the night engineer at the City Hall, has been suffering from toothache for some time, and has been telling his friends that he intended to have the ache removed as soon as he could screw his courage up to the point.

On the night in question his tooth ached so badly that he could hardly hear the wind blow. He was desperate. Borrowing a gum overcoat from one of the policemen about the police station, he started out just as a funnel-shaped cloud was scudding along. He reached the corner of Sixth and Jefferson streets and was about to turn the corner when a gust of wind struck him and lifted him off his feet.

He might have been carried over to the Court House yard and drowned in the fountain but for his presence of mind in grabbing the iron railing that runs around the steps leading down into the basement. He clung there for a moment with the wind right in his face. He turned his head, and as he did so there was a sudden jerk that dislodged his hat and fairly unravelled his red necktie.

Then there was a lull, and when he crept back into the station house he made the startling discovery that the aching tooth was gone. The wind had pulled it. He tells the story himself, and if it is not true Mr. Gazzollo has greatly deceived me.—Louisville Commercial.

Easy to Call a Cab.

The silent cab call is an invention much to be esteemed, which is now coming into general use in London. Two lamps, one red and the other green, are suspended from the door of a club or other public building. The porter within has merely to press a knob in the entry hall and either the red or the green lamp may be illuminated, the one to call a four wheeler and the other a hansom.

MONEY WON THE DAY IN THE LEGISLATURE.

Assemblyman Cooper's Five Per Cent. Interest Bill Killed.

A LIVELY TIME OVER IT.

MONEY LENDERS BESTIRRED THEMSELVES AT THE LAST MOMENT.

Senator Pitney Espoused the Side of Those Interested in Keeping the Rate of Interest at Six Per Cent—Senator Reed Took No Part in the Discussion—Opponents Killed It in the Open.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 22—After having successfully left the Assembly and buffeted its way along the Senate with good prospect of steering into the Gubernatorial port to receive the endorsement of Mr. Voorhees, Assemblyman Cooper's Five Per Cent. Interest Bill was ingloriously killed by the Upper House yesterday afternoon. The proceedings under which it was killed shows the absolute subserviency of certain Legislators to the money interests of the State.

The money-lending concerns of the State had not taken the measure seriously, but when it was on the point of passing the Senate they bestirred themselves, and the telegraph companies did a land-office business. Dispatches were as thick as leaves in Vallombrosa. The money-lenders were most solicitous about the welfare of the borrowers, whom they were sure would suffer if forbidden to pay higher interest than 5 per cent.

When the bill came up on final passage Senator Ketcham emerged form a drift of these dispatches and on behalf of fifty money-lenders asked that the bill be recommitted in order to give these people a hearing.

Senator Martin thought this opposition rather belated. The bill had been introduced on the first night of the session. He had introduced a similar bill Feb. 17th, and the opposition had not shown itself until this late hour, and now it sought to kill the bill, not by fair means in the open Senate, but by recommitting it to a committee which had already hung up his own measure and had been tardy in reporting this one.

This caused a heated personal dispute between Senator Martin and Senator Pitney, the chairman of the committee who blamed Senator Martin for not appearing before the committee to explain his bill.

Senator W. M. Johnson opposed the bill, on the ground that it would make it hard for poor people to borrow money.

Senator McDermott took the same ground, and took occasion to severely condemn the practice of committees arrogating to themselves the right to kill bills by hanging them up in committee. Every bill, he said, was entitled to be reported one way or the other so that its fate migat be decided by the Senate and not by the few members who constituted the committee.

Senator Martin called attention to the fact that under the ruling of President Reed, if the chairman of a committee sees fit to refuse to report a bill, the other twenty Senators have no power to get it before the Senate.

Senator Reed advocated the passage of the bill.

Then followed four roll calls. A motion by Senator McDermott to indefinitely postpone was lost—7 to 12. A motion by Senator Ketcham to recommit the bill was lost—10 to 9. The bill then came up on final passage, and was defeated by this vote:

Ayes—Barber, Braum, Foster, Martin, Miller, Reed, Stanger and Von Cleef—8.

Noes—Cross, Evans, Hand, Hutchinson, H. W Johnson, W. M. Johnson, Ketcham, McDermott, Packer, Pitney, Smith and Stokes—12.

A motion by Mr. McDermott to reconsider was lost—8 to 12.

Young Men Prepare Mystery.

Something decidedly novel is being planned for a sociable to be held in the parlors of the Congregational church Friday evening. There is a cloud of mystery that surrounds all the arrangements that has prevented as yet the discovery of just exactly what it is going to be. "The Swarming of the Bees" is the title of the sociable, but its exact application is not yet discovered. Although the affair is under the auspices of the Women's Association, the entertainment is really under the charge of the young men of the church.

Annual Church Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church will be held tonight. Various reports will be presented, and two deacons and other church officers will be elected.

BEATEN BY HUSBAND.

MRS. JOSEPH MINER HAD TO APPEAL TO THE CITY.

Miner Was Arraigned This Morning, Pleaded Guilty and Was Fined $8—Said That He Had Been Intoxicated.

It was a dismal morning at the city court this morning. There was only one case to occupy the attention of City Judge William N. Runyon, that of a wife-beater. The husband, Joseph Miner, stood by the rail with his face turned away from his wife, who sat in the corner. She looked sorrowful and tears stood in her eyes.

There wasn't any trial. Miner admitted that he was guilty of assaulting his wife. Said that he was drunk and didn't realize what he was doing. His wife told a sad little tale of how he wouldn't work, fell to drinking and then struck her in the face and beat her. He was arrested last night by Patrolman Higgins on a warrant.

Miner has been working at times in the foundry at the Pond Tool Works. He promised to go back to work if released. The Judge delivered a lecture and sentenced the prisoner to pay $8, or go to jail for thirty days. The fine will be paid.

WOODMAN BADLY HURT BY A FALLING TREE.

LIES IN AN UNCONSCIOUS CONDITION.

Pinioned Under the Tree for Sometime—It Was Two Hours Before a Doctor Attended Him.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Martinsville, March 22—George Zimmerman, aged 45 years, a well-known resident of this place, lies at his home in a critical condition, the result of an accident which happened last Monday afternoon while he was at work felling trees near Philip Bach's saw mill at Dog Watch Hollow. One of the trees fell on Mr. Zimmerman, striking him on the head. The head was severely bruised and received a very bad cut eight inches in depth.

The workmen about the place worked with all possible speed in their efforts to get Mr. Zimmerman from under the tree. In the meantime a physician was sent for, but it required two hours' time to get one from Plainfield. He was unable after an examination to learn whether the skull was fractured or not owing to the fact that the head was greatly swollen. Mr. Zimmerman was removed to his home and he has not yet regained consciousness. His relatives are much worried and they fear that the injuries sustained may prove fatal.

NEW OFFICIALS TO INSPECT.

Borough Streets to be Gone Over by New Committee.

Next Saturday afternoon the new borough street committee, Messrs. Clark, Coddington and Valiant, accompanied by Mayor Smalley and Superintendent of Highways, Thomas Doud, will probably make a tour of investigation about the borough for the purpose of ascertaining what is needed in the line of street improvements. This suggestion was made last evening after the Council meeting by Mr. Clark, who desires to learn at once just what is needed, so that the committee of which he is chairman, can work intelligently.

REPORT OF THE GRAND LODGE.

Interesting Proceedings in Prospect for Central Lodge.

Central Lodge, A. O. U. W., at its meeting tomorrow night, will receive the applications of five candidates, and will initiate three. Representatives Rogers, Dunham and Mague, who attended the proceedings of the Grand Lodge in Trenton, will make an elaborate report of the proceedings.

There will also be a musical and literary programme rendered, and at the close refreshments will be served. The entertainment will be prepared under the auspices of Charles H. Randolph, chairman of the good and welfare committee.

Visited Vacant House.

Frank Houseman, Vincent Meaney, Seymour VanBlake and George Blake, were arrested by Roundsman Frederickson Monday morning and arraigned before City Judge Runyon on the charge of malicious mischief. It was alleged that they entered the vacant house at the corner of North Front street and Westervelt avenue and did considerable damage to the property. They all pleaded guilty and sentence was suspended by the Judge with a warning.

A Missionary to Talk.

The twenty-sixth anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will be held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the church. Mrs. Heinrich, a missionary from India, will address the meeting. All are cordially invited to be present.

REMEMBERS FOUR WARS.

A UNION COUNTY MAN WHO IS CROWDING THE CENTURY MARK.

He Lives in Union Township and is Now in a Critical Condition—He Has a Daughter Seventy-Three Years Old.

In a cottage adjoining the Meeker Inn on Morris avenue, Union township, are now lying sick unto death, Mr. and Mrs. William Harvey Johnson. Mr. Johnson is ninety four years old, while his wife is eighty five. Fourteen children were born to them, eleven of whom are still living and married.

Mr. Johnson was married twice, and has a score of grandchildren. One of his daughters is 73 years of age, and resides in Newark. Never until within the last few days has Mr. Johnson in all his long life needed the services of a physician. The last marriage in Mr. Johnson's household was that of a daughter, twenty years ago. One of the sons of the aged sick man is the Rev. B. P. Johnson.

Mr. Johnson has outlived all the old people of Union county, and is one of the few alive who remember the visit of Lafayette to America in September, 1824. He remembers seeing the soldiers marching to four different wars—namely, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the War of the Rebellion and the Spanish-American War. His eyesight is nearly gone, and it is not expected that he or his wife will survive manny days. Mr. Johnson was born in Schooley's Mountains in 1805.

WOMEN DID NOT TURN OUT.

No Fair Voters at the School Election in Dunellen.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, March 22—The annual school meeting was held last night in the Lincoln schoolhouse for the election of three trustees. There was no fight, and the election was a quiet one. Not a woman took advantange of her right to vote, although in Lincoln conveyances were provided to carry them to and from the polling places.

The polls were open one hour and at the close it was found that W. J. Hamilton, Harry C. Gaskill and Isaac J. Stites were elected.

A mistake was made by the Board last year in not asking for a large enough appropriation, and the result is that many improvements needed have had to be only partially made, and a deficiency stares them in the face. The amount asked for this year was accordingly more than usual, $3,200, but the whole amount was voted for without much opposition.

NEW SCHOOL LAWS.

Commissioners Appointed by the Governor Have Finished Their Work.

Senator Stokes, J. B. Betts, of Somerville, and S. St. John McCutchen, the Commissioners appointed last June by Governor Voorhees to codify and revise the State laws relating to public instruction, have completed their work. The Commissioners started the work last October, and they have been constantly busy night and day up to last Monday evening at 6 o'clock. The new bill was presented to the House Monday evening last, and will be reported in that body for hearing tomorrow. It is believed that the bill will meet with strong opposition from some quarters, although it is considered to be one of the best ever presented.

Hard Earned Dollars.

There is the promise of a large attendance at the parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist church this evening when the Christian Endeavor Society holds a sociable. The particularly interesting part of this sociable is that every member has earned a dollar in some unusual way. Tonight the dollars will be turned over to the treasurer while the members will entertain each other and their friends in telling how they did it.

Supreme Officers to be Present.

Star of Plainfield Lodge, No. 25, Shepherds of Bethlehem, will hold their regular meeting in the Grand Army Hall tonight at 8 o'clock. The Supreme Commander and Supreme Scribe from Trenton, who are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Gray, of Gran avenue, will initiate several candidates. The meeting will be open to the public at 9 o'clock.

New Boulevard.

Phillip Rohrick has started the work of opening a boulevard, a hundred feet wide, from Washingtonville to the new park he has established at the edge of the second mountain. It runs north from the Sterling road, starting near the intersection of the roads, and on a line parallel to the old Dugway road.

BIG CROWD OUT TO THE SCHOOL ELECTION.

But Everything Passed Off in a Harmonious Manner.

5 TRUSTEES WERE CHOSEN.

THE NECESSARY FUNDS TO PAY EXPENSES WERE APPROPRIATED.

Meeting Was Called to Order by S. St. John McCutchen and Councilman Rogers Elected Chairman—Seven Nominations to Fill the Five Vacancies—Report of Last Year's Work Presented.

The only thing exciting about the annual borough school meeting held last evening in the public school building was the crowd, and that quieted down to such an extent that by the time the vote for trustees was announced there was a handful of people present to hear the result of the election. In a few instances there were several things that appeared to be a little unusual, but everything went through on time, and as there was no opposition it was a strong indication that everyone was satisfied. A good many people came and stayed just long enough to cast their ballot after which they left. One noticeable feature was the absence of certain persons who have heretofore taken a lively interest in school matters. They may have thought that the programme was to be rendered satisfactorily and it would be unnecessary for them to be present.

President S. St. John McCutchen, of the Board of Education, called the meeting to order, and Councilman George T. Rogers was made chairman. Horace J. Martin was selected as secretary. In the call, which was read by the secretary, it stated that five members of the Board were to be elected to fill vacancies of A. V. D. Honeyman, R. M. Fountain, E A Overton, Henry Wells and George F Brown. Mr. Wells resigned, owing to ill-health, while Mr. Brown resigned owing to the fact that he holds another office in the borough. There were three men to be elected for three years, one for two years and one for one year.

The following persons were placed in nomination: R. M. Fountain, A. V. D. Honeyman, E. A. Overton, James R Joy, J H VanWinkle, Paul H. Loizeaux and J. H. Cooley. The last named person at first declined to run and the nominations were closed. Afterwards W. C. Smith stated that Mr. Cooley had been persuaded to allow his name to be placed in nomination and the same was accepted.

There were in all 151 votes cast for the candidates as follows: Three years, A. V. D. Honeyman, 107; E. A. Overton, 108; R. M. Fountain, 109; two years, J. H. Cooley, 65; Paul H Loizeaux, 77. The votes secured by Mr. VanWinkle and Mr Joy were not announced.

There were 121 votes cast for the appropriations, for teachers' salaries and current expenses, $10,800; for text books and school supplies, $1,200; and 109 votes were in favor of the appropriations.

The polls were kept open for one hour and while the votes were being cast District Clerk R M. Fountain read his financial report. It showed that the receipts during the year were $30,340.36, and the expenditures $22,865 96, leaving a balance on hand of $7,374.40. In the building fund department it was shown that $20,488.68 had been received from the sale of and the interest on the $20,000 bonds issued for the erection of the new Watchung school, leaving a balance of $9,253 63.

Following the above report, which was received and filed, President McCutchen presented his annual report. This admirable paper showed that the total enrollment of the school during the year was 979 The monthly average attendance was 801 and the daily attendance 746. The enrollment in the High School was 106. This is much higher than in any previous year. There are at present twenty-seven teachers employed with Superintendent H. J. Whitman and the superintendent was commended for his excellent work, as well as the teachers.

Mr. McCutchen submitted a statement regarding the new school and stated that complete it would cost about $19,000. He commended Commissioner E. J. Waring as chairman of the building committee.

In the report Mr. McCutchen stated that in his judgment he thought that nine intensely interested school trustees were more to be desired than a less number as suggested to him. In this way the work could be divided to a better advantage. He also said that the appropriation this year is about $1,500 in excess of last year, owing to the building of the new school which would necessitate more money for expenses. The report also cited that the old part of the High School building, erected in 1882, needs attention, both as to proper heating and ventilation, while the boiler now used for heating is worn out and will not do for another year. These matters were brought to the attention of the citizens and Mr. McCutchen asked the earnest consideration of all on these matters.

The president in conclusion quoted extracts from Superintendent Wightman's report in which the superintendent hoped that a library could be established in the schools so that the scholars could take home a class of books for reading. He suggested as a plan that ten books be allowed to each classroom, and that the scholars be allowed to take them home and keep them for a limited time. He said that $75, together with the aid received from the State, would accomplish the plan. Mr. McCutchen at this time stated that H. A. McGee had already contributed $25 for this object. This statement led C. W. McCutchen and Walter McGee to contribute like amounts and George T. Rogers gave $10. This assures the library for the schools according to Mr. Wightman's plan.

Before the meeting closed those present were treated to a little surprise when William Pangborn, of Chatham street, asked the chairman if the several amounts bid for the work of constructing the new borough school could be announced. Mr. Pangborn stated that he had never been able to learn what they were and he had been informed that the local newspapers could not get the information.

This announcement created quite a stir. Some of the members of the school board questioned the statement and inquired of the reporters present if the papers had not already published the figures. They were informed that in a few instances they had, but not altogether.

Mr. Pangborn insisted that the figures be given out publicly and they were. Here they are: W. C. Smith, mason, $6 863 62; G. & C W. Hummer, carpenters, $4,689, Woolston & Buckle, painters, $475; C. W. Krausse, plumber, $283 22; Wolfe Company, heating and ventilating, $1,897; A. D. Phillips, electrician, $65; furniture, $726.45; Bolles' Sash Company, $130; hardware, $187.

There was no further business to be considered and the meeting adjourned.

MUST RETURN THE PROPERTY.

Court of Chancery Issues an Order to Levi Hart and Wife.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Trenton, March 22.—The Court of Chancery has decreed that Levi E. Hart and Carrie, his wife, of Westfield, shall re-convey to Sarah Ann Hart the property deeded to them by her, and shall also re-assign the mortgages she assigned to them. Also that within 20 days they shall pay to her $3 500 and interest.

This is the result of the celebrated Hart case that has interested the people of Westfield and Fanwood. Hart and his wife, so the allegation reads, succeeded in getting Mrs. Sarah A. Hart, who is old and feeble, to make over her property to Levi Hart and his wife. Codington & Swackhamer, of Plainfield, represented the old lady, and alleges undue influence, etc., in getting her to assign her property to him.

MARRIED THIS MORNING.

North Branch Swain Takes a Plainfield Girl for His Wife.

Miss Mary E Moulton, of 439 West Fourth street, and Francis B. Carpenter, of North Branch, were quietly married this morning at 11:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother. Rev. Dr. Yerkes performed the ceremony. There were only a few guests present, and those the relatives of the bride and groom.

A wedding breakfast followed the marriage, then the couple departed on an early afternoon train for a short honeymoon. Upon their return they will take up their residence with the groom's mother at North Branch. Mr. Carpenter is a machinist, and is employed in one of the machine shops at Bound Brook.

Fire in a Chimney.

A still alarm was sent in to the fire headquarters this morning. F. C. Langhorne, of Putnam avenue, notified the department that there was a fire in a chimney at his residence. Chief Doane and No. 2 hose wagon hastened to the scene of the trouble and easily extinguished the fire with one extinguisher.

Now in Good Order.

The borough fire alarm system is now in first-class order according to a test made yesterday.

DISGRACE TO THE CITY.

PRESENT CONDITION OF THE PLAINFIELD CITY JAIL.

An Unclean, Sickening Odor Prevails There Today—Can't Keep the Place Clean—How is Proposed New One Progressing?

An unclean, sickening odor filled the city jail this morning. It wasn't anything particularly new, though perhaps the rain and dampness of the day somewhat increased it. The odor penetrated clear out into the court room. It was observed by some of the visitors at the city court. When they went into the corridor, which the cells open into, it was positively disgusting.

Once the city jail was condemned by the Board of Health. Then the city was allowed to retain the jail if certain improvements were made. The work was done according to direction. Warden Tommy Martin seems to attend to his duties well, but all his efforts cannot keep the place clean and sweet The odor was so sickening that the visitors and reporters did not stay long. The thought of confining a human being in one of those cells, with that pervading stench on every side, was not pleasant. Then the visitors asked one another what had become of that movement to have a new station house.

DEATH CAME PEACEFULLY.

Mrs. Caroline P. Cutter Unable to Survive a Stroke of Apoplexy.

The community was deeply shocked yesterday when they heard of the death of Caroline P. Cutter, widow of the late Joseph S Cutter, which occurred in the afternoon about 2 o'clock, after being unconscious since last Wednesday evening, when she was suddenly stricken with apoplexy while alone in her room. Her last hours on earth were free from bodily suffering, simply going into a deep sleep and awaken into the joys of Heaven.

Mrs. Cutter leaves a son, Fred S., two daughters, Emma and Elizabeth, and a brother residing at Mena, Ark., besides a large circle of friends, to mourn the loss of a Christian mother and friend. Mrs. Cutter was a member of Trinity Reformed church and for many years a teacher in the Sunday-chool, until failing health compelled her recently to resign.

The funeral services will take place from her late residence, 409 West Front street, Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment will be private at Rahway, her native home, beside her husband and mother.

Wanted the Hangman's Rope.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 22 — Sheriff Kirk, of Union county, was surprised a couple of days ago by receiving a request from a New York saloon-keeper for the rope and noose with which Louis Roesel was hanged. The saloon-keeper, it seems, had witnessed the execution under the assumed name of J. Cassidy, and wanted the grewsome relic to place on exhibition in his establishment. He did not get it, as Hangman VanHise, of Newark, carried the noose away with him.

Poor Farm's Cattle Burned.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Millburn, March 22.—Six cows and two horses perished early yesterday morning in a fire which destroyed a large barn on the Milburn township poor farm, in White Oak Ridge. The cause of the blaze is unknown. Before it was discovered the fire had gained such a headway that it was impossible to save anything in the barn.

He Knows All About It.

If there is such a thing as having good roads in the borough Superintendent of Highways Thomas Doud will certainly accomplish that task. Mr. Doud is a man of large experience in road construction and not only knows when a road is properly built but also knows when enough money has been expended on it.

Debaters to Organize.

A meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. building tomorrow evening for the object of forming a debating society in connection with the Y. M. C. A. Such a society has been long contemplated, but no action has been taken until now. The society will organize at once and be ready to do active work next fall.

Money to Run City Government.

It is confidently believed that the next meeting of the Common Council, April 3d, the appropriations for the year will be fixed. Then the fire committee will be able to make arrangements to fit up the new engine house in the West End.

Turned Over Books to New Clerk.

MURRAY IS STILL FOR CHEAPER 'PHONES

Squier Got Support of Republican Caucus.

WON BY A SMALL VOTE.

PLAINFIELD PAID FIRE DEPARTMENT BILL PASSED.

Cheap Telephone Bill Will Be Kept in Committee—Republican Caucus Sustained Assemblyman Squier's Action—Other Bills Passed That Are of Interest to the People of Plainfield

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 22—The fight for cheap telephones on the part of Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, of Plainfield, still continues. Yesterday he had another encounter with the leader of the opposition, Assemblyman Squier, and the latter managed to rally a majority of the Republican legislators to his support in caucus.

Murray has been keeping steadily at work in his efforts to get his bill out of committee. His persistency has evidently worried Squier, for yesterday Squier asked the Republican caucus to sustain him in holding the "cheap telephone" bill in committee. The vote to sustain him was passed by a very small majority.

Despite this defeat Murray is still in the field, although he has very little possible chance of ever getting the bill before the Legislature this session.

Among the bills that were passed by the Assembly yesterday was Murray's bill giving cities like Plainfield the right on vote of the Council to raise a tax of not over quarter of one per cent. for the support of a paid fire department. It is well understood that the bill was intended to give Plainfield a paid department.

Another of Murray's bills, No. 163, went through the House as well. It exempts the Y. M. C. A. and the Young Men's Catholic Club from taxation.

Murray's bill, No. 39, allows the Council to allow a rebate for taxes paid in advance bill No. 138 allows the First M. E. church, in Plainfield, to sell a part of its burying ground on Plainfield avenue. Both were passed by the Senate.

A YOUNG WIFE DEAD.

Mrs. A A. Philo Passes Away After Having Been Married a Year.

The many friends of Mrs. A. A. Philo will learn with deep regret of her sudden death which occurred last Saturday at her home at Keyport, this State. Mrs. Philo was married in North Plainfield about a year ago and she and her husband took up their residence at Keyport. The funeral services were held yesterday at the home of relatives in Newark. The employes of I. H. Boehm's dry goods store sent a beautiful floral pillow and otherwise expressed their feelings of sympathy. A husband and infant daughter survive the deceased. Herman Philo, a brother-in-law of the deceased, has taken charge of the daughter.

SUIT AGAINST TRACTION COMPANY.

Fanwood Wants to Be Reimbursed for Money Spent Two Years Ago.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, March 22—The inhabitants of Fanwood, through their counsel, W. R. Codington, have brought suit against the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company for the sum of about $200, and the papers in the suit have been issued by Justice Warden.

At the time the Traction Company applied for a franchise through the township special meetings were called, notices were posted and other expenses incurred which, it is said, the company promised to stand.

Two years nearly have passed, and no use of the franchise has been made, neither has the company paid those bills, so suit has been brought. The case will come up for trial April 4th.

WANT THE COSTS PAID.

Bard Cycle Company's Creditors May be Put to Extra Expenses.

There are now arising more complications in the affairs of the Bard Company, and they have begun suit in Justice Mosher's court against F. W. Runyon and A. L. C. Marsh, for the costs in the two right of property cases recently tried. Both Runyon and Marsh secured judgments against the Bard Cylce Company, and when the right of property was tried the Bard Company came out ahead. They now want the two plaintiffs in execution to pay the costs of the trial, about $6 apiece. The cases are returnable March 28th.

—Union Gospel service will be held in the rooms of the W. C. T. U. tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

A HUNDRED REASONS

They are in the tablet form, which retains their good qualities indefinitely, while liquid preparations become stale and useless with age.

They are convenient, can be carried in the pocket and taken when needed. They are pleasant to take.

After each meal dissolve one or two of them in the mouth, and mingling with the food, they constitute a perfect digestive, absolutely safe for the most sensitive stomach.

They digest the food before it has time to ferment, thus preventing the formation of gas and keeping the blood pure and free from the poisonous products of fermented, half digested food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the only remedy designed especially for the cure of stomach troubles and nothing else.

One disease, one remedy, the successful physician of today is the specialist, the successful medicine is the medicine prepared especially for one disease.

They increase flesh by digesting flesh forming foods.

A whole package taken at one time would not hurt one, but would simply be a waste of good material.

Over six thousand men and women in the State of Michigan alone, have been cured of indigestion and dyspepsia by the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Sold by all druggists at 50 cents per package.

HOT POLITICS FOR ALL

William J. Bryan and Perry Belmont Indulge in Wordy War.

COST OF DINNER THE COUSE

Croker is Magnanimous and Willing to Forgive Bryan and His Followers—Says He is Ready to Have All Democrats, No Matter What Their Mistakes, Return—Bryan Declines.

New York, March 22.—Richard Croker refuses to discuss the letter of W. J. Bryan refusing to attend the $10 a plate Jefferson day dinner of the Democratic Club. He said, however, that arrangements for the dinner were progressing favorably and that it would be a very successful affair.

Mr. Croker said that when it was decided to give the dinner there was an agreement that a few prominent Democrats from other States should be invited. Mr. Bryan was one of those who received an invitation. Later it was decided to confine the invitations to New York State Democrats. Former Senator Hill has been invited, but his reply has not yet been received. Of the attitude of Bryan toward the rival Jefferson day dinner, Mr. Croker said:

"If the Democratic leaders want to divide the party in this State and throughout the country, let them go ahead. That is not my policy, however. I would unite the party and take back all Democrats, no matter what they have done, if they want to come back. It will be hard enough to win next year with the party united, and for my part I am in favor of bringing all factions together. We have just as much right to oppose free silver at sixteen to one as Mr. Bryan has to oppose gold. All that is a matter of opinion and should not divide the party."

Of the protest against the cost of the Democratic Club dinner, Mr. Croker said:

"I attended a dinner in Washington last year, at which Mr. Bryan was a guest, that cost $10 a plate. There is no reason for protest against the price of our dinner. We put money in circulation and benefit all classes of people. Democrats have as much right to eat $10 dinners as other people if they can pay for them. I have eaten 50-cent dinners, and I eat a $1 dinner every night."

Mr. Croker was asked if he had been invited to the $1 Jefferson day dinner. He smiled and made no reply.

The war between the Chicago platform Democrats and the Democratic Club is now on in earnest. W. J. Bryan, in a letter to Perry Belmont declining to attend the $10-a-plate dinner, has denounced the Democratic Club as un-Democratic and the members as Republican allies who masquerade as Democrats between campaigns. In his letter Mr. Bryan says:

Mr Bryan's Letter.

"I might plead a previous engagement as a reason for declining, but that would be equivalent to saying that I would come but for the engagement; and frankness compels me to add another reason. I appreciate the compliment which the Democratic Club pays me in extending an invitation, but I do not understand how an individual opinion can be ignored at a political gathering. You are the president of the club and represent the club before the public. Your position upon public questions was well known in 1896 and your telegram indicates that your position has not changed. My position upon public questions is also well known. The antagonism between our opinions is so great that we cannot with propriety join in a political banquet in honor of Democracy's patron saint, Jefferson, who stood for certain well defined principles.

"If your views are a correct reflection of his ideas, I fear my voice would sound a discordant note at your banquet. If, on the other hand, the Chicago platform applies, as I believe it does, Jeffersonian principles to present conditions, then your conspicuous presence at the Jeffersonian banquet would not honor the memory of the world's greatest Democrat. Do not misunderstand me; you may be right and I may be wrong, but I take it for granted that we are equally conscientious and I trust that I may not show myself less courageous than you. You proclaimed to your fellow citizens in 1896 that my election upon the Democratic platform would endanger the nation's welfare. You will pardon me if I say that a banquet presided over by you will injure rather than aid the Democratic party. I believe in harmonizing private differences, but differences in principle can never be harmonized, and in my opinion no party advantage is to be derived from communion of Jeffersonian Democrats who stood by the Chicago platform and Republican allies who masquerade as Democrats between campaigns in order to give more potency to their betrayal of Democratic principles on election day.

"WILLIAM J. BRYAN."

Mr. Belmont has sent reply, in which he says:

A Warm Report by Belmont

"I have just received your letter of the 16th inst. in which you describe those who declared in 1896 that your election to the Presidency on the Chicago platform 'would endanger the nation's welfare' as 'the Republican allies who masquerade as Democrats between campaigns in order to give more potency to their betrayal of Democratic principles on election day.'

"Before answering your unwarranted letter I will say that I have to-day instituted a suit against the New York Journal on account of the following libel: 'Mr. Belmont is a higher-priced man that the "floater" who sells his vote for $2 on Election Day, but when the vote goes as pecuniary consideration direct, what difference does the price make?'

"Your purpose to be equally defamatory is obvious. Your skill in the use of words forbids the plea that in your letter you misused them through ignorance. The design is plain, and were it not that you have interwoven in your abuse references to my opinionsupon public questions as opposed to your own, to the Democratic Club, of which I am president, and to its proposed celebration of Jefferson's birthday, I should have left your offensive statements unanswered.

"The Democratic Club of New York has a membership of nearly three thousand Democrats who all hold to the main principles of Democracy, while their opinions may vary in regard to such political questions as are not fundamental, but merely local or transitory, like many of the vain conceits you have yourself espoused. But none of these three thousand members is a Republican. As for myself, I never voted for a Republican candidate for either a great or a small office.

"To the explanation made to you that individual opinions have not been considered, you replied that 'you do not understand how individual opinions can be ignored in a political gathering.' Then you proceeded to contrast your antagonism, and finally declared that 'you and I cannot, with propriety, join in a political banquet given in honor of Democracy's patron saint.'

"The course of events will probably improve your understanding of the relations of individual opinions to Democratic gatherings, and it is therefore not required of me now to indulge in a long discourse on the relations in your politics of temporary to permanent questions.

"PERRY BELMONT."

"The dollar dinner," said Chairman Brewster of the local committee, "will probably be held in the Grand Central Palace. About 3,000 guests can be seated there, and already applications for tickets are being received. If more persons wish to attend than can be seated in the Grand Central Palace other dinners will probably be held elsewhere. If this is done the guests will all be brought together somewhere to listen to the speakers."

"Will former Senator Hill be invited?" was asked.

"His name is not on the list," replied Mr. Brewster.

"How about Messrs. Croker and Belmont?" was then asked.

"Well, I hardly expect to see them invited either. If they attend I shall not."

"What do you think of Bryan's letter to Mr Belmont?" was then asked.

"I indorse it heartily. I think it is just right," was the reply. "Mr. Bryan is the leader of the Democratic party, and he will be the leader in the next campaign."

THREE MORE BODIES FOUND.

Numerous Portions of Human Trunks Found by the Workmen

New York, March 22.—Apparently three more bodies were found in the Windsor Hotel ruins yesterday, although one was merely a collection of portions of a body, which may or may not belong to one trunk.

The first body was taken out of the ruins at 4 o'clock. It was that of a woman, and the sight was as ghastly as were the others. The body was a trunk simply. The body was burned, but not so badly as were those found yesterday, but it was very badly mangled. The teeth showed the person to have been a careful one and of evident refinement, as several cavities were filled with gold.

The official description is that of a female, about 60 years old, small stature, arms and limbs missing.

The remains of what appeared to be another body were found on the Fifth avenue side of the ruins. It consisted of a mass of charred bones. Alongside this was a clean thigh bone, from which all the flesh had been burned. The body, however, had not been burned. Near this was another bone, but it could not be told to what part of the body it belonged.

The third body was taken out of the ruins at the southwest corner and on a line with the elevator. The body consisted of a badly charred trunk with the legs extending only to the knees and the arms only to the elbows. Part of the lower part of the head was still on the neck, but the upper part of the head was gone. There was nothing found near the trunk by which it might be identified. Some thought the body that of a man and others believed it to be a woman's corpse. The belief inclined to the latter opinion.

A number of pieces of bodies were found during the night—bones charred and broken and separated from one another, some with pieces of burned flesh on them, but most of them burned to the extent that a scientist could not have told what part of a body any bone belonged to.

Gen. Merritt at Norfolk.

Norfolk, March 22.—Gen. Wesley Merritt, who was in command of the United States forces at Manila prior to the signing of the peace treaty, passed through here to-day from Virginia Beach, en route to Old Point Comfort, where he and Mrs. Merritt are stopping. Gen. Merritt is on an annual tour of inspection of the coast fortifications. Asked as to the Philippine situation, Gen. Merritt said he felt sure the rebellion would terminate as soon as the troops that have been ordered arrived at the islands.

Agoncillo Off for Paris.

London, March 22.—Agoncillo, the agent of Aguinaldo, and the members of the former staff of the Filipinos at Washington, have gone to Paris to confer with the Filipino Junta there.

Neither body has received news from the Philippine Islands during the past eight days. They say they fear the Americans have discovered and stopped their means of sending news from Manila.

A Lehigh Valley Accident.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 22.—The Buffalo express on the Lehigh Valley Railroad was thrown from the track at North Wilkes-Barre yesterday by crashing into an engine which overlapped a switch. The engine of the express was thrown down an embankment and three cars were thrown from the track. The engineer and fireman escaped with a few bruises. The passengers were badly shaken up, but none was seriously injured.

Second Louisiana in Quarantine.

Savannah, Ga., March 22.—The transport Thomas is at quarantine eighteen miles below the city, with the Second Louisiana Regiment on board. The men will be kept at quarantine until their effects can be fumigated. This may take several days. Nothing has been heard of the arrival of the Third Georgia Regiment, which is expected daily.

SHERMAN NOT DEAD

The Venerable Statesman is on a Cruise to Cuba.

HIS CONDITION IMPROVED

False Report of His Deth Sent from Government Signal Station at Guantanamo—Cruiser Chicago Expected at Santiago Thursday to Bring Mr Sherman Home

Santiago de Cuba, March 22.—A report was received here to-day from a correspondent at the Government signal station at Guantanamo stating that ex-Secretary of State John Sherman had died of pneumonia early this morning. Happily, this report proves to have been incorrect.

JOHN SHERMAN.

The Paris has just arrived here from Guantanamo, and the Sun correspondent, who at once boarded her, found that instead of being dead Mr. Sherman's condition showed much improvement. He rested well last night, and there is great hope of his recovery.

It is expected that the cruiser Chicago will arrive here on Thursday, and Mr. Sherman will then be transferred to her and taken to the United States.

WASHINGTON MUCH STIRRED.

Reaction When Truth Was Known—Mr. Sherman to Return on the Chicago.

Washington, March 22.—Washington has not been so stirred for a long time as it was to-day by the publication in the evening papers of the report from Caimanera, Cuba, of the death of John Sherman and the subsequent discovery that the story was not true. Although the report had no official confirmation, the news was not unexpected, in fact, it was rather anticipated, in view of the tenor of the dispatches from Kingston yesterday and especially in view of a private dispatch received this morning by Assistant Secretary Cridler from Consul Dent of Kingston, who said that when the Paris left Kingston last night Mr. Sherman's condition was very low and that he feared the worst. An official of the State Department said to-night that Secretary Hay, upon the strength of these dispatches and the confirmation by the Associated Press of the report of Mr. Sherman's death, prepared a circular telegram to diplomatic and consular officers of the United States announcing Mr. Sherman's death and paying a graceful tribute to the worth of his public services. He also sent a message to Mrs. Sherman notifying her of her of the death of her husband. A similar notification was sent to the members of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington and to President McKinley at Jekyl Island. There was some discussion of arrangements for the funeral. Flags on public buildings were ordered at half mast.

At the Sherman residence, however, in the absence of official confirmation of the report or a direct communication from the ex-Secretary's relatives who are with him on the Paris, there was yet a hope that he might be alive. Telegrams of condolence arrived during the evening from all parts of the country. Owing to Mrs. Sherman's feeble condition, the result of a stroke of paralysis last fall, all news of her husband's illness had been kept from her, and when Secretary Hay's note was received a consultation of the friends in the house was held. Miss Willock of Ohio, a niece of Mrs. Sherman, who has been with her during her illness; Mr. Babcock, for many years Mr. Sherman's private secretary as Senator and Secretary, and Harry Vail, who also served Mr. Sherman while he was in the Senate, decided that Dr. Johnson, Mrs. Sherman's physician, should communicate the news to her to-morrow morning.

The reaction felt by these friends, when they saw the Sun's cable dispatch from Santigo, stating that the ex-Secretary was still alive with fair prospects of recovery, was almost painful to witness. Miss Willock, as soon as she had recovered, carried to Mrs. Sherman the news of the arrival of the Paris at Santiago, withholding any statement as to Mr. Sherman's condition. In a little while, the parlors at the Sherman house were joined by Mrs. McCollum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman, and Miss Miles, daughter of Gen. Miles, to whom the news had been conveyed by telephone. Persons who called to express condolence and newspaper men who came for additional facts concerning the death of Mr. Sherman were greatly surprised to learn the real facts.

The Sun's cable dispatch was communicated to Secretary Hay, who recalled his circular letter, and to Secretary Porter at the White House, to whom it was forwarded to President McKinley.

Secretary Long this afternoon received a cable dispatch from Admiral Sampson, announcing the arrival of his squadron at Caimanera. Later came a dispatch from Capt. Cooper of the Chicago, announcing the arrival of his ship at the same port. He said that while at sea the Chicago met the Paris, and an arrangement was made by which ex-Secretary Sherman would be transferred to the Chicago on Friday and conveyed to Fort Monroe.

Late this evening a telegram was received at the Sherman residence from Mr. Colgate Hoyt addressed to Mrs. Sherman and dated Santiago. It said that Mr. Sherman's condition was improved.

Speaking of a serious case of sickness caused by dyspepsia and biliousness, the agent of the B. & M. R. R. at White Cloud, Kansas, said: "Now there is no use in any one suffering as that man does. Many and many a time have I been attacked with biliousness, and one

DISSENSION IN REBEL CAMP.

Commanding General of Filipino Army Dismissed.

Manila, March 22.—Owing to a quarrel with the Filipino Secretary of War, and his issuance of a manifesto requiring all foreigners to aid the native cause under the penalty of death Antonio Luna, the commanding General of the Filipino army has been dismissed, and Gen. Pantaleon Garcia appointed in his place. Gen Luna has retired to Pampanga, where he is editing the newspaper La Independencia.

It is reported that the railroad is in operation between Polo and Dagupan, the Filipino Government receiving 3 per cent. of the receipts and the right of free transportation of troops.

United States cruiser Buffalo has sailed for New York Col. Duboco, with a battalion of the First California Infantry, sailed for Negros Island today.

Gen. Otis has given orders that the utmost vigilance shall be observed for the protection of property. Burning or looting will be punished with the utmost severity The troops were resting yesterday.

MCKINLEY AND REED MEET.

The Simultaneous Presence of Speaker Reed Said to Be a Coincidence.

Jekyl Island, Ga., March 22.—President McKinley and his party, including Mrs. McKinley, Vice-President Hobart and Mrs. Hobart, and Senator Hanna, are the guests of Cornelius N. Bliss, ex-Secretary of the Treasury.

President McKinley slept last night in the club house. In another cottage on the island is Speaker Thomas B. Reed. It is asserted positively that the visit of the President and the Speaker at the same time is a mere coincidence.

The Speaker will probably leave the island this afternoon or to-morrow. The Presidential party will go to-morrow afternoon.

The President took long rides yesterday afternoon and this morning, and said he was delighted with the island.

Funeral of Lord Herschell.

London, March 22.—There was a large attendance at the funeral services over the body of Lord Herschell in Westminster Abbey. The pallbearers were Lord Halsbury, Lord High Chancellor; Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal and Lord Churchill, representing the Queen; Lord James, the Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, the Earl of Kimberley, United States Ambassador Choate and Speaker Gully of the House of Commons. The coffin was covered with a pall of purple and gold, the red and white robes of a Lord High Chancellor and the ermine of a Judge. Lord Churchill placed upon the coffin a wreath from the Queen with the autograph inscription, "Victoria R. I."

The only other wreaths were those from the Prince of Wales and the American Society in London.

For Asbestos Hotel Curtains.

Albany, March 22.—Senator Laroche has introduced a bill providing for the protection of the lives and property of residents of hotels or public or private institutions having accommodations for more than twenty-five persons. The bill provides that every person or corporation owning or conducting a hotel, boarding house or public or private institution having accommodations for twenty-five persons or more shall, within three months, provide the same, if shades or curtains are used therein, with shades or curtains or other hangings of asbestos or other non-inflammable material. Any gas fixture in any hotel, boarding house or public or private institution to which this act applies shall be placed so that the flame therefrom when lighted is not less than twelve inches from any woodwork.

Jersey's Legal Interest Rate.

Trenton, March 22.—An important matter pending before the New Jersey Legislature is the Five Per Cent. Interest bill, which has attracted widespread attention. The measure has already passed the Assembly, and it is said to be in a fair way to go through the Senate. There is no little opposition to the bill, however, and if it passes the Upper House, considerable pressure will be brought to bear upon the Governor to veto the measure.

This legislation, it is understood, is intended to benefit the farmers who are large borowers from the banks. It is consequently favored by all legislators who represent agricultural counties, while it is opposed by the representatives of the large cities. If this bill becomes a law New Jersey will be placed in a peculiar position of lying between the States of Pennsylvania, where a legal rate of 6 per cent. exists, and New York, where the present 6 per cent. rate of interest is likely to continue to exist for the present at least.

Clifford's Final Hope Gone.

Trenton, March 22.—The last hope of the counsel for Edward Clifford, the Hudson county murderer, in whose behalf appeals have been taken to the highest tribunals of the land, was swept away when the bill pending in the Legislature for the commutation of his death sentence was defeated in the House of Assembly by a vote of 28 to 22.

The bill required Courts of Oyer and Terminer to inflict sentence of life imprisonment whenever a jury convicts of murder in the first degree but adds a recommendation of mercy.

The Havana Disturbances.

Havana, March 22.—Major F. Martinez of the Cuban forces, who was shot at the Hotel Inglaterra by Police Lieutenant Emil Cassin, the former trumpeter of the Rough Riders, who accompanied Gov. Theodore Roosevelt on his campaign tour through New York State last autumn, is not expected to live. Cassin, who is an Italian by descent, has been placed in jail. His action is generally condemned as unwarranted and as due to his excitable temperament.

Witness Rice Gets Back at Vice-Prest. Archbold.

CHARGES DISCRIMINATION

Ohio's Attorney-General Does Not Meet With Success in Obtaining Witnesses—Mr Rice Charges That Individual Refiners and Producers Are Injured by Discriminations in Freight Rates.

New York, March 22.—Attorney-General Monnett of Ohio terminated yesterday all the hearings in this city in his suit against the Standard Oil Company and constituent enterprises because, as he explained, the witnesses that he wanted had refused to testify. Mr. Monnett spent much time in an unavailing search for witnesses. He had counted certainly upon having Levi Smith, an oil refiner of Warren, Pa., as a witness, but Smith, who was in town, declared his unwillingness to give testimony. Mr. Monnett also visited the independent oil exporters who are not connected with the Standard Oil Company and invited them to give testimony, but he received on every hand a refusal.

So he declared upon reaching the office of Commissioner Charles Edgar Mills that after a brief examination of George Rice he would adjourn the proceedings. The hearing was in the case of Attorney-General Monnett against the Buckeye Pipe Line Company to take away its charter.

Attorney-General Monnett conducted the examination and started off by asking George Rice about his transactions in turning over his independent plant to the Trust.

"Give the history of that proposition," said Mr. Monnett.

"The charge made against me of being a blackmailer by Mr. Archbold, vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, because of my litigation against the Standard, is false and malicious," said the witness. "In 1892 I was offered $250,000 for my refining plant by the secretary of the Standard Oil Trust. I testified to this in 1886 in this city, and Mr. Archbold heard it, and neither made denial nor took exception. Several months afterward, in 1887, I offered him the plant for $125,000 cash and a payment of $25,000 a year for five years following. He considered the proposition, and sent me two letters."

Both of these letters spoke of interviews on the subject and stated willingness to further consider the matter at any interview.

Mr. Rice spoke of freight discriminations that had been made against him on the Cleveland and Marietta Railroad, the difference reaching as high as 250 per cent. But 10 cents per barrel was charged the Trust, he testified, and he was charged 35 cents per barrel.

"This was some of the business ability Mr. Archbold said I lacked," Mr. Rice added with a smile.

"In 1886 the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and its connections, also, made a prohibitive discrimination against me. And yet Mr. Archbold has the effrontery to say I am guilty of blackmail in my effort to get fair play. Thus far I have been unable to get it. The Standard Oil Trust has blackmailed the railroads of this country to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars, and I can prove it.

"No independent refinery can run nowadays in opposition to the Trust, because the Trust can influence these discriminations. The Trust makes transient cuts to meet every car the refiner sends out, making it impossible to sell a single gallon at a profit. Furthermore, if a contract is made for the purchase of even a small lot of oil, the Standard agents on hearing of it will seek out the prospective purchasers and intimidate them. They have no more regard for the Interstate Commerce act than if it never existed.

"A discrimination of over 100 per cent. in favor of the Standard was discovered but recently, carried on by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad."

"What was the relation of the Buckeye Pipe Line Company to the Trust?"

"It was a part of the Trust, and was a party to the attempt to wipe out competition. It remains a part of the Trust to-day."

Mr. Monnett then took a new tack, and in reply to his question Mr. Rice said that his offer to Mr. Archbold had included all his oil lands, wells, machinery, refinery—everything.

Virgil P. Kline, for the company, asked Mr. Rice if all the testimony he had been giving wasn't the same that he had given on many a former occasion.

"Don't you give all this merely to again make it public?" icily queried the company lawyer.

"Merely to rebut the false and malicious statements of John D. Archbold," said Mr. Rice.

"All your testimony to the contrary, did you not offer to sell out your entire plant to Mr. Archbold for $500,000—$250,000 down and $50,000 for five years?" asked Mr. Kline.

"I don't remember to have so testified."

Mr. Kline then read from Mr. Rice's testimony at Columbus, showing that such an offer was made by him.

"And did not this offer include an agreement on your part not to bring further litigation against the Trust?"

"Yes."

"And did you not, but a short time before, offer to sell your plant for $20,000?" asked Mr. Kline, in a cutting manner.

"Yes, but that was merely for my refining plant," answered Mr. Rice, with some show of pleasure.

Here followed a short debate in which Mr. Rice proved that a certain statement made by him was true.

After Mr. Rice had concluded his testimony Attorney-General Monnett asked Mr. Kline and Mr. Elliott if they were willing to produce, as witnesses, any of the officers of the Standard Oil Trust.

"We have nothing to say in the matter," said Mr. Elliott, dryly.

"That's one time you won't talk," said Mr. Bennet, of the other side, flippantly.

"Can't you be courteous for a single moment?" asked Mr. Elliott. And with that the session ended.

MRS. GUILFORD FAINTED.

On Trial for the Alleged Murder of Emma Gill, She Collapsed.

Bridgeport, Conn., March 22.—Dr. Nancy A. Guilford yesterday was placed on trial before Judge George W. Wheeler and a jury of the Supreme Court on a charge of second degree murder in killing Miss Emma Gill, of Southington

Mrs. Guilford apparently was very weak. Her face was pale and haggard, she moved slowly, and sank into her chair as if exhausted.

Eudora Guilford, daughter of the accused, watched her mother closely and gave evidence of fears that the prisoner might collapse.

The first man accepted as a juror was Samuel R. Thompson, of Darien, a farmer.

During the examination of the thirteenth juror, Dr Banks noticed that Mrs Guilford's face was ashen gray, sprang to her side, felt the pulse and motioning to Sheriff Hawley half carried the prisoner to another room. Judge Wheeler declared a recess of ten minutes. At the end of that time Mrs. Guilford was brought back and the proceedings continued.

McCoy and Sharkey to Meet.

New York, March 22.—From present indications Kid McCoy and Tom Sharkey will again be matched to battle for heavyweight honors. William A. Brady and Tim O'Rourke, managers of the boxers, have practically come to an agreement to have the contest decided June 15 next. The only hitch in the conditions is that O'Rourke insists upon the men being allowed to hit with one arm free. Brady is willing to accept under these terms, but says he would like to receive word from McCoy before signing articles. The Kid has been telegraphed to this effect, and if he is willing to fight one hand free the men will immediately sign articles.

McCoy is more than anxious to get another chance at the Sailor, as he believes he will be able to reverse the decision next time they meet. The fight, if arranged, will probably take place at the Lenox Athletic Club. Before McCoy tackles Sharkey he will meet Tommy Ryan for the middleweight championship.

Camps in the South.

Washington, March 22.—Secretary Alger has come to the determination to maintain summer camps for the United States troops in the Southern States, and the delegation of Georgians who called upon him yesterday to secure that object will be so informed. It is the intention to maintain one of the camps in the neighborhood of Atlanta. The only condition is that the present Georgia quarantine regulations, which operate so as to prevent the movements of troops absolutely demanded by the military needs of the case, shall be adapted to the requirements. The number of troops to be located at any one camp will not be large, for it is said at the department that only about fifteen thousand soldiers will be so located, but there is likely to be much changing around among the men. Troops returning from Cuba are to be detained in the Georgia camps about twenty days at least before being sent to their homes or to the Northern posts.

Oyster Trust Forming Now

New Haven, March 22.—A combination whose capital will amount to at least $5,000,000, and perhaps $10,000,000 if needed, has been formed to control the oyster industry of New England and Long Island. The company will be organized formally under the laws of New Jersey before the end of the week. The capital will be from the Bridgeport Traction Company and prominent street railway men of New Jersey. Andrew Redel, president of the Bridgeport Traction Company, is the chief promoter, and probably will be president of the new company. The name of the new organization has not yet been selected.

Pennsylvania's Dewey Day.

Harrisburg, Mach 22.—In approving the Dewey day resolution Gov. Stone sent this message to the Legislature:

"I do not think it wise to increase the number of our legal holidays, and while I honor Admiral Dewey for his great victory in Manila harbor, yet I question whether the setting apart of the anniversary of that battle as a legal holiday is the proper way to show Dewey honor.

"But as this resolution makes only May 1, 1899, a legal holiday, and does not apply to any subsequent anniversaries, and as it passed both branches of the Legislature with unanimity, I have reluctantly given it my approval."

Referring to Admiral Dewey's health, Gen. Merritt said: "There are people who would like to get Admiral Dewey here and make a show of him, but his health, I believe, is excellent, and the distinguished officer prefers attending to his duty to having an exhibition made of himself."

Cecil Rhodes' Projects.

Berlin, March 22.—In the Reichstag yesterday Herr Richter, the German Radical leader, asked the government for information on the subject of the negotiations progressing with Mr. Cecil Rhodes. The Minister of Foreign Affairs, Baron von Bulow, said the negotiations for a railroad through German East Africa were still in progress, but he said an agreement had been reached regarding the laying of a telegraph line through the East African Protectorate, in which the rights and supremacy of German interests were fully safeguarded. The line, he continued, would be constructed at the telegraph company's expense, and would be completed within five years.

Sugar Stock's Erratic Course.

New York, March 22.—Sugar sold as high as 168 yesterday and then dropped to 154, with a rally in the latter part of the Stock Exchange session that carried it above 160. About 100,000 shares were traded in. There was very little interest in the market, as nearly all of the stocks outside of Sugar were in a comparatively pacific state. At last Wall Street is beginning to realize that there was no truth whatever in the reports of Sugar trade harmony. In fact the stories of three days ago are now as persistently denied as they were then reiterated. In Boston the Lawson following, who did much to put up the price of Sugar last week, were estimated to have sold 30,000 shares by noon.

The Easiest Way

To rent your house if it is in prospect of remaining vacant for the next twelve months is to step into or send to The Daily Press office a small advertisement for the Cent-a-word Column.

The Cost Is Trifling

When you consider the profitable results that may come from such publicity. Thousands of Plainfield people have tried it and found that the plan

Works and Pays Well.

Is He Eligible?

There seems to be a question as to whether Dr. J. H. Cooley can serve as a member of the Borough Board of Education, to which he was elected last evening, in view of the fact that he already holds an elective office in the borough, that of Commissioner of Appeals. The case of Collector George F. Brown is cited, where he was obliged to resign from the Board of Education because he could not hold two offices.

In connection with Dr. Cooley's choice it is said that his election was not regular, inasmuch as he declined to run for trustee, and after the nominations were closed his name was placed in nomination. The nom nations were not opened again, which would be the legal way of accepting the name.

Since the cessation of hostilities between the United States and Spain efforts to revive interest in the National Guard have met with poor success, but it is hoped that within a year at least the war influences will have been removed and the interest of young men once more aroused in the charms of military connection. The new State organization, it is thought, will be made less cumbersome than heretofore, and instead of seven regiments, there will be two 12 company regiments, one with headquarters in North Jersey and one with South Jersey headquarters. There may be one troop of cavalry, two light batteries, but nothing at all definite has been concluded.

According to the Philadelphia Record a Salt Trust is now on the ways ready to be launched, having been rigged with a Jersey charter, $12,000,000 capital and the usual provision of $5,000,000 seven per cent. preferred stock for insiders and $7,000,000 commom stock for outsiders. There is a tariff protection for the Trust of eight cents per 100 pounds on salt in bulk and twelve cents per 100 pounds on salt in bags or barrels, which will insure a very comfortable profit when competition shall have been provided against. This Trust is intended to make things especially interesting for the farmers; and if the farmers should take the thing in hand they could make matters very interesting for the Trust.

That politics do not count much when a syndicate or trust is to be formed is demonstrated when we read that Senator Sewell and former Senator Smith figure as incorporators in the monster electric syndicate, with a capital of $117,000,000, with which to control all the electric vehicles of the country. Electricity is supposed to furnish the motive power for the en enterprise, but in reality some sharp financial practices with the people's hard earned dollars will move the scheme.

James K. Arnold retires from the office of borough clerk with the reputation of having been one of the most capable occupants of that position that the borough has ever experienced. It fell to the lot of Mr. Arnold to undertake the new system of bookkeeping provided for the borough by the expert accountants, and how well he did his work is shown in the excellent condition Mr. Rowley, the new clerk, finds the books.

Having passed the Thompson Double Bar Bill the Legislature can go home with the serene satisfaction that they have done their whole duty to the State! Such trifling matters as cheaper gas, lower interest rates, curbing the trusts and the like are not to stand in the way of providing Billy Thompson's friends with plenty of the amber fluid to slake their thirst with on Sunday.

The Filipino warriors who would quit now are between the Devil and the deep sea if ever mortal was. If they persist in fighting they are in likely possibility of being annihilated by Uncle Sam's guns; and if they urge surrender they are executed as rebels by Aguinaldo. But is is scarcely expected that they will take Hobson's choice.

If there is anything the corporations would like to have and they don't see in New Jersey, just say the word and it will be theirs. There is nothing that we Jerseymen delight more in doing than to assist the poor corporations in gaining an honest foothold in the community.

The total number of officials required to take the government census in 1900 will be 45,000, but that's not counting in the Phillipines. Unless things change over there very soon the need of enumerators for the Filipinos will be very small.

What the Legislature of New Jersey needs is more men of the stamp of Roger Franklin Murphy. Then there would not be so much cringing to influences that dare not show itself in the open, but gets there just the same.

The New York World today prints a menu which shows that all we eat to maintain life is in the control of the trusts of the country. Then the only way to beat the trusts is to starve.

We have received the annual report of the State Prison. We prefer receiving a report of the institution any day rather than a passport to it.

Editor Runyon intimates that he will oppose the renomination of Assemblyman Squire next fall. We have heard such talk before, but that is all it amounted to—talk.

Though the author of the Five Per Cent. Interest Bill is a Cooper, he could not stave off defeat for that measure.

That great and boisterous statesman, Roger Murray, whom the speaker loves so well, has been giving the Democrats a lift in their funny business of worrying the Republican majority. He voted with them when they made an assault on the Republican committee, because they would not deliver certain partisan bills. Mr. Murray is an energetic little fellow, but he lacks judgment and in consequence he has been in hot water all through the present session. His last move decides his political fate. With a record of voting with the Democrats, he cannot expect to receive any more honors at the hands of the Republican party.—Trenton Times.

Dunellen, March 22—The new Council met to organize Monday night, and to transact the small amount of business that was to come up before the meeting. PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Scotch Plains, March 22.—The annual school meeting, held in the Assembly rooms last evening, called out a large number of the voters of the district. George R. Nicholl was nominated as chairman and T. I. Nicholl, clerk of the Board of Education, acted as secretary. The annual school report finds the school in a flourishing condition, and but few changes will be made during the coming year. The Board informed the voters that owing to the increased attendance in the primary department it might be found necessary during the year to add an assistant teacher to this department of the school. If the Board found this necessary it could be done with the appropriation asked for of $3,500. The election of three trustees found five candidates in the field, Messrs. Robison, Terry, Cook, Clark and Walker. Eighty-nine votes were cast, Robson Cook and Terry receiving a majority were declared elected. The appropriation asked for was carried with very little opposition. Nothing further coming before the meeting a motion was made and carried to adjourn.

The Borough Council met and organized Monday evening. Messrs. Palmer and Young, the newly elected Councilmen, were sworn in. William E. Collins was reappointed Borough Clerk for the ensuing year. Hans Lamberts received the appointment as marshal and William Collins as overseer of the poor.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press)

Westfield March 22—The handsome residence on Dudley avenue, owned by James T. Pierson, and occupied by Henry Piker, the Broad street shoe dealer, was completely gutted by fire last night. The alarm sounded at 8:45 o'clock and the firemen were at the scene of the fire shortly afterward, but they could do nothing as the water would not reach to the top of the house, there being only 20 pounds pressure. The fire is supposed to have started in the cellar, but it is not known for sure, as Mr. and Mrs Piker were away from home. Mr. Piker's loss is about $800 and he has no insurance. The house is damaged to the extent of about $2,500 and is fully insured.

Taylor, baritone, of the Cranford Music Club.

One gentleman read the advertisement Saturday, came out Sunday, and Monday signed a lease for a house and will move here the first of next month.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

Use of Tissue Paper for Packing.

There is nothing like tissue paper for keeping clothes when packed from becoming crushed and rumpled and stringy and what women generally call "trunky." Between the layers of packed clothes nowadays the dainty woman is careful to spread sheets of tissue paper. Bodices are enveloped in it; it surrounds every ribbon bow and streamer; sleeves, ribbonloops and such things are stuffed with tissue paper, crushed lightly into a ball, so that there may be no flattening nor deflation. "Plenty of tissue paper, and there need be no trunky clothes," says the traveling woman of to-day. "It takes up no more room and its results are inestimable." The only possible flaw in the virtue of the tissue paper habit, as it may be termed, is that it is possible, to now and then forget that one is given to it. The layers and folders and envelopers, of course, are remembered, but the stuffed out ribbonloops run a great risk. There is a chance, if one is dressing in a hurry and has but recently begun to use tissue paper in packing, and, more than all else, if one's French maid is—well, by no means so omnipresent as she might be—of slipping in to a beribboned frock without stopping to remove its stuffings. It has happened. One evening this summer a woman twice patrolled the entire length of a hotel dining room, attended a dance and a card party and had a good time generally, all unconscious of the fact that the many ribbon loops on her gown were replete with tissue paper. Not until she was making ready to retire did she discover the true state of affairs. Oh, yes, said all the other women next day, they had noticed the stuffings, but somehow, you know, they didn't like to tell her. It transpired that ever so many men had asked what those bunches of tissue paper were doing in Mrs. Blank's bows.—New York Sun.

Queen Margherita's Tact.

Of all the qualities once essential to a sovereign, the one most useful now is tact. Queen Margherita of Italy, who belongs to a house trained to kingcraft for more than a thousand years, is said to be wonderfully skillful in dealing with social difficulties. An incident which occurred at one of her drawing rooms illustrates her readiness and delicacy.

The persons who are to be presented at a Roman Court are arranged in a large semi-circle in the throne-room. The queen enters and passes around the line, attended by a chamberlain, who names each person, adding usually a word or two to give the queen some idea of their claim to notice. She asks a question or makes a remark to each and passes on.

On this occasion there was in the line a young man from South America whose embarrassment showed itself in pale cheeks and terrified glances as the queen drew nearer. At last she reached him and stopped. He heard his name, saw her smile. There was a roaring in his ears; his knees shook. Every eye was bent upon him with amused interest, his terror was so perceptible.

"From Brazil?" she asked. "And what town in Brazil is your home, Signor?"

"I—your Majesty—I don't know!" he gasped.

The whole circle smiled, but the Queen's face was as calm as marble. "You mean that our beautiful Italy has already made you forget your home? Ah, signor, you are a skillful courtier! You flatter us too much!" and playfully shaking her fan at him she passed on, leaving him wondering how he came to make so brilliant a response, while the crowd looked at him, respectfully bewildered, also.—Youth's Companion.

Proper Care of Shoes.

Although the toes of shoes are less pointed than formerly, they are still pointed enough to break across the toes if the proper precaution is not taken. Indeed, even square shaped shoes are subject to this very unsightly result after a few days' wear, if the remaining space beyond one's foot is not properly filled out. The best antidote for this calamity is a piece of sponge, a roll of curled hair or even a pad of tissue paper if neither of the others is available. Nothing so quickly gives a man or woman a careless appearance as to be improperly shod, and by carefully looking to this detail a trim and neat appearance may be maintained, even until the leather shows symptoms of becoming a thing of the past. With intelligent care patent leather shoes will hold their own a long time, which they fail to do otherwise. They should be wiped dry and clean with a piece of cheesecloth immediately upon removing them, rolled up in a cloth or in soft paper and put in a box or a dry closet. When they are first taken off the feet the leather is expanded in consequence of the heat of the body, and they should therefore be protected from a sudden contraction which causes them to crack; hence the importance of protecting them from cold and dampness. It is a very little thing to do, and the result is so satisfactory it more than compensates one for his attention. After all, it is the little things of life that make or mar; it is the snowflakes that make the glaciers.—Philadelphia Ledger.

"And why did she choose him among so many admirers?" "The others did not propose."—Brooklyn Life.

OUR YOUTHS DEPARTMENT

THE LITTLE TRAMP.

Now, I am sure you'd never guess,
Tho' 'tis the truth and
nothing less,
We have such heaping loads of fun
As make the walls
laugh, every one,
With a little tramp
at our house.

She strayed away, you see, one day,
And where she lived she will not say,
But when she saw us going by
Out from the hedge she ran to cry—
This little tramp at our house.

"Let me go with you," was her plea.
"Why so? You don't belong to me."
"Good evening, doctor; here's a tramp;
Pray, do you own the little scamp?
She wants to go to our house."

"Not I," the doctor said. "Yes, take her;
My dog just broke his chain to shake her."
And so this little gray and white,
That bubbles over every night,
Came up to live at our house.

She plays with me at hide-and-seek,
And makes me laugh until I'm weak;
She jumps out here and pops out there,
And has a regular little tear—
This little tramp at our house.

She was a little shadow-cat,
Had lived on air or less than that,
But now she is just rolling fat—
This little tramp at our house.

Her favorite dish is melon rind;
She scallops it to suit her mind,
Then purrs for more of that same kind—
This little tramp at our house.

She was never, never known to steal—
Just helps herself. How would you feel
If every time you took some cream
The heavens should fall, and lightnings scream—
We don't do so at our house.

—H. S. Hubbard, in Our Dumb Animals.

The Kitten and the Bear.

Chris. Burns, the veteran First Sergeant of Troop D, had a kitten which, during the summer camping of the troop at the Lower Geyser Basin, made her home within the Sergeant's tent. Here, curled up on a pair of army blankets, she defied the world in general, and dogs in particular.

One day, when the camp was bathed in sunshine, and every soldier in camp felt lazy, an inquisitive black bear came down the mountain side, and, whether because he was in search of adventure or because attracted by a savory smell from the cook's fire, began to walk about among the white tents of the cavalry command.

Suddenly the kitten caught sight of him. Dogs by the score she had seen, but this particular "dog" was the largest and the hairiest dog she had ever seen. But she did not hesitate. It was enough for her that an enemy had invaded her special domain. Hissing forth her spite, while her little body quivered with rage, she darted forth at the bear. The onslaught was sudden, and one glance was enough for Bruin. With a snort of fear Bruin made for the nearest tree, a short distance away, and did not pause until he was safely perched among the upper branches. Meanwhile, the kitten stalked proudly about on the ground beneath, keeping close guard over her huge captive, her back still curved into a bow, and her hair still bristling with righteous indignation, while her tail would now and then give a significant little wave, as if to say, "That's the way I settle impertinent bears."

The soldiers, who meanwhile had poured forth from their tents, could scarcely believe their eyes; but there was the bear in the tree, and the kitten below, and there were those who had seen the affair from beginning to end.

And perhaps the strangest part of it all was that the bear would not stir from his safe position in the branches until the kitten had been persuaded to leave her huge enemy a clear means of retreat! Then he slid shamefacedly down from his perch, and ambled hastily off towards the mountain.—Lieut. Charles D. Rhoades, U. S. A., in St. Nicholas.

A Great Button Collector.

The small boy who delights to collect buttons may please himself with the thought that a king once shared his weakness. That was Louis XIV. In 1685, when his craze was at its highest, he spent no less than $600,000 in this strange form of indulgence. Among the items of which this expenditure was made up are the following: August 1, 1685, two diamond buttons, value 67,866 francs; seventy-five diamond buttons, value 586,803 francs. On the buttons for a single vest he spent $200,000. Of the 354 "boutonnieres" used, 162 contained five diamonds each and the remaining 192 were single diamonds. It is estimated that during his lifetime this foolish monarch spent no less than $5,000,000 on buttons alone.

The Diamond Beetle.

One of the most beautiful of insects is the "diamond beetle" of Brazil. According to the investigations of Doctor Garbasso, the sparkling colors of this beetle, which blazes with extraordinary brilliance in the sunshine, originate in an entirely different way from the hues of butterflies. The scales of the diamond beetle appear to consist of two layers, separated by an exceedingly thin inter-space, and the light falling upon them experiences the effect of interference, so that the resulting colors correspond with those of thin plates, or of the soap-bubble.

After little Johnny had come out of church, some one asked him how he liked the sermon. "Pretty well," he replied. "The beginning was very good and so was the end; but it had too much middle."

SAYINGS OF CHILDREN.

Undeveloped Brains That Sometimes Puzzle Matured Minds.

"'No, thank you; I don't care for any,' said Little Marie, as her papa passed the cake. 'Why, dear,' said he; 'I thought you were fond of cake?' 'So I am,' she replied, 'but I heard mamma say it wasn't quite perfect, and when she says that it must be something awful.'

'Now, Tommy,' said the teacher, 'can you tell me what a propaganda is?' The little fellow looked at the ceiling and wrinkled his brow as he gravely wrestled with the problem, and finally replied: 'I don't know for sure, but think it must be a proper goose's brother.'

'Oh, look, what a pretty little moon!' exclaimed four-year-old Edith to her little brother, as she looked from her grandma's window at the small crescent in the western sky. 'Pshaw!' replied the unappreciative brother, 'I don't think it's half as pretty as the big round moon we had at home two weeks ago.'

'Johnny, aged five, had a habit of using in his conversation every big word he happened to hear, regardless of its meaning. One morning he and his elder brother were trying to wash from the same basin, to Johnny's detriment, and he ran into the kitchen, exclaiming, 'Mamma, Charley's metropolizing the whole laudatory!'

New Cinderella Parties.

London society has been amusing itself with Cinderella parties, and it is said functions of a similar character have taken place recently at some private houses here in New York. The Cinderella party is not the usually accepted variety by that name, where the guests are bound to say "Good night" just at the stroke of midnight. That sort of entertainment has proved itself almost impossible except among the youngest set, for where guests do not arrive until the unholy hour of eleven or thereabout it is hard to have a cast iron rule concerning their departure.

This Cinderella party owes its name to the chief source of amusement—namely, the wooden shoe which is furnished by the Oriental store, and which in its primitive condition is used by the Eastern woman in going to her bath. The shoe is sometimes highly ornamented with painting, gilding, etc., and the trick is to find a foot that will exactly fit its rather unusual proportions.

The masculine sex is not debarred from this form of entertainment, as the committee of arbitration and final court of appeal are formed of the male members of the entertainment, and on them devolves the tremendous task of deciding when fair ones disagree. The wooden shoe, so familiar to frequenters of Oriental bric-a-brac shops, is narrow and quite long, and the foot on which it is tried must not protrude an infinitesimal portion of an inch over the edge. Opportunities for dainty foot gear, for limitless discussions and coquettish attitudes are innumerable, and are usually made the most of. On the hostess devolves the pleasure of providing a suitable gift for the fortunate possessor of the prize foot for the fortunate Cinderella gives the shoe as a souvenir to some member of the committee.

There has always been a charm about the story of Cinderella which no amount of matured intellect is able to destroy. The prince and the slipper have formed the basis of many a girlish dream, and society, always amiable to pretty foibles, has taken this fact into consideration, apparently, in providing the latest form of entertainment for its votaries.

Sim-Nel Cake.

In ancient times, it is said, there lived a worthy couple named Simon and Nelly, who delighted in gathering their children about them at Easter. On one of these occasions there seems to have been more of the unleavened dough than usual remaining after the Lenten fast, and the thrifty housewife determined to utilize it. The good man suggested that the remains of the Christmas pudding, still in the cupboard, be used for the interior. When all was put together, a quarrel arose as to how it should be cooked; one wanted it boiled, the other baked. Over this they came to blows. Nelly picked up the stool on which she sat and threw it at Simon. He responded by taking the besom and beating her on the head and shoulders. Then Nelly took the broom and went for poor Simon. She was the first to propose a compromise, suggesting that they first boil the pudding and then bake it. The big pot was then put on the fire, and the stool was broken up and used to help boil the cake, while the broom was broken later, and used to help heat the oven to bake the cake. The eggs broken in the fight were used to coat the outside. These cakes were first called Simon and Nelly, the legend says, and later Sim-Nel.

A Serious Quest on

A kitten went a-walking
One morning in July,
And idly fell a-talking
With a great big butterfly.
The kitten's tone was airy,
The butterfly would scoff;
When there came along a fairy
Who whisked his wings right off.
And then—for it is written
Fairies can do such things—
Upon the startled kitten
She stuck the yellow wings.
The kitten felt a quiver,
She rose into the air,
Then flew down to the river
To view her image there.
With fear her heart was smitten,
And she began to cry,
"Am I a butter-kitten?
Or just a kitten-fly?"

CHAPTER VI.

The members of the court had scattered to their posts, all save the veteran president and Colonel Turnbull, the department inspector. Lieutenant Blake, to his disgust, had been sent scouting up the Hassayampa, where the Apaches had been some days before, but couldn't be found now, it being the practice of those nimble warriors to get far from the scene of their deviltries without needless delay, and the rule of the powers that were, until General Crook taught them wiser methods, was to promptly order cavalry to the spot where the Indians had been instead of where they had presumably gone. A buckboard en route to Date Creek, with two of the array that had sat in judgment on Nevins, had been "held up" at night by a gang of half a dozen desperadoes and the three passengers relieved of their valuables, consisting of one gold watch and two of silver, one seal ring, three revolvers, three extra sized canteens, a two gallon demijohn and in the aggregate three gallons of whisky.

The victims had submitted to the inevitable, so far as their gold and silver were concerned, but pathetically pointed out to the robber chief the hardship of being bereft at one fell swoop of the expensive and only consolation the country afforded, and despite his wrath and disappointment at finding that the gentlemen had already been robbed—two of them having spent four nights hand running at the post poker room—the leader was not so destitute of fellow feeling as to condemn the hapless trio to the loss of even the necessaries of life, and mercifully handed back half a gallon.

"We hope to catch some of you gentlemen when you haven't been playing poker," said he, striving to stifle his chagrin. "Who got it all, anyhow?" he asked, with an eye to future business.

"Ah, yes! Might have known it," he continued in response to the rueful admission of one of the party. "Wonderfully smart outfit that at Cooke, wonderfully—most as smart as some of our people at Sancho's. Well, so long, gentlemen. If any of your friends are coming this way, recommend our place, won't you? We've treated you as well as we know how. Drive on, Johnny. Nobody else will stop you this side of Date. They know we got here first."

Arizona was an interesting region in those days of development that followed close on the heels of the war. Hundreds of experienced hands had been thrown out of employment by the return of peace, and the territories overflowed with outlaws, red and white, male and female. It was taking one's life in one's hands to venture pistol shot beyond the confines of a military post. It was impossible for paymasters to carry funds without a strong escort of cavalry. The only currency in the territory was that put in circulation by the troops or paid to contractors through the quartermaster's department. Even Wells-Fargo, pioneer expressmen of the Pacific slope, sent their messengers and agents no farther then than the Colorado river, and Uncle Sam's mail stage was robbed so often that a registered package had grown to be considered only an advertisement to the covetous of the fact that its contents might be of value.

And so, when the record of the court was duly signed and sealed in huge official envelope, and Lieutenant Loring, even more grave and taciturn than usual, went the rounds of the rude quarters to leave his card or pay his ceremonious parting call on the officers who knew enough to call on him—which in those crude days of the army many did not—he was asked by more than one experienced soldier whether he had requested an escort in view of the fact that he was burdened with valuables that, though small in bulk, were convertible into cash that was anything but small in amount.

To such queries Mr. Loring, who had an odd aversion to answering questions as to what he was going to do, merely bowed assent and changed the subject. Lieutenant Gleason, an officer who had recently joined the infantry and was one of Nevins' victims, a man of unusual assurance, despite his few months of service, had persisted in his queries to the extent of demanding from what quarter Loring expected to get an escort, Blake being away at the Hassayampa and no other cavalry being within 60 miles, and Gleason felt resentful, though he deftly hid the fact, because the engineer ignored the question until it had been thrice repeated, and then he said, somewhat tartly, "That is my affair, Mr. Gleason."

Everybody thought that Loring was decidedly unsociable, and some went so far as to call him supercilious and haughty.

"Too blanked big to mingle with men who fought all through the war while he was a schoolboy at the Point," said Gleason, who had never seen a skirmish.

This latter gentleman took it much amiss that Loring had won the shoulder straps of a first lieutenant the day he first donned his uniform (many vacancies then existing in the corps of engineers), while Gleason and others with what he called war records were still second lieutenants. Officers of the caliber of Turnbull and Starke saw much to respect in the grave, silent, thoughtful young officer, but the juniors—the captains and lieutenants—though they had marked the ease and ability with which Loring handled what was probably his first case as judge advocate, nevertheless agreed that he was "offish" toward the general run of "the line," held himself aloof as though he considered himself of superior clay, didn't drink, smoke, swear or play cards and was therefore destitute of most elements of soldier companionship as then and there defined. It was resented, too, by almost everybody that Loring would not say when and how he expected to leave Camp Cooke. He had come on Sancho's famous roan, but had returned that animal by special courier without delay.

Starke and Turnbull were informed, but at Loring's request saw fit to hold their tongues. No one should know, he had said to them, if he was to be responsible for those valuables. It might leak out, and the veteran officers saw the point. The juniors could not well ask them (the veterans), but they could and did ask Loring and held it up against him in days to come that he declined to be confidential.

There was a man at Cooke who could have told them Loring showed wisdom in his observance of caution, and that man was Nevins, who had been sent for by the commanding officer the morning after the adjournment of the court and subjected to a questioning and a lecture that nobody else heard, but that everybody speedily knew must have been severe, because Nevins, lately so meek and lachrymose, was seen to go to his tent flushed with rage, and then from within those canvas walls his voice was heard uplifted in blasphemy and execration. Nor did he take advantage of garrison limits the rest of that day, nor once again that day appear outside.

At so great a distance from civilization trifles prove of absorbing interest and callers came to see what they "could do for him" and learn for themselves, and Nevins' face was black as a storm and his language punctuated with profanity. He raved about tyranny and oppression, but vouchsafed no intelligible explanation of what he confessed to be the commanding officer's latest order—that he was remanded to close arrest. Let it be here explained for the benefit of the lay reader that when an officer is accused of a crime or even of a misdemeanor he is placed in arrest, which means that he is suspended for the time being from the exercise of command, must not wear a sword and must confine himself to certain limits—to his tent or quarters if in close arrest, as for one week the officer generally is, and to the limits of the parade or garrison if allowed out for exercise.

No sentry is posted, for an officer is supposed to be on honor to observe the prescribed restrictions, and only when he breaks his arrest by visiting the quarters of some brother officer or by going outside of camp is he in danger of other humiliation. To none of his few visitors did Nevins reveal the fact that on the previous night, if not before, he had broken his arrest and gone far out on the mesa, back of the post; that he had been detected, by whom he knew not, reported to the commanding officer and by him severely reprimanded and threatened with close confinement under guard, as when first brought back to the post, if he again ventured beyond the restricted limits now assigned him.

"I have twice sent to ask that Mr. Loring should come to see me," railed Nevins. "I have important matters—papers and messages from my wife—and he holds aloof. By God, Gleason, you tell him for me that if he can't treat me decently and come to see me before tattoo this night, I demand that he hand back those diamonds and things—do you understand?"

And that message Mr. Gleason, who of all things loved a sensation, faithfully promised to deliver, and fully meant to; but the game at the sutler's developed into a big one that eventful night. Jack pots were the rule before the drums of the infantry hammered out first call for tattoo, and in the absorbing nature of his occupation he never thought of Nevins' charge except as something to be attended to later, and not until guard mount of another day, when his head was muddled with the potations of an all night session and the befogging cocktails of the morning, did Mr. Gleason approach the engineer upon the subject, and then there was a scene.

Loring was standing at the moment in front of the rude brush and adobe quarters of Major Starke conversing with two or three officers, or rather listening in silence to their observations. Turnbull was seated under the shelter of a sort of arbor made of framework and canvas, signing some papers. The president of the court had disappeared, and a rumor was flitting about the post that early in the morning, before the dawn in fact, that hardy veteran had pushed ahead in saddle, escorted by most of Blake's troop, which had unexpectedly returned during the previous night, but merely unsaddled, and after a "rub down, feed and water" had gone on again. If that were true, they had left as silently and mysteriously as they came, and only a corporal's guard remained.

Had Gleason been intent on anything but the manner in which he could make his communication most public and significant, if not offensive, he would have noticed that both Turnbull and Loring were in riding dress. But while it could not be said of him that in his condition he was capable of seeing only one thing at a time those things which he did see were duplicate images of the same object, and he lurched up to the dual Loring and the hazy figures that seemed floating about him, and with an attempt at majestic impressiveness thickly said, "Mr. Loring, I'm bearer of a message from my fri'n Mr.—Captain Nevins d'manding the me'dy't r'turn of the diamon's an valu'bles he placed in your p session."

Other officers within earshot heard, as Gleason intended they should hear, and turned instantly toward the group, all eyes on the two—the flushed, swaying subaltern in fatigue uniform, the calm, deliberate man in riding dress. A faint color, as of annoyance, quickly spread over Loring's face, but for a moment he spoke not a word. Angrily the post commander came hurrying forth, bent on the prompt annihilation of his luckless subaltern, and was about to speak, but Loring interposed.

"One moment, sir, I beg." Then turning again on Gleason the engineer looked him calmly over from head to foot for a second or two, and then as calmly said:

"Too late, sir. They've gone."

The useful beetle known as Novius cardinalis, and employed in California to eat up the "white or fluted scale," insects of the orange groves, has been exported to Portugal for the same purpose. The beetles were packed in moss with a quantity of scale insects to eat, and sent by mail to Lisbon. Only a few reached their destination alive, but they are prolific, and in a few months thousands were available for work on the scale insects which infest the orange groves of the Tagus.

France has paid its last pension to Napoleon I's soldiers. In 1869 a law was passed granting $50 a year to all non-commissioned officers and privates who had served ten years in the armies of the first republic or of the first empire and had received a wound. For the first year the payments amounted to $660,000; last year the sum was $50, and the last recipient is now dead at the age of one hundred and five years.

The king of Siam's embassy is now on its way back to Bangkok with the remains of Buddha, the man whom a third of the world worships. It seems to have been pretty well established that these were the human tenement of Buddha. They were discovered in a "stupa," which was opened by chance near the village of Pipra-Haua on the frontier of Nepaul. In the interior of the supra were discovered a stone sarcophagus, bones, ashes, glass vases, jewels and gems. An inscription on one of the vases, translated reads. "In this sarcophagus repose the remains of Buddha, Sakya Muni, the Blessed. This stupa was dedicated to this renowned brother by his sisters and the wives of their sons."

A broken-winded horse is rarely seen in Norway. The fact is accounted for by the statement that a bucket of water is always placed within reach of the horse when he is feeding, and the animal alternately takes a mouthful of hay and a sip of water.

A Word for the Girls.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The members of the Girls' Basket Ball team of the High School greatly deplore the inaccurate account of their recent game with the girls of the East Orange High School. They wish to take this opportunity to assure you and your readers that they are wholly innocent of the unfortunate charge of misrepresentation which has been raised. The Press did not get an account of the game from any member of the High School. We were beaten by a bad score. Our unwillingness to say anything about the game, however, was due to a pledge given before the game to the East Orange girls who did not desire to have the game reported in the papers.

WOMAN SCHOOL TRUSTEE

ROSELLE RECOGNIZES FAIR SEX IN SCHOOL ADMINISTRATION.

Miss May White Secures the Honor—Contrary to Expectations, Women Did Not Turn Out at the Westfield School Election

(Special to The Daily Press)

Roselle, March 22—At the annual meeting of the Roselle school district last evening Miss May White was elected a school trustee. John Gregery and C. H. Crane were also elected. The meeting voted to appropriate $20,000 for the purpose of erecting a new primary school building.

Westfield, March 22—Contrary to all expectation the women did not take an active part in the annual school meeting held here last evening. The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by District Clerk J. J. Coger.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Morehouse asking that the appropriation for the expenses for the coming year be made $15 250, as asked for by the Board of Education. Samuel W. Reese, who was for seven years a member of the board, arose and asked that he be allowed to make an amendment. This he did cutting the figure down by several thousand dollars.

When the question was put the amendent was voted down and the original motion was carried. Harry Knight was re-elected a trustee and the new member will be Charles Forster, of Mountainside Borough.

The report of the district clerk showed that a balance of $1,046 15 would be left in the school treasury at the end of the present school year.

The board called the attention of the citizens to the increased number of school children in the township and asked that some provision be made for looking after them. The report also asked that the board be authorized to borrow money on notes for the purpose of paying their bills before the taxes were available as last year. A resolution to that effect was passed. The meeting then adjourned.

EXEMPTS BOUND TO HAVE "GUS."

Would't Listen to Mr. Saltzman's Declination of Office.

The Exempt Firemen's Association held a meeting last evening and nominated officers for the election to take place at an early date. Auguste Saltzman was nominated for president, but declared that he desired to retire as he expects very soon to go to Europe, where he will live permanently. The members would not listen to this, however, and he finally decided to allow his name to stand. The other business transacted was of a routine nature.

HORSEMEN PLANNING FOR A NEW LEAGUE.

Triangular Trotting Association is Probable.

PLAINFIELD IS INCLUDED.

NEW BRUNSWICK AND TRENTON WILL COMPLETE THE TRIO.

Somerville and Flemington Lost Money in the Venture Last Year and Don't Care to Try Again—Interest in Trotting is Still High—Plainfield Meet Made Money During the Last Season Races.

Last year marked a decided increase in the interest in trotting among the horsemen of this section of New Jersey. A trotting association was formed in which Plainfield played a prominent part. A circuit of meets was held, opening in this city the last of June. There now promises to be no abatement in the interest during the coming season although a change in membership of the legue seems likely.

The circuit last year opened in Plainfield with a two days meet. Two-day meets were then held at Somerville, Flemington and New Brunswick. While from the point of view of the sport they were all successful, the promoters came out behind financially in all cases except Plainfield. Here the local management netted a small balance, enough to encourage them to further efforts.

New Brunswick built a new trotting course and lost a little money on the meet. The loss was made up by the horsemen of that city. As it was only the first season, they felt encouraged at the showing made and were anxious to try again.

There is every prospect of a new trotting association this year. The same men, with a few exceptions, who made last year's circuit so successful, will be at the head of affairs this year. It will probably be a triangular league this year with Plainfield, New Brunswick and Trenton as members. Somerville and Flemington lost too much money on the meets last year to care to try it again. They will be represented by ther fast trotters and pacers, however.

Trenton is a new comer in the circuit, but the excellent track there, combined with the many fast horses owned in the State capital, make it desirable to include that city. Then, too, a circuit of only two meets would not draw many fast horses from any distance, so the addition of Trenton is likely to improve the entry lists.

New Brunswick and Plainfield are both satisfied with the showing that they made last year and are anxious to try again. No organization has yet been formed but the arrival of the warm weather will rouse the horsemen to action and a circuit will undoubtedly be ready to start by the middle of June.

UNITY LODGE'S ANNIVERSARY.

Pythians Celebrate Their Sixteenth Year as a Lodge.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., celebrated their sixteenth anniversary last night with an elaborate entertainment followed by a spread of good things.

The entertainers were from the Cosmopolitan Lyceum Bureau, of New York. There was the Cosmopolitan Ladies' Quartette; C. T. Wiegand, a vocal comedy singer and humorist; Clinton E. Weston, a trick pianist, and Lillian Renner, soubrette.

There were visitors present from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Goodwill, No. 101, of Scotch Plains, Somerset, No. 56, of Bound Brook, besides many invited guests not attached to any of the lodges.

Unity Lodge, which is an outgrowth of Perseverance, was organized sixteen years ago with fifteen charter members, most of whom are connected with the lodge today. During the sixteen years that have passed, 186 members have been connected with the lodge, many of whom have died, moved away or been dropped from the rolls. At the present time there are 99 menbers, and two applications waiting to be acted upon.

The committee in charge of the anniversary consisted of George Radford, Frank Putnam, J. W. A. Bauersachs, William Johnson and Edgar Chapple.

New Church Nearly Ready.

The new Calvary Baptist church is rapidly nearing completion. It was hoped that it would be ready for Easter, but this will be impossible.

YOUNGER BLOOD WANTED IN A MISSION BAND.

PRESENT MEMBERS ARE TOO OLD.

Annual Meeting of a Baptist Society Yesterday—Mrs. L. H. Biglow Elected President.

Yesterday afternoon the Young Ladies' Mission Band of the First Baptist church held their annual meeting for the election of officers and transaction of other important business. There was a fair attendance and much interest was manifested. It was decided at the meeting to reorganize the band and recruit younger persons. The majority of the members are old enough to join the older missionary societies and this it was decided to do.

The report of the secretary showed that during the past year a great deal of good had been accomplished and the band feels much encouraged in consequence. The treasurer reported that about $250 was raised during the year and this amount has been divided between the home and foreign mission work.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr.; first vice-president, Mrs. W. O. Chapman; second vice-president, Miss Elsie Brokaw; recording secretary, Miss Edith Cairns; corresponding secretary, Miss May Shreve; treasurer, Miss Bertha Thorn.

HARD EARNED DOLLARS.

ENDEAVORERS TOLD HOW THEY EARNED THEM.

Successful Social at Seventh-Day Baptist Church Last Evening—Thirty-one Experiences, Mostly in Rhyme, Were Read.

Thirty-one different methods of earning a dollar were variously described at a sociable held in the parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist church last evening. The affair was held under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the church. It was a "Dollar" social. Each member of the society was expected to earn a dollar in some unusual way and then entertain the others with the story of how it was done. There was a large gathering and the various tales were listened to with interest.

Thirty one of the members told how they earned their dollar. Most of these tales were in rhyme. Rev. A. E. Main, the pastor, told of the earning of his dollar in very witty fashion, others were very good. There was sewing, snow-shoveling, reading aloud, shampooing and countless other ways in which the dollars were earned.

Then there were a few who earned their dollars, but did not want to tell about it. A collection was also taken, and the results of it all amounted to $50.

The programme opened with a piano duet by Miss Jessie Utter and Miss Mable Maxson. During the reading of the experiences, there was a vocal solo by Miss Mary Griswold, accompanied by Miss Hattie Filmer. A vocal duet was also given by Mrs. D. E. Titsworth and Mrs. W. C. Hubbard. Arthur L. Titsworth acted as master of ceremonies.

At the close of the programme, refreshments were served and a social hour was enjoyed. The committee in charge of the social was composed of Miss Ida Randolph, Mrs. F. J. Hubbard, Mrs. James E. Kimball, Miss Ernestine Smith and Dr. F. T. Clawson. The committee on refreshments consisted of Miss Nancy Randolph and Miss Anna Wooden.

DEATH DUE TO A FALL.

Mrs Abbie S. Hepburn Dies at the Home of Her Son, C. E. Hepburn.

The death of Mrs. Abbie S. Hebburn, aged 70 years, of Prescott, Ontario, occurred yesterday afternoon at the home of her son, C. E Hepburn, of East Second street, as the result of a fall she had about one year ago when she sustained serious injuries. She was the daughter of the late Samuel Sanger, of Boston, where she was born. For many years her home was at Prescott, Ont., but two years ago she came to Plainfield to live with her son. She also has a daughter, Mrs. Nellie S. Tabb, of New Market. Mrs. Hepburn was a member of the M. E church at Prescott, and she was a faithful Christian woman. She leaves an estate valued at about $25,000 and her son is one of the executors. This estate will be equally divided between the children.

The funeral services were held from Mr. Hepburn's house today and the body was taken to Prescott for interment, where it will be placed beside the remains of relatives.

Euchre Was Enjoyed.

A pleasant evening was spent at the Park Club Tuesday night with euchre. There were ten tables, and over 40 guests present. Next week the committee are arranging to give an entertainment, which will be given in place of the card games.

TROLLEY TO CONNECT WITH PLAINFIELD

Senator Kean Offers to Pave Elizabeth Streets for Franchise.

CHANGE OF MOTIVE POWER.

PROPERTY OWNERS WERE IN FAVOR OF THE PROPOSITION.

In Consideration of the Franchise Being Granted a Continuous Pavement Would be Built From Staten Island Ferry to the Centre of the City—Road to be Connected With Plainfield.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 23.—A great crowd of property owners packed the Council chamber Tuesday night, at the final public hearing given to Senator John Kean's Elizabeth Street Railway Company, which wants to change its motive power from horses to electricity, so as to connect with the proposed trolley line from Elizabeth to Plainfield, along Westfield avenue.

Senator Kean presented a new proposition, which, it was stated, was the best the company could offer the city. It was that in consideration of the privilege being granted the company to change its motive power and extend its line under the Pennsylvania and Central railroads, up Morris avenue and through Orchard street and Westfield avenue to the city line, adjoining Union township, the company would pave with trap block, from curb to curb, East Jersey street, from the Staten Island ferry at Elizabethport, to Smith street, and would also pave in like manner, South, Livingston and East Grand streets, through which the street railroad runs to Broad street. Morris avenue would likewise be paved from curb to curb with block pavement, and Orchard street and Westfield avenue with telford. The company also agrees to pave with trap rock Fifth street, from East Jersey street to Trumbull street, and also the latter thoroughfare to the Singer Sewing Machine Works. This is on a branch line of the road that is run for the accommodation of the Singer works' employes.

East Jersey street is already paved, as is Morris avenue and part of East Grand street, but the company proposes to take up the present pavement and thoroughly repave these streets. All the other streets through which the street railroad runs are mud roads, whose condition has been very bad during the past winter. The work is to be all completed and the trolley line in operation by July 1st, if the City Council takes prompt action on the matter.

Many speeches were made by the assembled property owners. It was thought that there would be strong opposition to the company being allowed to use the roadway under the westerly Broad street arch, over which the Pennsylvania and Central Railroads run, but, on the contrary, the business men and storekeepers on Morris avenue, who will be most affected by this, were unanimous in stating that they had no objection to the arch being used. The North Jersey Street Railway Company now uses the roadway under the other arch. It was the original intention of the city authorities, when the track elevation scheme was projected and carried through, that the street under the westerly arch should be kept clear of street railway tracks and reserved for the use of vehicles and pedestrians.

April 1st the Council will vote on the subject, and it is believed that the railroad company's offer will be accepted and the franchise granted.

FEW HEARD TALK OF THE WAR.

Miss Benjamin Greeted With a Small Audience at Music Hall.

If there had been as much enthusiasm displayed in the late Spanish-American war among the people of this country as there was in the lecture given at Music Hall last evening by Anna Northend Benjamin, war correspondent, the whole affair would have been a complete fizzle. This woman gave a highly interesting lecture and the pictures displayed were equal to any seen in this city. John Neagle assisted by J. Hervey Doane, worked the slides, but for some reason there was a hitch and it somewhat marred the pleasure of the lecture. Miss Benjamin gave a clear and concise talk covering the principal features of the war. The views were taken by herself and were vere fine. It was evident by the attendance that the interest in the late war has subsided, but those present enjoyed themselves very much.

FOR VETERANS' HONOR.

REV. MR. O'DONNELL EXPLAINS MOVEMENT FOR SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

It is Proposed to Erect the Shaft Not Only in Memory and Honor of Civil War Soldiers, but of Present Day Fighters

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, who is at the head of the committee which is working to raise funds for the erection of a soldiers' monument in this city, sends the following letter to The Daily Press:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Can you spare space in your paper for a short announcement to the public concerning the proposed soldiers' monument? The committee is trying to formulate a plan that will commend itself to the people and that will insure the largest measure of success. We feel that the time has come for decisive action, and that for a city of the size, character and resources of Plainfield to be without a soldiers' monument is sadly reprehensible. An appeal for subscriptions will soon be made and we hope to find every man, woman and child in the city ready to respond. The Sons of Veterans show their devotion to this cause by pledging the sum of two hundred dollars.

Such a monument will have a threefold purpose and virtue. First, as a memorial to the heroes who upon sea and upon land have offered themselves to physical danger and death for the sake of the land we love. A battle calendar of the Republic reveals the fact that every day in the year, including February 29th of leap year, is the anniversary of some bloody contest, the entire number of battles to the close of the year 1898 being 2,607.

During the War of the Rebellion between three and four hundred thousand soldiers of the Union army lost their lives and men are still living who suffered terrible things at that time. The list of martyrs for the Phillipines and the Antilles is not yet complete and many American mothers are praying for the return of their boys. A monument of gold would be none too good for such a memorial.

In the second place, such a memorial will be a mute, but eloquent and never wearying source of inspiration to the young people of the community upon whom the burden of Government will soon fall and to generations yet unborn.

Thirdly, the monument will bear constant testimony to the gratitude and generosity of the prosperous citizens of a peaceful and peace loving community. And may I add that such a monument as we contemplate building will be a valuable architectural adornment to a city already famous for its beauty.

William C. O'Donnell,
President Soldiers' Monument Committee.

WARREN WORKS WELL.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY OF WARREN CHAPEL HELD ANNUAL MEETING.

Reports of Officers Showed Society in a Very Prosperous Condition—Increase in Offerings for Missions—New Officers.

A very satisfactory state of affairs was shown to exist in the Ladies' Aid Society of Warren chapel, the annual meeting of which organization was held in the chapel yesterday afternoon. Despite the rain there was a large attendance of members present.

The reports of the officers showed that the society had, during the past year, exceeded the work of previous years and had made a particularly good showing. Financially, the situation was very satisfactory. The offerings for missions had more than doubled and there was still a good balance in the treasury with which to carry on the work of the coming year.

The election of officers was held and resulted as follows: President, Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman; first vice-president, Mrs. Sutton; second vice president, Mrs. Andrew Stiglitz; secretary, Mrs J. W. Gavett; treasurer, Miss Adele Hope Kirby.

A letter was read from Miss Rachael Mair, a member of Warren chapel who is now a missionary at Wissika, Africa. It was very interesting.

At the close of the meeting a social hour was held when the young women of the church served cake and chocolate to the members of the society.

Supper in New Pasonage.

This and tomorrow evenings a supper will be given in the new parsonage of Grace M. E. church under the auspices of the Epworth League. The proceeds will be devoted to furnishing the parsonage and liberal patronage is asked as great efforts are being made to have the affair a success.

BAPTIST OFFICERS CHOSEN FOR A YEAR

Annual Meeting of Park Avenue Society Last Night.

FINANCES FLOURISHING.

SLIGHT DECREASE IN MEMBERSHIP DURING THE YEAR.

Thomas A. Cuming Re-elected to the Position of Church Clerk for Another Year—Difficulty in Securing a Treasurer, But C. Frank Vail Finally Accepted the Office—Pastor Appointed Committee.

The Wednesday evening meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church last night was given up wholly to the transaction of business, it being time for the annual church meeting. Everything necessary to be transacted on that occasion came up for consideration, and a great deal of business was disposed of in an hour and a half.

The church treasurer's report showed that the benevolent collection for the past year amounted to $192.19, all of which has been disposed of through its proper channels. The Sunday-school is in a flourishing condition, and has a total enrollment of 145 members, a small decrease from last year. Fifty of these are members of the home department.

The Christian Endeavor Society has a balance of $2.64 on hand. Their receipts were $131.92 and the expenditures $129.28. Mrs. W. S. Lowry, superintendent of the Junior C. E., read an interesting account of that society's year's work. They have received and expended $21.25, and have an emptiy treasury.

The Woman's Home Missionary Circle have interested themselves in chapel car work and in giving aid to the poor in the West. The sum of $80.45 is the amount received during the year from contributors. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Circle have raised $125.09 for their work. The What-So-Ever Circle of King's Daughters have received $19.27 during the year, in various ways. $11.64 of it has been expended, leaving a balance of $7.63.

The committee of the deacons' fund reported receipts of $109.81, expenditures of $81.80, leaving a balance of $28.01.

A year ago the membership of the church numbered 277. During the year 16 members have been added, and 18 have been lost leaving a total membership to date 275.

The election of officers was next in order, and Thomas A. Cuming, church clerk, was unanimously elected to continue in that position. A treasurer for the benevolent fund was not so easy to secure. First one man after another refused the nomination until finally a woman arose and presented the name of one of her sex for the office. The young lady so honored declined, so E. Frank Vail was next nominated, accepted and was elected.

Two deacons had to be elected to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the terms of William Tallman and Charles A. Haynes. Mr. Tallman was re-elected, and Andrew Fish was chosen to succeed Mr. Haynes, whose recent decease made it necessary to elect some one in his place.

The pastor then appointed the following committees and the meeting adjourned: Calling committee, Mesdames Ada Freeman, J. W. Johnson, A. D Phillips, W. S. Lowry, Alice Runyon, A. D Thompson, T. I. Runyon and Miss Anna Wyckoff.

Committee on sick: Mesdames Peter Wyckoff, T. I. Runyon, A. D. Phillips and Emaline Dunham.

Committee on entertainment: Mesdames J. W. Johnson, L. A. Udele, Alice Johnson, W. S. Lowry, Nellie Udele Smith and the Misses Annie Wyckoff, Ada Runyon and May D. Thompson.

Baptismal and robing committee: Mesdames T. I. Runyon, Charles Stimpson and Miss Elizabeth Runyon.

Ushers, Joseph W. Hawkins, Thad. Doane, Herbert Richardson, J. M. Doane and E. Frank Vail.

Teachers' Meeting.

Prof. H. C. Krebs, President of the Somerset County Teachers' Association, has issued the programme for its next meeting, which will take place at the North Plainfield High School Saturday. There will be class exercises in primary reading, Ward method, by Miss Mary Hart of North Plainfield Prin. E. H. Dutcher, of East Orange, will discourse on "One Way of Teaching Reading." "The Use and Abuse of Methods" will be the subject of remarks by Miss Shattuck, of Bryant school, Plainfield. Prin H. H. Crum, of North Branch, will speak on "Written Composition" and Prin. Dutcher on "School English."

THUNDER STARTLED THE SLEEPING CITY.

ELECTRICAL STORM LAST NIGHT.

First Crash Sounded Like an Explosion—No Serious Damage Yet Reported—Telephone Lines Suffered.

All was quiet. Most of Plainfield's good folk had retired for the night some time ago. The hands of the old clock in the hall pointed to half an hour before midnight. Suddenly there came a blinding flash and a terrific crash that brought most of the sleepers to a sitting posture with a dim consciousness that something awful had happened. Then followed other flashes and crashes at frequent intervals, telling of another thunder storm out of season.

That crash of last night roused half the city. Some thought there was an earthquake. It sounded more like an explosion than thunder and many thought it was. As far as has been learned, no damage was done by the bolt, aside from burning out the fuses on the telephone lines.

The electrical storm did not last very long. It was followed by a heavy downpour. This is the second severe thunder storm that has visited this section during March.

This morning there was lots of talk about the heavy crash of the night but nobody had any serious damage to report. No reports of trouble were made to the fire department or the police.

WORK OF A LIVE CHURCH.

REPORTS MADE AT MEETING OF FIRST BAPTIST SOCIETY.

All the Departments Showed Activity and Good Results by Those in Charge—Deacons Chosen for Five-Year Terms

The annual meeting of the First Baptist church was held last evening, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor, presided. O. B. Leonard, church clerk, acted in his capacity.

Deacon J. B. Probasco reported for the poor fund showing that after all bills were paid there is a balance of $156. The report from the Temple Builders' Society showed that $350 was contributed toward the support of the Yerkes chapel at Tettu, India, and that there is now $50 in hand.

Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, for the Ladies' Aid Society, reported that much help had been given during the year. Miss Florence presented an excellent report of the work done by the Women's Home Missionary Society, showing that a large amount of money had been raised and contributed to mission work. L. W. Serrell, Sr., presented an interesting report from the church beneficent committee.

Mrs. Frank Jones, from the Young Ladies' Mission Band, reported that the members had disbursed about $250 during the year and that there is now a balance of $5 in the treasury.

The report of the treasurer of the Sunday-school showed that the receipts were $2,000 and the disbursements were $1,700 leaving a balance of about $350.

Superintennent L. W. Randolph, of the East Third Street mission, presented a verbal report, showing that the attendance is now one hundred per cent. better than ever. For the home Sunday school First Assistnt Superintendent George F. Brown made a verbal report.

Miss Grace Yerkes reported for the Gold Dust Band, showing that this active organization is doing its share in mission work. A very gratifying and excellent report for the Women's Foreign Missionary Society was presented by Mrs. B. J. Shreve, and L. H. Biglow, Jr., made a report for the Christian Endeavor Society.

Following the reading of the reports George F. Brown and George H. Batchelor were re-elected deacons for a term of five years, and Mrs. John D. Runyon was elected a manager from the church to the Baptist Home for the Aged at Newark.

A committee consisting of Dr. Yerkes, O. B. Leonard and F. E. Marsh were appointed to go to Newark next week Thursday and assist in the ordination of Mr. Murray, who is about to become a Baptist minister.

Before the meeting closed Mr. and Mrs. Fred Grant, of this city, were received into membership by a unanimous vote.

MONEY NEEDED TO RUN STATE AFFAIRS.

Annual Appropriations Run Up to Nearly $3,000,000.

A MURRAY BILL PASSED.

ANTI-TRADING STAMP BILL PASSED BY THE LEGISLATURE.

Favorable Laws for Trust Companies to Come Here So That the State Can Receive the Incorporation Fees—Attempt to Repeal the Dunn Act Fails in the Senate—Other Business.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 23—The bills carrying the appropriations to run the government of New Jersey the rest of this and also next year made their appearance yesterday. They foot up to $2,999,417.72. If the deficiency is as great in 1900 as it is this year, another half million will have to be added to the amount. Among what are known as extraordinary expenditures provided for, and the money for which is immediately available, are $230,000 for the new reformatory at Rahway; $87,615 for improvements at the Morris Plains Hospital for the Insane, and about $80,000 to restore ordnance, equipment, material, etc., to the National Guard, they having been used by the State during the Spanish war.

Assemblyman Murray's amendment to the election law, requiring election boards to report to the Secretary of State the number of ballots cast for each political party at every election, was passed by the House.

Mr. Mungle's bill to make the trading stamp business illegal was passed with extra enthusiasm. The House was quite unanimous in the belief that the business ought to be blotted out. It was bitterly denounced by several members.

A bill pending in the Senate and likely to pass before sine die adjournment of the Legislature is designed to further increase the State's income from corporations. It is for the regulation of trust companies. The New York companies are compelled to pay a tax on trust funds deposited with them. In the bill here there is no such provision and if it becomes a law it is expected that the New York companies will organize New Jersey branches and keep their trust funds in the branch institutions in order to escape the tax imposed in New York. New Jersey will benefit by the tax to be received from the companies. This tax will be at local rates in the municipalities where they may be established on their capital stock and accumulated surplus. The trust funds of New Jersey people will only be reachable for taxing purposes at the homes of the owners, and they will escape taxation entirely, as the local assessors will have no information concerning them except through voluntary returns. Most of the money held in trust will, of course, belong to non-residents and they will be in a position to escape taxation.

Senator Van Cleef's bill to repeal the Dunn act with reference to the admission of law students to the bar was killed by the House yesterday by a vote more decisive than that which several days ago killed a facsimile of the bill introduced by Mr. Jones. For the latter's bill there were twenty-seven votes in the affirmative. Senator Van Cleef's bill received only eighteen votes, more than half the lawyer members of the House, including Speaker Watkins, voting against it.

$200 FOR SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

Liberal Appropriation Made by Sons of Veterans for the Enterprise.

At a meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, last Tuesday evening the members decided to contribute $200 toward the erection of the proposed soldiers' monument in this city. A committee was appointed of which E. P. T. Smith is chairman, and this committee will arrange for entertainments, etc., to raise money to contribute to the object. There was a great deal of enthusiasm exhibited at the meeting, and the members feel sure that the monument will be a reality at no distant day.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, president of the joint committee, was present at the meeting and made a few remarks in which he enlisted the support of all present.

Epworth League Reception.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will give a reception in Vincent chapel tomorrow evening to the Leagues of Monroe Avenue and Grace M. E. churches as well as the societies from Dunellen, Scotch Plains and Westfield.

Mr. H. C. Lippencott of 39 Chatham street, says: "After my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills I cannot do otherwise than speak in the highest terms of them. I was a victim of kidney complaint and dreadful backache, which was so bad in damp weather or when I caught cold I could not get about. I was in the hardware business at this time and the heavy lifting and being on my feet so much greatly aggravated the troubles. I was at my worst when I concluded to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and I got them at L. W. Randolph's drug store. It only required a few doses to convince me that I had the right remedy. My backache disappeared before I had finished the first box. You are at liberty to refer anyone to me and I will gladly give my experience in detail."

Points Contained in Our Commissioners Address.

MEANWHILE WE GET READY

The President's Commissioners Who Are Now at Manila Are Expected to Deal Gently, but Firmly With the Filipinos—Preparing to Enforce Demands.

Manila, March 23.—The address to the natives of the Philippine Islands, drafted by the American Commission in behalf of the United States Government, and embodying the views of the President, has been made public.

It has been translated into all native dialects and is to be disseminated throughout the archipelago.

The salient points of the address, which has been prepared by the President's order, are these:

It assures the population of the Philippine Islands of the intention of the Americans to develop the powers of self-government in the people.

It explains that the United States has assumed international obligations which it must fulfill, and which make it responsible to the whole civilized world for the stable government of the Philippines.

That the United States cannot divest itself of these responsibilities the address assures the people.

The commission is to interpret to the natives the purposes and intentions of the President of the United States toward them, and also to suggest the establishment of such a government as shall suit the capacity and requirements of the Filipinos and be consistent with the interests of the United States.

The people are assured also that the President's sole wish is to establish a system of government such as will render the natives capable of administering their own affairs under American control. The protection of the United States is not to be exercised in any spirit of tyranny or vengeance.

Bound to Make Peace.

Having destroyed the Spanish power and accepted the sovereignty of the islands, the United States is bound to restore peace in the Philippines.

To this end all insurgents are invited to lay down their arms and place their trust in the Government that emancipated them from the oppression of Spanish rule.

The majority of the Commissioners incline toward giving the Filipinos a sort of tribal or provincial local autonomy under a central American Government which shall be military until a purely civil system is proved to be feasible.

Reorganization of the American Forces.

While apparently inactive since Sunday, really the opposite has been the case with the American forces. A reorganization, entailing many changes, has been in progress since the abandonment of the flying column. Gen. Wheaton's and Gen. Hall's brigades have not been assigned, but the Oregon regiment, the Minnesota regiment, and the Twenty-second Regiment have been concentrated at the camp on the Luneta, at the water-front, in readiness for immediate transportation when the plans of the military leaders have been formulated.

Out troops are entrenched and the situation is practically unchanged. The Filipinos have refrained from making any attacks. Apparently the insurgents are saving their ammunition for a decisive movement.

According to a prisoner captured by our troops, Aguinaldo has announced that he will personally conduct the reserves at Malolos, and march into Manila within twenty days, unless the Americans withdraw in the meantime. The concentration of rebel forces in the vicinity of Malabon gives color to the statement of the prisoner.

Advices received from Cebu by a coasting steamer say all is quiet there.

The United States transport Sherman, bringing the Third United States Infantry and a battalion of the Seventeenth Infantry from New York on February 3, has arrived here. One child, two sailors, and two privates died on the voyage, and one man was drowned in the Mediterranean.

Gen. Otis's Reinforcements.

Washington, March 23.—Additional reinforcements reached Gen. Otis at Manila this morning, as is indicated by the receipt of a dispatch from Gen. Otis saying that the transport Sherman had just arrived with the troops in good condition. The Sherman followed the transport Sheridan over the same route. The Sheridan is expected to reach Manila in about two weeks. These three vessels will add about 5,000 fresh regular troops to the military forces in the Philippines, and are expected to aid materially in the plans which contemplate the complete subjugation of the insurrectionists before the opening of the rainy season, about the middle of April.

China Refuses Italy.

Rome, March 23.—It is understood that the Chinese Minister has informed the Italian Government that China absolutely refuses the demand of Italy for a concession at San-Mun Bay.

The Shanghai Foreign Settlements.

Peking, March 23.—The British, German and American Ministers at Peking have addressed notes to the Esungli-Yamen demanding a decision on the Shanghai foreign settlement extension question, the French Minister, M. Pichon, agreeing to withdraw the protest of the French Consul, on the condition that the proposed extensions do not include that portion of the land forming the immediate hinterland of the present French concession.

Connecticut Soldiers Back.

New York, March 23.—Six companies of the Third Connecticut Volunteers reached Jersey City yesterday from Savannah. They had been mustered out of the volunteer army, and were on their way home. The men arrived on a special train over the Pennsylvania Railroad. They remained in Jersey City a short time and were ferried to New York. They took the steamboat for New Haven.

COL. BRYAN ACCEPTS.

Telegraphs That He Will Attend the $1 Dinner April 17.

New York, March 23.—The issue between the out-and-out silver Democrats and Tammany Hall came to a crisis with the silver Democrats on top.

Eugene V. Brewster, the Brooklyn lawyer, who is the official representative in this State of the silver members of the Democratic National Committee, received a telegram from Col. William J. Bryan this afternoon which will make the $1 dinner the real Jeffersonian thing. The telegram was as follows:

"Eugene V. Brewster, Brooklyn, N. Y.:
"Will attend Jefferson dinner of the Chicago Democrats on April 17.
"WILLIAM J. BRYAN."

There was undisguised joy among the Chicago platform men in Mr. Brewster's office when the message came. They had been awaiting an answer all day. The acceptance made certain not only the success of the $1 dinner, but insured the formal revival of the silver question in New York city.

Before Col. Bryan's telegram was received representatives of the labor organizations had called on Mr. Brewster and asked him to make the date April 15. This falls on a Saturday, and would be much more convenient for the labor men who desire to take a day's rest after the feast. The representations of the labor men were very strong, and at their request Mr. Brewster telegraphed Col. Bryan asking him if he could not come on April 15, so as to oblige the labor unions.

Richard Croker was not at his downtown office to be told the news, and it was said at the Democratic Club that he was not in the building. Perry Belmont was said to have left his house early. He was not at the Democratic Club. Other Tammany leaders were seen, but would not be quoted until they knew the views of the Tammany leader.

The coming of Col. Brayan, however, will cause a distinct breach in the party here and wean from Tammany many of its stanchest followers.

The Tammany men feel that the Chicago platform issue would never have come to the front but for Mr. Croker's dinner. They fear now that there will be a split, and a wide one, in the Presidential issue next year, and that the Chicago Democrats will have a permanent organization and go into the next Mayoralty campaign as avowed enemies of Tammany Hall. The issue has now become too big to brush aside, and the local supremacy of Tammany is sure to become involved.

The attendance of Col. Bryan is certain to bring with it the acceptance of invitations by many other prominent Democrats outside the State.

New Jersey Firemen's Home.

Trenton, March 23.—Among the bills signed by Gov. Voorhees is Assambly Bill No. 40, introduced by Wood McKee of Passaic county, which supplements the act of last year, authorizing the State to establish and maintain a home for the aged, indigent and disabled firemen of New Jersey. The act of 1898 created a Commission to take care of the necessary arrangements, which Commission was composed of Burd W. Spencer, Benjamin W. Cloud, William M. Jeffries, William T. Corliss, Charles N. Reading, John McKiernan, William H. Brown, George T. Werts, Egbert Seymour, William S. Hancock, and William Battle.

The Commission was empowered to purchase a proper and suitable building and lands, to be known as the New Jersey Firemen's Home, at a cost not exceeding $75,000. This money it was to raise through the Commissioner of Banking, who, instead of paying to the treasurers of the several firemen's relief asociations in this State, as then requested by law, would withhold the payments until the necessary amount was accumulated.

Under this act the Commission purchased a handsome building and lands at Boonton, in Morris county, for $36,000, and contracted for its interior furnishing at a cost of $19,776. The work will be completed by June 1 of this year.

The supplemental bill just signed by the Governor ratifies the action of the Commissioners in purchasing the Boonton property and provides that as soon as a Board of Managers for the Home is appointed, the Commission shall convey the property to it. The supplement also exempts the Home from either State or municipal taxation.

In the State Legislatures.

Another law regarding the conduct of newspapers has been enacted in California. It requires that any article reflecting upon the character or integrity of any living person, or upon the memory of any one dead, must carry the signature of the writer. News agency articles are exempt.

The Colorado House has concurred with the Senate in the passage of a bill forbidding the use of party emblems on the official ballot, and substituting a printed line across the top of the ballot, reading, "I hereby vote a straight ——— ticket," the blank to be filled in by the voter with the name of the party favored.

The Tennessee Legislature has sustained a veto of a bill, which gave street railway companies the right to sell electricity for heat, light, and power purposes. Gov. McMillin objected to the measure on the ground that it was against public policy to give a corporation more than one function, and that it would foster a monopoly.

The New Jersey Senate has, by a vote of 8 yeas to 12 nays, as follows, defeated the 5 per cent. interest bill, and a motion to reconsider was lost.

An Insurance Decision.

San Francisco, March 23.—The Supreme Court has rendered an important decision in an insurance. Mrs. Alice N. Knartson, a widow, brought an action against the Manhattan Life Insurance Company of New York, to recover upon a policy of life insurance taken out by her husband. The defence was that the policy had become forfeited prior to the death of the insured because of the non-payment of the fourth semi-annual payment. In the lower court the insurance company was successful. The Supreme Court has reversed this judgment, and ordered a new trial. The widow contended that the company waived the payment of the premium at the time it became due, its agent agreeing to an extension of time, and hence there was no forfeiture of policy. The Supreme Court sustains this contention.

MR. SHERMAN IMPROVES

Went on Deck Wednesday for an Hour.

EX-SECRETARY'S BUSY LIFE

The Aged Statesman Continues to Show Improvement—Santiago Fully Believed the Report of His Death Until the Paris Arrived—How the Report Was First Spread Abroad.

Santiago, March 23.—Hon. John Sherman continues to improve, and was moved from his cabin on deck yesterday for an hour. Gen. Wood went on board the Paris in the morning to visit Mr. Sherman. The city is full of tourists, who have landed from the American liner.

Owing to the supposed authenticity of the report received here from Capt. Leigh, the chief signal officer, regarding the alleged death of John Sherman, the weekly reception of Mrs. Wood, the wife of Gen. Leonard Wood, was postponed. But, after the arrival of the American Line steamer Paris at Santiago, and the announcement that there was no truth in the report, word was sent out that Mrs. Wood would receive. It was too late to obtain the services of the band, but in spite of this, fully 200 passengers from the Paris were present at the reception.

When the Paris reached here, those on board of her noticed that the flag flying from Morro Castle, at the entrance of the harbor, was at half mast, and they supposed that some important personage was dead. Therefore, they clamored for news; but, as soon as the steamer reached the waiting tug, the passengers were greatly surprised to hear that a report was current that Mr. Sherman was dead.

Capt. Leigh gave the Signal Office at Guantanamo a bad quarter of an hour, and the men on duty there explained that they had received the alleged news of Mr. Sherman's death from the French Cable Company, and, supposing it to be correct, sent an official confirmation, as they had no cause to doubt the authenticity of the report.

The announcement of Mr. Sherman's death obtained so much credence here that Gen. Wood even had a cable dispatch written asking the authorities at Washington for instructions as to the special honors they were desirous of paying to the remains of the distinguished statesman. But, before this message was sent, the Paris arrived, and everybody was pleased to hear that Mr. Sherman, instead of being dead, was improving in health.

A bulletin issued last night by Mr. Sherman's physician said the patient had considerably improved and was regaining strength.

Mrs. McCallum Gets Good News.

Washington, March 23.—Mrs. McCallum, daughter of Hon. John Sherman, received a cablegram from Mr. Wiberg, who is acompanying the former Secretary of State on his tour of the West Indies, announcing Mr. Sherman's continued improvement.

The Chicago probably arrived at Santiago last night, and if Mr. Sherman and his friends are still of the same mind it will take him aboard and bring him home. As to the landing place, it is said by Secretary Long that the commander of the Chicago, Capt. Cooper, will be guided entirely by the wishes of Mr. Sherman's family, and if it is desired that he be taken to some Florida port to avert danger from a too rapid climatic change, that course will be adopted.

If the Chicago leaves Santiago today, according to the present intention, she should reach Tampa, if that port is selected as a landing, by Sunday evening, probably taking the western route by way of Cape Antonio, to keep in smooth waters as far as possible.

Sherman's Recent Life.

Washington, March 23.—Before John Sherman started on the trip to Cuba and Porto Rico his friends in Washington thought it a rather dangerous tour for him to make on account of his health. While the ex-Secretary has not been ill, he has suffered a good deal this winter from colds and grip. He was very susceptible to sudden changes, and those who knew him best thought the excursion would be too much for him. But he still had a will of his own, and although his wife had not entirely recovered from the stroke of paralysis, she was well enough for him to leave, so he decided to go.

Some days before leaving Washington Mr. Sherman declared that he felt better than he had for many months, and that he looked forward with the greatest pleasure to his trip. Within the last six months he has shown more mental strength than for some time past. The work in the State Department as well as the Senate had worn upon him, and before his retirement from public life his friends noticed with great regret his failing memory. But a summer of rest seemed to have revived him mentally and he showed during the winter some of his old-time vigor. In fact, for the last few months he has been engaged upon a revision and expansion of his "Recollections" and he expected soon to publish another volume.

Mr. Sherman has led a very quiet life during the winter owing to the illness of his wife, but he has on several occasions been quoted in interviews which caused no end of talk and showed a good deal of feeling against the Administration. Many of these interviews were never intended for publication, but were printed by men who had talked with Mr. Sherman in a private way and had taken advantage of his hospitality. Ever since he retired from the State Department he has received newspaper men and talked with them freely. At these times he expressed opinions which he afterward said were not intended for publication. Mr. Sherman was especially interested in the case of Gen. Miles, for the latter had married his niece and the relationship naturally enlisted the ex-Secretary on the side of the commanding general. The anti Administration papers took advantage of this fact and interviewed Mr. Sherman whenever they wanted to start a fresh controversy.

I am an electric lineman and have been for the last eight years. About two years ago I commenced to be troubled with dizziness in my head so bad sometimes that when I went up a pole I was like to fall off. About four months ago I was told to try Ripans Tabules and took three or four every day for two months before I could say I felt cured. Now I can climb the very highest pole without being the least giddy. I always carry the Tabules with me, taking one or two a day to keep me in trim.

DUPONT PAWDER MILLS EXPLODE.

Three Killed, and Six Mortally Hurt and 100 Injured.

Penn's Grove, N. J., March 23.—Three men were killed outright, six were probably mortally injured and nearly a hundred more were cut and bruised in a series of terrific explosions at the Dupont Powder Works at Carney Point this afternoon. The dead are:

The Dead.

Ford, Charles; body blown to atoms, leaves widow and four children.

Layton, Issac; badly mangled; leave a widow and five children.

McGill, Frank; unmarried; head blown off.

The Injured.

Dupont, Francis, Sr.; one of the owners; badly cut on head, face and body. Dupont, Francis, Jr.; severe wounds on head and body. Facernier, William; head and face badly cut and severe internal injuries. Gentieur, Frederick; badly mangled. Munyon, Charles, E.; severe internal injuries. Shubrook, William; badly cut and internally injured.

There were four distinct explosions, and many buildings were wrecked. The first explosion occurred at 12.55 o'clock in the dry house, a building 15 by 14 feet. Fifteen yards distant was the composition house, which a second later was blown to pieces. The ice plant was next destroyed. Ford was killed in this building. The last explosion was in the rear of the cartridge buildings, many of which were torn to atoms. Among these were fifteen mixing houses, two composition houses, a dry house and one other small building.

n one of the structures in the row was stored four tons of smokeless powder. The building was completely wrecked, but the rows of filled boxes containing the explosives are standing intact. The sides and roof of the buildings were blown out.

The scene was a horrible one. A cyclone could not have caused greater havoc. There were nearly a hundred buildings, and all of these are wrecked in some way, some bespattered with blood from the employes either killed or wounded.

The explosion occurred while many were eating dinner, and the concussions were heavy enough to throw persons to the ground or throw them from their chairs. Windows and chimneys were shattered and tableware was knocked from closets in many homes. The first that was known of the dead was when a nephew of Layton was walking around the works. He discovered a part of a face and recognized it as his uncle's. Then he picked up about a bucket of flesh—an arm here and a foot there—and did not know whether these belonged to Layton or not.

CUSTOMS RECEIPTS FOR MARCH.

Estimated at $21,000,000 Some Comparisons With Previous Years.

Washington, March 23.—The amount of the customs receipts now being reported to the Treasury Department is occasioning much comment. The estimate of experienced officers for March is $21,000,000. This is always a large importing month, and on account of the blizzards and storms which have generally characterized the earlier months of this year, January and February trade was somewhat held back, in part accounting for the heavy returns now. But, more than that, these custom-house receipts are evidence that times are better, and that people are spending more money on luxuries. Imported goods are in the nature of a luxury, and hence the extreme fluctuations in importations, according to the condition of the times.

The returns for this month contrasted with the March of the three years preceding are significant. March, 1896, under the Wilson bill, showed a return from customs of $13,500,000. The following year when the Wilson tariff was still in force, and its returns were swelled by "anticipatory importations," the receipts were $23,000,000. Last March, with the Dingley bill in operation, but with returns diminished because of these anticipatory importations, the customs receipts were only $15,500,000, while this year the outlook is that they will reach $21,000,000.

Thus the four months of March in succession show respectively the Wilson bill short and long, and the Dingley bill short and long. It is not to be expected that customs will keep up at the present figures. If they did, the annual receipts would be from $50,000,000 to $70,000,000 more than had been anticipated by the framers of the present law.

The heavy receipts at all ports are paid almost wholly in gold, showing the abundance of that metal. The Treasury is loaded with gold coming in from customs, and if the expenditures had not been so high on account of the war with Spain the accumulation of gold in the Treasury would have been very great.

Mr. Leiter in Air-Power.

New York, March 23.—The London omnibus and four-wheeler, according to a statement made by Mr. Hoadley of the International Power Company, will soon be superseded by a system of automobiles. Joseph Leiter, Mr. Hoadley says, is about to sail for London to organize the "London Automobile Truck Company" with a capital stock of $25,000,000.

Mr. Hoadley also told to-day vaguely of several large contracts made by the company for air-cars and locomotives for use in this country and abroad, but gave no definite information. Mayor Quincy of Boston was here the other day, and contracted with the International Power Company for a number of auto-cabs for use by Boston city officials.

By one of the electric-cab companies it has been said that a post-road service to Albany may soon be started.

A Tailor-Shop at Yale.

New Haven, March 23.—Yale Divinity School students have hit upon a novel way for assistaing themselves in paying their expenses through the theological course. They have opened a tailoring establishment in one of the rooms in West Divinity Hall, and have sent out circulars, stating that owing to the fact that they have no rent to pay, they can make a suit of clothes from $5 to $10 more cheaply than ordinary tailoring houses. They state that they guarantee for one year all suits against rips, loose buttons, etc. It will be recalled that a number of Divinity School undergraduates started a printing press in their rooms recently.

BAD BEEF FROM ARMOUR

A Carload Decomposed and Was Rejected.

A BELL-BOY'S FAIRY TALE

The Chicago Youth Saw Meat Smoked by a Strange Man and a Sulphurous Smell—At Lakeland, Fla., After the Carload Was Rejected, Beef Was Bought in the Local Market.

Chicago, March 23.—The court of inquiry investigating the army beef charges examined Lieut. J. D. L. Hartman of the First Cavalry yesterday. He was Acting Regimental Quartermaster while the regiment was stationed at Lakeland, Fla. He testified that refrigerated beef was received from Armour & Co. It was brought to Lakeland in cars. At first it was very good, and there was no objection to it, but in three or four days it began to get poorer in quality. In two instances, a board of survey rejected the beef. In one case, the witness rejected a whole carload. The stench was observable before the car was opened. The beef was not received because decomposition had set in. The rejected beef was not accounted for in the vouchers. He had no recollection of any conversation between Sergeant Mason, his clerk, and the representative of Armour & Co. Mason had charge of the delivery of the meat to troops. The witness had no recollection of saying anything to him with reference to meat preservatives.

If he had said anything witness thought he would recollect it. He had no reason to believe or suspect that the beef had been treated with preservatives or chemicals. The spoiling was due, he thought, to the fact that the meat had been chilled, and would not hold up after exposure to the excessive heat at Lakeland. After the rejection of a carload the agent of Armour said that would not do, referring to the way in which the meat had been furnished. The agent triel to get the meat shipped in ice.

In some cases ice was put in with the beef, but this gave the meat a slimy repulsive appearance, and it was rejected. Witness then got authority to buy beef in the open market.

David A. Fleischman testified that he was employed as bell-boy at the Hotel Morrison, Chicago, during the month of June, 1898. "One day in June," he said, "a gentleman in room No. 131 asked me if I would be at leisure to go to the stock-yards with him. I went out there with him and had to carry two boxes, tin or galvanized-iron boxes. He went out to see some man about some meat, he told me. We took the boxes and went to a car where there were three or four rows of meat. In each of the boxes there were four smaller packages, containing, as I recall it, a black or rather a light-gray-colored substance. He put this into perforated trays made for that purpose, set fire to it and placed it under the meat. I asked him what that was done for, and he said it was done as an experiment to preserve the meat. Next day I was to go back and get the cans. I asked him whether it was to kill germs or anything like that, but he said no, simply to preserve the meat.

"I put my finger on the meat and tasted it, and it burned the end of my tongue. I called attention to the fact that the meat looked rather larger than when we were there before. He said that was simply an enlargement of the meat from the ice. There was a sulphurous smell in the car, and another odor, which I cannot describe. I took the cans to the hotel. I noticed in one end of the car there was a card marked 'Tampa, Fla.' This was at Armour's packing-house; there was only one car."

Changes on Lackawanna.

New York, March 23.—Mr. Truesdale was asked to-day whether he could confirm officially the statement that General Superintendent Reasoner was to retire soon. He said he could not do so, but information from other sources shows that Mr. Reasoner's retirement may be expected soon. He is 76 years of age, and has been in railway service since early manhood, serving with the Hudson River, the Long Island, the St. Paul, and, since 1869, the Lackawanna.

Mr. Reasoner will probably be succeeded by E. W. Russell, superintendent of the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg Railroad.

The only petitions received opposing the Sunday trains are those circulated by the Ministers' Union of Hoboken. The signatures are few in number. As against these the management has received many letters from people along the line commending the Sunday trains.

Jersey Soldiers' Troubles.

Jersey City, March 23.—There is likely to be trouble in the Fourth Regiment armory, Jersey City, when the 200 members of the Fourth Regiment, New Jersey National Guard, who now form part of the Fourth Regiment of New Jersey Volunteers at Camp Wetherell, Greenville, S. C., return home on April 8, after being mustered out.

A citizens' committee headed by Major Hoos is planning a reception, parade, and banquet for the 200 members of the Fourth when they return. The volunteers have already declared that they do not want the "stay-at-homes" to form part of the escort.

Klondike Mail Not Refused.

San Francisco, March 23.—The report from Skaguay that tons of mail are being lost or destroyed at that place, and that Canadian mail-carriers refuse to handle the letters unless they bear Canadian postage, is emphatically denied by Assistant Superintendent Lewis of the Railway Mail Service. He admits that a large amount of mail accumulated at Skaguay during the winter months, as it was impossible to get over the summit in February. Three carriers are already on their way to Tana, on the Yukon, by way of Skaguay, Dawson, Circle City, Forty Mile, and other camps. Mr. Lewis says that the Canadian postal authorities have never refused to afford every facility for the despatch of letters going through their territory.

CAUGHT FROM LACE CURTAIN.

The Origin of the Windsor Hotel Fire Fixed at Last.

New York, March 23.—Fire Marshal Peter Seery continued to-day his investigation into the Windsor Hotel horror. He is conducting the inquiry in secret and said that he would not make public any of the testimony adduced until he was ready to submit his official report.

He declared, however, that, from information so far gathered, it appeared that the fire originated on the second floor of the Forty-sixth street side of the building, where a curtain caught fire in a bay window.

John Foy, the waiter, who was on duty in the restaurant of the second floor of the hotel, where the fire started, was the first witness. Foy was closely questioned for two hours. He testified, among other matters, that he had seen one of the guests in the dining room fling a lighted match into a lace curtain and that the curtain immediately blazed up to the ceiling.

The Fire Marshal is making every effort to get before him all the survivors of the disaster in order that the inquiry may be conducted to the minutest detail.

It is not regarded as likely that any more of the bodies will be found in such a condition as to be identifiable except by articles near them.

The discovery of almost a bushel and a half of bones in the ruins is an indication of what the search from now on is going to reveal. The police and the officials of the Building Department agree that the chances are that not a dozen bodies that can be recognized as such will be found. Bones and other fragments, they say, will be dug up by the basketful, but whom they belong to will never be known.

The workmen have so far been working about the edge of the ruins. Toward the centre of the building the fire raged the fiercest, and the chances of finding whole bodies are accordingly less.

Of the seventh "body" found there were only four bones. They were apparently those of a child.

Of the 400 persons in the hotel as guests and employes and members of the Leland family, there are yet twenty-eight missing. In addition to these there are seven persons who are supposed to have been temporarily in the hotel, of whom nothing has been heard since the fire.

This brings the total list of missing up to thirty-five. These include the unidentified bodies found. There were 212 guests at the hotel.

ENGLISH GUNS BEATEN

Superiority of American Rifles and Smokeless Powder Demonstrated.

Washington, March 23.—It is announced at the Navy Department that as a result of a series of firings recently completed at the Indian Head Proving Grounds the new 40-calibre 6-inch naval gun of the United States is held to have no superior in its class afloat. A velocity of 3,000 feet per second is reported to have been obtained for the 100-pound shells fired by the new guns. Two weapons of this new 40-calibre type were mounted on the battleship Oregon just prior to the sailing of that ship from New York, in October last, for the Pacific.

The new 40-calibre guns were tested against the 50-calibre guns of English make, mounted on the purchased Armstrong-built cruiser New Orleans. The English rifles have a length of 300 inches, while the American guns are only 240 inches long. Two guns were taken from the New Orleans for the test, one a 6-inch, the other a 4.7-inch gun.

It is an interesting fact that the occasion for the ordering of the comparative test was the innocent comment of a British attache at the Navy Department to the effect "that while the naval gunnery work of the Americans during the war was certainly very fine, still it must be admitted that the United States did not possess guns as high-powered as those of England."

The Railway World.

Washington, March 23.—A conference between railroad magnates, representing thirty trunk line railroads west of Chicago, and the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission will be held in this city to-day to consider the freight rate situation. The officials who will attend are mostly the presidents of the roads, though a number of traffic managers and other officials have been invited. The conference will be an executive one, and the proceedings in a sense informal, though material results are expected from the gathering.

It is stated that the present rate situation is fairly satisfactory in the territory to be represented, which runs from Lake Michigan to St. Louis. An opinion as to how long this condition will continue, however, is not ventured by railroad officials, and the session looks mostly to guarding against future contingencies. What gives rise to the most serious apprehension is the lake navigation, the season for which opens in about a month and which makes tremendous inroads, especially on the grain and flour transportation, with a natural effect on the railroad tariffs.

Reed Not a Condidate

Boston, March 23.—A "Globe" interview with Hon. Ames L. Allen, secretary to Thomas B. Reed, at Alfred, Me., yesterday contains the statement that "Mr. Reed will never again be a candidate for the Presidency of the United States."

"It is Mr. Reed's disposition," says Mr. Allen, "to withdraw from politics entirely. As to his antagonism to the McKinley Administration, there is absolutely nothing in it. With regard to the war with Spain, Mr. Reed has been no more conservative than was President McKinley at the beginning. As to the present war in the Philippines, Mr. Reed is simply disgusted with it."

Porter to Succeed Alger.

Paris, March 23.—Gen. Horace Porter, the United States Ambassador, answering an inquiry of a corespondent of the Associated Press this afternoon, said he was unable to discuss the rumors to the effect that he may succeed Gen. Alger as Secretary of War, as all information on the subject, he pointed out, ought to come from Washington

Works and Pays Well.

No Law to Touch Trusts.

In these days of imprecations on the formation of trusts—and all that is said against the monster trade combinations is right and just in most instances—the opinion expressed by New Jersey's eminent citizen, the Hon. John W. Griggs, Attorney-General of the United States, with reference to the United States laws in dealing with these evils of public welfare, comes with particular timeliness and force.

Attorney-General Griggs' opinion was drawn out by a man who is extensively interested in New Jersey, and who fears for the kindly feeling that this little commonwealth shows towards the disreputable practice of forming trade combinations to control the output and prices of necessities of life. The law known as the Sherman Act, which was enacted by Congress several years ago, is supposed to be the means of crushing trusts if the Attorney-General applies it with the proper industry and force, but according to Mr. Griggs the law is of no earthly use in trying to stamp out the business that New Jersey is fostering. In reference to this Mr. Griggs says:

The Sherman Trust act does not give to the federal courts jurisdiction over any combination constituting a restraint and monopoly of trade unless such trade is known as interstate or international trade and commerce. A combination or trust for the purpose of maintaining a monopoly in the manufacture of a necessary of life is not within the scope of the Sherman act and cannot be suppressed by the federal courts. This was decided in 1894 in the case of the United States against the combination of sugar companies.

As a matter of fact all the companies which you refer to as now organizing for the purpose of securing complete or partial monopoly of different branches of manufacture, are similar to the sugar combination and are not within the jurisdiction of the federal courts. If amenable to any law they are amenable to the laws of the respective States.

It is a popular error to assert that the Attorney General of the United States has control of the corporations or combinations which engage in manufacture in the various States. This is entirely a matter of State control, and unless the functions of interstate commerce are interfered with I would be superofficious to attempt a crusade against affairs with which I have no business.

If what Mr. Griggs states is so, and he is a power unto himself in respect to the enforcement of the United States law, then it is up to the New Jersey Legislature. As plainly as words can intimate Mr. Griggs says that if the country is to be relieved of the oppression of trusts it must come from the Legislatures of the States that foster and protect such enterprises. As New Jersey is foremost in this class of commonwealths, and Mr. Griggs' opinion was drawn by a query that was prompted by the New Jersey situation, the Legislators ought to accept the statement of the Attorney-General as peculiarly applicable here and hasten to follow his suggestions.

But inasmuch as the Legislature hopes to adjourn within a very brief time it is not to be expected that New Jersey will be relieved of the odium that attaches to it as the "Cradle of Trusts," until the people elect a Legislature that will deal with such a issue as it deserves to be dealt with. And the day is not far distant when such an outcome will result.

There is a growing feeling in the borough that the proceedings of the meetings of the Board of Education ought to be open to the public the same as the sessions of the Borough Council or any other body which is acting for the taxpayers. In the course of a year the Board of Education expends a large amount of money which the taxpayers are required to furnish, and it is but consistent with honest and popular government that the meetings in which this business is transacted should be open to all who may desire to attend. If this plan had been in vogue during the past year the Board would have escaped much severe criticism because of the failure of borough citizens knowing what they had a right to know.

The school elections held in the smaller towns of the State on Tuesday were marked by almost a total absence of women voters, who are entitled to a vote in school affairs so far as the making of appropriations are concerned. They are also entitled to serve as school trustees, though not possessed of the right to vote on such a matter. Notwithstanding Mrs. Florence Howe Hall's proclamation describing the rights of women in school election and her urging that they exercises them, the fair voters failed to rally to the call and show the men that even within their circumscribed rights they could act intelligently in voting.

The Newark Advertiser says that Senator Ketcham's patriotic and economic idea of State benevolence to the New Jersey Volunteers in the late war has prevailed at Trenton. The volunteers are to get $4 and $6 per month for their time of service, according as they are single or married men, and they are to get nothing for their outlay, unnecessary in most instances, for clothing furnished in the field. Probably there will be medals to distribute, and these can be "hocked" for something.

The ministers of Hoboken have issued an edict calling upon the Lackawanna Railroad to stop running trains for fear of causing the desecration of the Sabbath in that city. The thought of Sunday trains helping to desecrate the Sabbath in Hoboken, whose residents go about their business and enjoyment of worldly pleasures the same on the first day of the week as they do on the other six, is somewhat satirical to anyone who knows the situation.

With a long and a strong pull the Legislature will have rid itself of necessary and unnecessary work at the end of this week.—New York Press.

In the political parlance of the day it will be only those who have that long and strong "pull" that will be able to get their bills through.

Ingersoll says Bryan is a back number and has no political future. Bryan says Ingersoll is not a competent authority to speak for his eligibility as the back number or for his political future, as Colonel Ingersoll does not believe in a future.

Jerry Simpson cautions Mr. Bryan that if he would be the next Presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket he should talk less. Perhaps the latter will retort that Mr. Simpson is making a very bad example of himself.

The farmers who have been pleading for a legal interest rate of five per cent. will have to wait another year or so.—Newark Advertiser.

And in the meantime they ought to remember who was responsible for the result.

The passage of Assemblyman Murray's bill providing for this city to raise a tax for the maintenance of paid call firemen, is a step forward in the right direction.

The average Jerseyman is looking forward to the summer season with delightful anticipations. The mosquitoes will make him forget about the trusts.

There is a truthful old saying that "advertising is the key to success." We are glad to see that the Board of Trade has become to realize its potency.

"Tod Sloan Outridden." And yet the noted jockey was on top.

Newton B. Smalley, the new Mayor of North Plainfield, has started out for economy and has begun by making a horizontal cut in salaries of all paid officials. The borough counsel, Senator Charles A. Reed, has his salary reduced to $350 from $500. Borough Clerk Bowley will get $500 in place of his predecessor's $700; the office of borough engineer and borough delinquent tax collector have been abolished, and the police have all been placed on a level, the chief being reduced to the ranks so far as pay is concerned, being simply distinguished by the title of chief.—Newark Advertiser.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The commutation ticket owned by a well known merchant was taken up on the Central a few days ago in the hands of the owner It appears that the owner loaned the ticket out and the person having it came to Plainfield on a train which runs to Dunellen and then makes a trip back to New York. On the return trip the owner of the ticket got on the train and the conductor happened to notice that he had seen the ticket in the hands of another person on his other trip. The ticket was taken up, but was later returned to the owner.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press)

New Market, March 23—The farmers complain bitterly of the roads throughout Piscataway township, and say that something ought to be done with them at once to make them passable. The Stelton road is in good condition, but that is the best road in the township.

Chronic Nasal Catarrh poisons every breath that is drawn into the lungs. There is procurable from any druggist the remedy for the cure of this trouble. A small quantity of Ely's Cream Balm placed into the nostrils spreads over an inflamed and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation, cleanses, heals and cures. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvet skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming woman of a run down invalid. Only 50 cents at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Westfield, March 23—During the fire on Dudley avenue Thursday evening Isaac Seeley, a member of Empire Engine Company, was sent inside of the burning building to cut away some woodwork. He was at work when he slipped and fell on some broken window glass. His left wrist was badly cut by the glass and he had to be attended by Dr. Fred A. Kinch, who dressed the wounds, which are painful but not dangerous.

In the annual report of James P. English, who retired as chief of the fire department last month, it was shown how badly more hose and more fire hydrants were needed. At the fire Tuesday evening the new chief, W. H. Chamberlain says that the hose would not reach within one hundred feet of the fire and that he had to send to the fire house for pieces with which to splice it. A few more fires doing the damage that was done at that time may wake the township committee up to the need of the town.

Monday evening there will be a public installation of the officers of Court Provident, No. 3130, I. O. F., in Masonic Hall. After the ceremony of installing the officers there will be an interesting entertainment given by out-of-town talent. The Epworth League orchestra expects to take an active part in the grand rally to be held in Plainfield on Friday evening. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the Methodist church, and a large number of Leaguers will attend the rally.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

The Funny Woman not a Success.

The funny woman, in spite of her brilliant conversational qualities, is rarely a social success. Unbridled wit and tact are inimical. The wag who is bursting with a mot will hardly ever repress it just to preserve harmony. Now, when one wants a dinner party to go off pleasantly and smoothly one does not feel safe in inviting a guest who may, in a moment of exuberant fun, create one of those "awful pauses" so dreaded in society, or innocently enrage some eminent personage by a telling "home shot." Genius for humor is like any other sort of genius—you must take it as you find it, and it is a very difficult thing to confine in a strait-jacket of conventionality.

The funny woman is not usually a winner in the game of hearts, though she may succeed in affording her men friends excellent entertainment. The ideal girl—that paragon of man's fancy—is not usually she who is prone to puns and who is likely to find a funny spot in the most sentimental situation. Men may admire quickness of wit in the abstract, but they are not so apt to fall in love with a girl who is always making "smart speeches." They are as disagreeably startled by sharp wit on the lips of a prtty girl as though they had found pepper in their ice cream.

Dear, funny woman, we would not laugh always, nor live perpetually in a shower of mental fireworks. Ever and again we pine to commune with the earnest, grave and jokeless friend with whom we may discuss some profound and solemn theme without being met by a fusilade of feeble puns and witticisms. We know you are very funny, but one's face aches with continual smiling, and an exclusively funny diet is about as sustaining as a ration of mere pepper and salt. Truly, there is a time to laugh, but it is not all the time.—Woman's Home Companion.

The Careless Woman.

The untidy woman is often thoughtless, and inconsiderate as well, and when this trinity of disagreeable traits is found in one woman, exclaims the New York Commercial Advertiser, woe betide the unfortunates who have to come in contact with her. Servants are driven to the verge of despair by the chaoslike state of her rooms and her unreasonable fault finding when the slightest thing is mislaid. Her scolding, of course, has little effect, for no amount of preaching on the merits and virtues of order and neatness could counterbalance the example she sets in her own person and actions of disorder and carelessness. An example of the cruelties which want of thought will sometimes entail was painfully illustrated the other day by a poor washerwoman, who was obliged to go to a hospital to have an operation performed on her hand and arm. In rubbing an article of clothing on the washboard, a needle, which had been left in the garment by some careless mender, ran into her thumb, broke off and was so deeply imbedded in the flesh that all efforts to dislodge it failed until a surgical operation was performed. The poor woman's arm and hand were swollen to twice their normal size, and she suffered exquisite pain. Of course, her work was left undone, and some of her customers, disappointed because of the non-arrival of their linen may give their work to some one else in the future. Worry, suffering and loss of income—and all because of the shiftless untidiness of some inconsiderate woman!

A Good Idea for Young Girls.

A New York paper tells of a class in education that has been formed by four young girls. They meet once a week and have an excellent teacher. Their object is to learn to talk and enunciate distinctly, to acquire the proper intonation of voice (which is an accomplishment very much needed by our American girls), to recite well, and also to act and use the proper gestures in both acting and speaking. They are learning plays in English, French and German, and act as well as recite them. Another excellent thing their teacher is making a point of is to instruct them thoroughly in the art of reading aloud. Comparatively few girls read aloud with intelligence, yet much pleasure is derived from listening to an interesting book when it is well read, and the art adds much enjoyment to the evenings at home or with friends who want quiet amusement. Besides this the charm of a cultivated voice needs no insisting upon. It is evident from the first moment of its existence, and equally evident when lacking. How many of our lovely girls lose their fascination when they speak! Moreover, elocution in these days means more than mere voice culture, and we have left the day of "yellocution" far behind us. Lessons in bearing, in ease, in bodily development, all that the French include in their comprehensive "maintien" is now a part of the elocution lesson.

Honeyed Baked Apples.

In baking apples, honey for sweetening is truly delicious. Wash the apples and core them, but do not peel; a bit of cinnamon may be put in the holes made by removal of the cores. Put the apples into a baking pan, with just enough water to cover the bottom of the pan. When the apples have baked for 20 minutes, add the honey and baste them frequently until done. For very sour apples use a half gill of honey to every six apples. Eaten hot or cold, with or without cream, they are good.—E. M. L.

FOR YOUTHS TO READ

IMMENSE INFLUENCE WIELDED BY ALL KINDS OF LITERATURE.

A Good Catholic Journal Is of Vast Value to Every Household — All Our Young People Should Read One. Some Advice For Parents.

A Catholic weekly is a great value in every Catholic family. There is no danger to family purity and goodness so great as a bad newspaper. A bad companion, a lewd, immoral visitor in a house, is an agent of hell, set to corrupt any good person or any good family. A bad book or a bad journal is even more dangerous. By a bad journal we do not mean thereby the dirty, sensational or low weeklies, but there are some gossipy daily papers that absorb into their columns the scandals of city and town.

The animal in our nature is never better discovered than when prurient and sensational reading is published and the same perused and devoured. "Show me the kind of company you keep and I will tell you what you are," is a saying as true as it is ancient, and in like manner we say to all who buy and read them, "Let us see the books in your house and we can tell what you are."

We know of families where the immoral visitor has been and is a welcome visitor every week, and if you were only to visit some of the homes where these filthy journals are read you would readily see the consequences. You will there find sottish and immoral parents and disobedient, immoral children. There you will find no order, no happinsss, no morality and no affection, but where all is gross and carnal and degrading. It could not be otherwise, for where immoral scenes are pictured, where scandals are rehearsed and welcomed, where sensational gossip is at a premium, the horror of hell begins to be a feature of that household and of all its members.

So, parents, be alive to the kind of literature you permit in your homes. Under no pretext allow yourself or your children to peruse one line of bad reading. "It is a consuming fire!" God will judge and damn the parents who fail in this duty. A Catholic journal is not a newspaper in the strict sense. It gives an idea of what is going on in Catholic circles. It is published to instruct, interest and amuse. Therefore every Catholic family should have at least one Catholic weekly, which can be placed in the hands of our young people with the assurance that they will be benefited by perusing its columns.

A Catholic weekly or magazine should be paid for promptly. We are instructed that we must pay our debts, as much so as our grocery bills, although there are some Catholics that do not recognize this fact.—Rev. T. H. Malone in Colorado Catholic.

THE SICK.

What Is to Be Done When the Priest Visits One Who Is Ill.

When a person is seriously ill, the priest should be notified without delay.

The following things should be prepared in the sick person's room: A small table furnished with a white cover, a crucifix, two candlesticks with lighted candles, a holy water vase, a glass of clean water and a tablespoon. If convenient, also, provide a tuft of cotton, a small piece of the soft part of bread and a slice of lemon.

If the priest has the blessed sacrament with him, all should rise from their seats and reverently kneel down to adore our Lord.

They should then leave the priest alone to hear the confession of the sick person, after which they return and remain kneeling in the room of the sick person while the holy viaticum, extreme unction and last blessing are being administered to the sick person.

Memorial of Cardinal Lavigerie.

A memorial to Cardinal Lavigerie, the famous apostle of northern Africa, has recently been unveiled in the cathedral of Carthage. The monument, which is the work of M. Crauck, who sculptured the fine statue of Admiral de Coligny for the Protestant church in the Rue de Rivoli, Paris, represents the cardinal recumbent on a block of Italian granite, with groups of priests, Arabs and negroes around. The presiding prelate at the ceremony was the academician, Cardinal Perraud, bishop of Autun.

Leo XIII on the Love of Jesus.

[The following is a translation of a Latin poem by his holiness Leo XIII to accompany a picture of the Sacred Heart which he gave to Giulio Sterbinio. The translation is by Rev. W. H. Kent.]

Behold the heart of Jesus, whence a wave
Of heaving water welleth night and day!
And he whose soul that limpid flood shall lave
Shall know his sordid stains are washed away.
